UK Conservatives Gain Net 64 Seats In Local Elections

London, May 10 (AP)— The Labor party lost some ground to Conservatives on the first day of week-long local elections, incomplete and unofficial returns showed today.

Figures from both the government party and the Conservative opposition pointed to a 420 loss for Labor in voting for urban and rural district council seats yesterday.

The Conservatives claimed a net gain of 64 council seats, with gains of 68 and scattered against five losses, in 352 urban and rural districts of England and Wales.

The Daily Herald (Labor) Labor gained 23 seats against a loss of 55, for a net loss of 42. Liberal gains were put at four, with eight losses; two Communist gains none, losses two; independents held Conservative support, gains 12, losses 10; Independents without Conservative support, gains 13, losses 26.

The Daily Herald (Labor) conceded a net loss of five Labor seats. It reported 24 Labor gains and 20 losses. The Labor losses prolonged a mid-Labor trend shown in recent London county council and Scottish Burgh council elections.

Voting is taking place this week in 1,467 urban, rural and Scottish councils. About 20,000 council seats are at stake.

The biggest test will come Thursday, when polling takes place for councilmen in 420 boroughs, including 28 in London. More than 4,000 seats will be filled that day.

Council Approves By-Law Naming Site to Construct 100 Low-Rental Houses in City

The former county home property south of Dundas Street as a site for Wartime Housing Monday evening in city council without another thought but approval of the project which would see 100 houses on the county home 20-acre area.

Two weeks ago after a lengthy discussion council voted the site as a location for Wartime Housing and had it not been for the lively discussion as there was a chance for an effort to locate the home on some other property.

The whole matter again came up for discussion when the by-law for the city to enter into an agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing to construct 100 houses on the county home property south of the highway, was tabled for passing.

Opposition to the housing project for that particular area sought by Alderman Lemmon from the clause referring to the location on which the homes would be built. He suggested that a strip of Churchill Heights and Parkwood Heights. A motion to have the clause deleted was turned down by council on a 7-6 vote. An alternative to have a by-law passed and was given its first reading.

However, as an alternative to the county home site, Mr. Lemmon strong pointed out that a 300-foot strip of property fronting on east side of Bell Boulevard in Churchill Heights reaching from Bridge Street to Pine Street could be used for the 20-acre area.

"CANADA'S OCEAN PLAYGROUND"

The Bureau of Information of the Government of Nova Scotia apparently is a firm believer in that famous quotation attributed to the great Chinese philosopher Confucius, who, it is said, once remarked, "A picture is worth a thousand words."

The truth of this terse statement is evidenced in the latest tourist booklet issued by the bureau. Pictorially it is a magnificent work of the photographer's art. Beautifully colored, it includes all the natural attractions of this seabordered province.

The rocky yet stern grandeur of its coastline with its quaint attractive fishing villages; its wooded hinterland silver-splashed with fish-teeming lakes; the old-world splendor of Halifax and other thriving urban centres; its foam-splashed sandy beaches and the many other colorful holiday attractions that alone belong to Nova Scotia are delightfully portrayed in color in the booklet.

Lovers of history will find interesting localities, old forts, and buildings that play.l an important part in the making of the Dominion. Pictured in the booklet are the inland and salt-water fishing grounds from whence come the giant tuna, the cod, and other famous ocean fish. The towering beauty of rugged hill ranges, the quiet yet beautiful drives inside the rock-bound coastline, the stately beauty of the "North-West Arm" are included in this handsome pictorial story of "Canada's Ocean Playground."

The terse, simple descriptive phrases accompanying the pictures are noticeably lacking in redundancy. In fact each picture tells its own story. There is no need for written facts, nor is there any exaggeration in what is written. It is not necessary.

It is a masterpiece of publicity literature, by far the best we have seen in many years. Nova Scotia should get more than her share of tourists this year through this outstanding effort of its Bureau of Information in putting the Province and its vacation attractions in a manner as convincing as it is beautiful, pictorially on paper.

COUNCIL OF EUROPE

An event of importance took place the other day, the signing of the Statute of the Council of Europe by ten nations and of an agreement concerning the establishment of a preparatory commission. The Council of Europe will be composed of a Committee of Ministers and the Consultative Assembly, the former having to do with the development of co-operation between the governments and the Assembly will provide the means through which the hopes and objects of the peoples of Europe may be formulated and expressed, since the governments are in touch with public opinion in the ten countries.

It is pointed out that there is here no mention of the national defence, this being excluded from the scope of the Council of Europe, but that there is no question of military alliance but rather as the statute says there is a desire to achieve peace and bring about a greater unity for safe-guarding and realising those ideals which are the common inheritance of the member states.

This is to be marked by the creation of great importance as it should be — the inaugural meeting of the Council of Europe which it is expected will take place in August in Strasbourg. What this event will signify in the history of Europe is likely to have profound significance.

It is encouraging to know that besides the ten states now concerned with the creation of Europe there are others, Greece and Turkey, seeking membership. It is expected that these two will be welcomed as members as soon as the Council comes into being. The possibility of other states desiring to accede to the Council membership is hoped for.

Friendly negotiations have led up to this event by the ten peoples, the principal countries in Europe, Denmark, France, The Irish Republic, Italy, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Something new and hopeful is seen in Berlin who received at the signing the other day that it is "the establishment of a common democratic institution in this ancient Continent. We fix our hopes upon it in the belief that the institutions we are setting up will serve the purpose of achieving greater unity among our nations and of realising the ideals we have in common."

The fact that Strasbourg on the historic soil of Alsace-Lorraine which has long suffered in Europe will be the scene of the ceremonies is full of meaning for it will be the centre of a new effort at reconciliation and unity.

To arrive at perfection, a man should have very sincere friends or inveterate enemies, because he would be made sensible of his good or ill conduct, either by the censures of the one or the admonitions of the other.—Diogenes.

Be a philosopher; but amid all your philosophy, be still a man.—Hume.

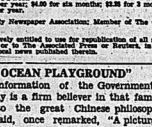
"ONLY TWENTY DOLLARS"

When the printed price I see,
Tell me, grammar scholars,
Is it proper this should be:
"Only twenty dollars"?



How does "only" strike me, then,
Pleasing or offensive?
If I can afford but ten,
Twenty seems expensive.

"Only twenty dollars!" What Reason so to board it.
Twenty dollars are a lot
Which I can't afford it.

Merchants, when but ten have I,
Thinking that is plenty,
There is nothing I can buy
Priced at "only twenty."

Members of Bridge Street Church were present at the Sunday School rooms of the church last evening to bid Mrs. Joseph Conger, who will leave here shortly to reside in Ottawa. Mr. Jas. O'Flynn. An enjoyable programme was provided and refreshments were served.

The 15th. Regiment A.I.I. will attend the morning service at St. Thomas' Church next Sunday.

Mr. Walter Newton, of Toronto, an old Belleville boy, is spending a few days in town.

A correspondent asks us, "How did Pinnacle Street get its name?" We have always understood that the name was derived from the fact that in the early days the hill upon which Bellevue Terrace stands extended nearer to the street and the "pinnacle" of the thoroughfare. However, the correspondent says that the street was named after Pinnacle Street Church, Gerhow. Some of the older residents can enlighten us on this matter.

50 YEARS AGO

May 10 th., 1879

Yesterday afternoon the fine barns belonging to Lieut. Ct. W. N. Ponton, were destroyed by the pride of their owner. They were completely destroyed by fire. A small blaze, which had been kindled for the purpose of burning some rubbish were attacking fmll trees, in some way spread to the drive house and thence with incredible rapidity to the barns, sheds and house. The bore at the D. & D. Institute saw the fire and hastened to the scene with their hose and did yeoman service. To their efforts, in no small way, is due the salvation of the house. The city fire brigade was on the scene and had two streams of water playing upon the fire, but in spite of all their efforts none of the buildings were saved. The house was damaged considerably by water. In the large newly-erected barn two horses and a number of fowl were cremated also a number of farm implements.

Strength for the Day

THEY COULDN'T STAND GOOD FORTUNE

When Queen Elizabeth came to the throne of England, she found many people held in prison awaiting execution. They were to be burned at the stake, largely because of their religious beliefs. These persons Queen Elizabeth freed. But the astounding thing was that many of them, who undoubtedly would have experienced freedom with courage, quickly leaped into spiritual inferiority if the danger was removed. They would have kissed the fagots and embraced the executioners if the prosecutors had had their way with them. But when persecution was lifted, the spiritual life of these intended victims grew cold and died.

One of the disconcerting realities of life is that people could have better under the goad of suffering than they can under the blandishments of good fortune. Necessity is a hard teacher but for most people a very successful teacher. We may not like what we have to do, but disagreeable as our daily tasks are they no doubt have their chief value in educational value which we are reluctant to admit. If we could really have our own way and do whatever we wanted to do when we were ready to do it, we should probably not find ourselves happier of better in any respect.

The trouble was reported to have arisen from Arab resentment against the surrender by the Jordan of part of the more than 100-square mile triangular tract to Israel.

The Nablus triangle is an area in north central Palestine with the town of Nablus, Tulkarm and Jenin, its principal towns.

The Syrian government said in a communique Monday night the government of Iraq has reaffirmed that it will abut off Iraqi oil from Haifa, Israel, and thereby military support to the Syrians if fighting resumes between Syria and Israel. The Syrians and Israelis still are attempting to negotiate an armistice agreement.

Arab Civilians Clash With Legion In Nablus Area

Damascus, May 10 (AP)—Rioting Arab civilians clashed with Trans-Jordan Arab Legion forces in the Nablus triangle of Palestine, it was reported today in a dispatch from Amman, capital of Jordan.

The dispatch, from Amman, said 80 of the civilians were wounded reverely in the fighting, and that more trouble was feared.

MEN CONFIDENT

Willing to Carry on

Following a meeting here Monday night, Jean Marchand, C. C. L. secretary, said the 1,500 workers idle in Asbestos reaffirmed their determination to carry on the strike.

Marchand announced he was making a complete report on the action of provincial police established in Asbestos to open up road blocks set by the strikers who sought to keep strike-breakers from entering the town.

The disturbances that occurred between strikers and police on the scene before and after the arrival of police reinforcements resulted in injuries to more than 23 and reading of the Canadian riot act to the town's population. Provisions of the act, which banned the assembly of more than two persons, was lifted Sunday.

Arraignment of 51 of 200 strikers arrested, on charges of unlawful assembly, was made in Sherbrooke, Que., yesterday. Bail was set at $300 cash or $800 bond and preliminary hearings were arranged in groups for May 31, June 7 and June 14.

Not Given Legal Advice

The charges grew out of disturbances at Asbestos, Que. last week when strikers clashed with police.

All those arraigned were brought to Sherbrooke from the Montreal where they had been taken because of crowded conditions in the Sherbrooke jail.

Jean Drapeau, Montreal lawyer, said he had made repeated unsuccessful attempts to see the men in Montreal Saturday and Sunday. He said after trying to make arrangements through provincial police officials he called the Attorney-General's Department in Quebec and was told the Department could not intervene.

He said when he tried again in Montreal Monday he found that the men were already in Sherbrooke and he was unable to see them before arraignments.

"Such treatment is denial of the rights of citizens," said Mr. Drapeau.

"It is a fundamental principle of law that a man is agreed he allowed to communicate with his lawyer."

He asked that the charges be dismissed and said the accused men were given no legal advice. Such procedure was contrary to law.

Had Only to Say So

Crown Attorney Roland Dugre said if Mr. Drapeau had not been allowed to see the men it was because they had definitely declared their lawyer was Carrier Forin of Sherbrooke.

"Liberty exists in Canada as elsewhere for everyone," said Mr. Dugre, "and if the men had wanted Mr. Drapeau as their lawyer they had only to say so."

Mr. Forin then told the court that Mr. Drapeau was acting jointly with him and had been delegated to see the prisoners in Montreal.

At Mr. Drapeau's request a 10-minute adjournment was allowed for him to talk to the men.

The courthouse was crowded with provincial officers, only those allowed in the courtroom were court officials, lawyers, close relatives of the prisoners and representatives of the press.

All persons, including those from the local newspapers, were required to show identification cards.

TWO OCCUPANTS WOUNDED

Belgrade, May 10 — (Reuters) — Two persons were killed and shot up a Yugoslav motorboat carrying a lieutenant and three soldiers taking part in a sporting contest on Lake Scutari near the frontier, it was reported here today. Two occupants were wounded.

The Albanians were alleged to have fired on the boat with rifles and machine guns from the land. Gendarmerie reinforcements were alerted, it to have towed it away.

Albanians were also alleged to have fired on a soldier who had jumped out of the boat and tried to swim ashore.

Mackenzie's Column: New Constitution Gives Germany Great Freedom

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Western Germany's new republican constitution—modelled on the British and United States systems of government—is one of the most remarkable documents of the kind ever drafted.

This constitution provides (on paper, at least) the freatest degree of democracy the country ever has known.

Even more striking is the fact that Germany — twice in the last decade of world wars within a generation —not only outlaws aggressive war but provides for the transfer of the Reich's proud sovereignty to a United States of Germany.

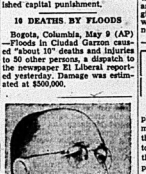
What a transformation! There are still those who are shocked about the "old liners" who hark back to the days of Kaiser Wilhelm II the "all highest" who fathered the First World War, pursuant to his policy of imperial expansion. The Kaiser was an autocrat who believed that he ruled by divine right.

The old Kaiser was the epitome of Prussianism.

Then came the First World War which resulted in the abdication of the Kaiser. The Weimar republic tried to inaugurate democracy, only to be overtaken by the Hitlerian regime, which represented one of the most terrible dictatorships of all time.

Now we get the chief revulsion to all this in the new constitution. German politicial leaders claim it is the most progressive in existence.

Well, they are going to have their chance to prove that claim.



The constitution, of course, will not apply to the three zones of western Germany at the outset. But it has been drawn so as to include Soviet controlled eastern Germany as soon as United action can be achieved.

The framers of the constitution have nailed down their rights by prescribing penalties for abuse of decisions who "by force or threat of force" change the constitution or deprive the legal bodies of their legal powers. Strange as it may seem, the most severe penalty is life imprisonment.

The new Germany has abolished capital punishment.

COLD BATHS A NO RESISTANCE

One of the many funny notions cherished by Yankee Wiseacres is that cool or cold baths somehow increase resistance to the common respiratory infections (C-R-I for short), or that the nostrums they saw and your favorite ethical quacks call "colds."

For the sake of clearness let me say that the common respiratory infections are pneumonia, bronchitis, laryngitis, pharyngitis, tonsillitis, rhinitis (coryza), sinusitis, otitis media (earache) and inflammation within the ear drum), mastoiditis, influenza, whooping cough, smallpox and chickenpox in most cases, epidemic meningitis (cerebrospinal fever), as a rule, and infantile paralysis in a good many cases. Of course you can't specify which of these common respiratory infections cool baths, warm clothes, dry feet, absence of drafts and nourishing food (what food isn't?) help you to stave off, but what children you take the dope sold you by the nostrum monger and wear the fool collar, wear your overshoes and blindly trust to luck, insufficient to see you through bad weather.

To most of you old timers it may be a shock to learn that you can't see it that way. To my peculiar sense of humor it seems too much for my risibilities to listen to an old geezer croaking about the care he takes to avoid exposure — meaning cold, wet, drafts, fear, insufficient warm clothing, sudden changes and all that sort of twaddle—and then, at twenty-five cents for booklet. Cigarette Smoker.

Childbirth Without Fear

You recommended a book "Childbirth Without Fear." Can't find it. Since we have no bookstore in our town please tell me where I can obtain it.—Mrs. Clay.

Answer—I believe the book, by Dr. Grantly Dick Read, is published by Harpers, New York City, but some one has pinched my copy and I can't find it now. Every expectant mother should read the book. Perhaps you can get it at the public library—don't tell me there is none in your town.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE URGE WITHIN

In the reading of people who have been successful in life, often is stated that environment had much to do with it, or indeed the influence of other strong minds, or the opportunity that presents, but I believe that it is the urge within that has more than anything else that spurs one to a successful and happy life.

Well, they are going to have their chance to prove that claim. The constitution, of course, will not apply to the three zones of western Germany at the outset. But it has been drawn so as to include Soviet controlled eastern Germany as soon as United action can be achieved.

The framers of the constitution have nailed down their rights by prescribing penalties for abuse of decisions who "by force or threat of force" change the constitution or deprive the legal bodies of their legal powers. Strange as it may seem, the most severe penalty is life imprisonment.

The new Germany has abolished capital punishment.

Bogota, Columbia, May 9 (AP) —Floods in Ciudad Garzon caused the deaths of 10 persons and injured to 50 other persons, a dispatch to the newspaper El Liberal reported yesterday. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

CHARGES POLICE ARE "FANATICS"

Rev. Louis Phillipe Camirand, Catholic Priest of Asbestos, Que., has blamed provincial police for fomenting battles with Johns-Manville Company strikers. He accuses the police of inciting strikers unnecessarily and of deserting his church. The police and the company are being more fanatic than was ever known in the history of this province," he said,

I can advise no one to be a success, but I can point out what The urge within has to settle such a move. I once wrote a brief piece about Luther Burbank and Admiral Peary in the discovery of the North Pole, which questioned its value, but I wrote that Peary had to discover it—that it must have been done before, "for the pure joy of doing it." Burbank and Peary saw that article in the Detroit News, clipped it, and in a letter to me wrote, "You have hit the nail squarely on the head."

Kenneth Roberts, whose fine historical novels have given great assets to American literature, has recently written a book, which he calls "I Wanted to Write." In it he emphasizes no easy road to success, but the urge of a living, thorny path, but it was that urge to write that has so perfected his style and left a trail of books both of novels in reviews in the fibre of his being."

There you have it. It is the urge within. God-given or born within one at birth, that elevates and inspires us to do things that give us the most satisfaction and which lead more surely to greatness.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

There is only one possible explanation of the sounds being made by popular singers: and that is that they are trying to imitate the saxophone with the sounds made by the saxophone, cornet, trombone, trumpet and the clarinet.

Not content with the normal human voice, and possibly egged on by their leaders who are more interested in saxophones than voices, these popular singers are exploring the human larynx for bloopy, moaning sounds; and the nearer they come to a saxophone, the more popular they appear to be.

You know how a cornet player has certain notes that he really can play. For the most part, he just blows and hits. But whenever he comes to that one note that he has in his head that he really tears it off. The same with saxophone players: they have a couple of pet notes that come out especially sweet and low. And every time they can hold them as long as the beat allows, and every time they can raise than was ever known in the same thing. They have one or two notes that they are good at; and the more those sound like the cry of a lost soul, or the goblat of a cornet, the better they like them and the harder they push them at the radio or on the victrola. By any standards of true singing, the purely corny singers and very mediocre athletes in most sorts of sports, you have to be good at more than one or two notes.

Who is it makes these two-note performers popular? Surely the public itself isn't being easily gyped. Of course, it may be part of the natural trend towards the machine and technology. The public may be the hunt for a machine to do what formerly has been done by hand. Maybe in fifty years we shall have a machine to do what formerly has been done by hand. Maybe in fifty years we shall have a machine to do what formerly has been done by hand. If it doesn't sound like a brass instrument, it's out.

Sees Start Made Anglo-Canadian Trade Expansion

London, May 10 (CP) — The Daily Telegraph today says the new Anglo-Canadian trade agreements suggest the British government has "at last awakened from its insensitiveness" to a major problem in commonwealth relations.

The Conservative newspaper says the announcement yesterday that Britain will purchase up to 400,000 cases of tinned salmon from Canada in 1949, as well as more timber, flour and fruit pulp "shows at least a start in the expansion of Anglo-Canadian trade."

Reviewing recent deals under which Britain has promised to buy fish and timber from Russia and to sell products such as tinplate to eastern Europe, the Telegraph says:

"The history of the Soviet trade pact confirms us that we could greatly have increased our exchange of products with Canada if the British government had thought it more important to maintain trade with our friendly and generous benefactors than to create trade with the least grateful and most unfriendly of all nations."

The paper urges Harold Wilson, President of the Board of Trade, to "do his best to wipe out the memories of his Moscow negotiations by a really courageous readiness to seek new trade in Ottawa."

Wilson leaves today for a six-week, coast-to-coast tour of Canada.

Burglars Damage, Fail to Crack Safe in Theatre

Brantford, May 10 (CP)—Burglars durlng the night were unsuccessful in their attempt to crack the safe at the Capitol Theatre here. The vault was entered by means of a key and the safe was badly damaged.

Tools found in an office desk were used to pry off the bottom of the safe and smash the combination dial, police said.

The theft was discovered by Vern Lockwood, janitor, when he arrived for work early today. Many doors throughout the large theatre were found ajar. The thieves found only locks to the candy bar, several offices, and a closet where cleaning equipment was stored back of the vault.

No estimate of money contained in the safe has yet been released.

27 Crew Members Canadian Vessel Sentenced in N.Z.

Wellington, N.Z., May 10 (Reuters)—A Wellington magistrate today sentenced 27 of the crew of the Canadian freighter Tridale to four weeks in jail for continuing to disobey the lawful command of the master.

Counsel for the men gave notice of appeal. Bail was allowed pending its hearing.

The appeal was based on the form of order given to take the ship to sea. The defence contended that in the absence of customs clearance, it was not competent for the ship to clear port.

Twenty-six of the Tridale's crew were fined 14-days' pay at Wellington April 27 for disobeying the captain's command to sail the ship from her berth in Wellington.

The current London Conference began in February, but it has been stalemated.

Probe Derailment Of CPR Train Near Wetaskiwin

Wetaskiwin, Alta., May 10 (CP) — A general inquiry into cause of derailment of a Canadian Pacific Railway Company passenger train near here yesterday — an accident that claimed three lives — is scheduled to get under way today.

Meanwhile, wrecking crews are still engaged in the task of clearing the line near Gwynne, Alta., where the locomotive jumped the tracks, dragging a steel express car, a refrigerator car and a day coach off the tracks bringing death to the engineer and fireman. A brakeman later died in hospital here.

Four other persons were injured in the wreck, which occurred on a curve six miles from ly behind time, was on a regular recover.

The toll of dead and injured probably would have been heavier but for the fact that a day coach, a diner and two sleeping cars remained on the track. None of the 40 passengers in the stopping cars were injured.

The train, reported to be slightly behind time, was on a regular nightly run from Edmonton to Winnipeg.

Although some 300 feet of track have to be replaced, it is believed that service will be restored by noon. Inquest into the deaths of the three men also is expected to open today.

New Names in the NORTH

THERE'S new activity in Ontario's bushland north of Lake Superior. Marathon and Red Rock, Terrace and Heron Bay: they all tell the same story. New towns have arisen, old ones expanded. Only five years ago on the site of Marathon, for example, there was nothing but bush; today a new community beside a new pulp mill is contributing millions to Canada's export trade.

Such spectacular developments in the north are matched by continuing industrial expansion in the older established communities. Throughout Canada today ever-widening avenues of opportunity await the enterprise of young Canadians.

With newsprint production 50% above pre-war levels, Canada today has an output five times that of any other country, and accounts for three out of every five newspaper pages in the world.

"Canada is a land of opportunity..."

There is a field for almost anything one can think of, and anyone with a willingness for hard work has a good chance to achieve success", says Donald J. Smith, President of Hornet Industries Limited, Guelph, Ontario.

Hornet Industries Limited, which was founded in 1945, has in this short time achieved remarkable success in the manufacture of chain saws and combustion engines. More than half the production of the plant reaches markets outside Canada. From a staff of only a half dozen men in 1945, Hornet Industries Limited has expanded to three plants in Guelph, employing 296 workers.

ST. JOHN'S W.M.S.

Tweed.—The May meeting of St. John's United Church Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday, the President, Mrs. Lincoln Elliott, presiding. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. C. Kerr took the minutes. Twenty-six members were present.

The meeting opened by singing a Ukrainian melody, used during the Women's Missionary Society's Conference held in Smiths Falls, which Mrs. Elliott attended.

A playlet "New Comers to Canada" was given by Mrs. Speer, Mrs. T. C. Graham, Mrs. Len Taylor, Mrs. J. Brennan, Mrs. Douglas Kelley and Mrs. W. McKaw.

They are real people with real problems giving a vision of what can be done in the future to give them the true sense of Canadian citizenship by neighborly approach in each community. Mrs. Keller sang "I Gave My Life For Thee" and Mrs. Barnett closed the meeting.

Leslie Bell Singers Delight Large Audience at Bridge St.

Bridge Street Church was filled to capacity Sunday evening by a host of music lovers who gathered there to hear one of Canada's outstanding choral groups, the Bell Singers under the direction of Dr. Leslie Bell, their distinguished founder and conductor. Organized ten years ago as an alumnae girls' chorus, this fine ensemble have won for themselves an admirable reputation as one of the finest "a capella" groups on the North American Continent.

Win Plaudits

Wherever they have performed, either in personal appearances or over the air, they have won outstanding plaudits for their smooth ensemble singing, made up of 40 charming young women, each the possessor of a beautiful vocal talent combined with an overall coordination of unity in approach and pureness of individual style that blends into the whole picture of the various numbers sung a fitting whole. Moreover, the excellent arrangements used in their programs are the work of Dr. Bell, are noteworthy in possessing a discriminating taste mixed with refined craftsmanship resulting in euphonious sounds that please. Listener, being devoid of that lushness and saccharine sweetness that many choral groups are wont to feature in their arrangements. This, in itself, is one of the great attributes of this excellent singing group.

Part one of the program was ushered in by the Bell Singers' sensitive rendering of the "Sanctus" from the "Missa Papae Marcelli" of the early Italian ecclesiastical composer Palestrina. Debussy's familiar piano morsel "Clair de Lune" evoked an ethereal atmosphere discreetly blended to perfection, this being followed by the forceful yet walling strains of the old Hebrew lament "Eli Eli". The lovely "Lullaby" of Brahms intermingled with the dramatic excerpts from the popular "A Jolly Miller", a most difficult arrangement by Dr. Bell, cleverly floated forth over an enthrallingly hushed audience. Negro spirituals, the melodious "Deep River" and the rhythmic "Rocka Ma Soul" both were given a most convincing choral treatment.

Folk Songs Given

Part two was made up of folk songs from various national idioms. The exuberant Irish ditty, "Follow Me Down to Cloelow", the Scottish tune, "Bonnie Dundee", the stirring old French song, and the comical Newfoundland fishing song "Ee Gee Thai Builds the Boat", were all performed with the utmost of emotion feeling equally as much mood depicted by the lyrics.

Two Russian Canadian songs, "A la Claire Fontaine" a softly poignant melody contrasting the vivacious "Ah, Si Mon Moine Voulait Danser!", each sung with equal moving eloquence. "Lollytoodum", a humorous creation from the Kentucky Hills was loudly applauded for its comical vocalization, after which the group's recital was brought to a close with Dr. Bell's merry medley of beloved Nursery Rhymes devotedly delineated by his highly gifted choir. The audience refused to here with a vociferous applause, as these old folk-lore brought back childhood memories to many.

Many Requests Given

The final group of the evening was made up of more or less requests on the part of the thousands of radio fans who enjoy the weekly broadcasts given by this expertly trained choral body of young singers. Various selections from Gilbert and Sullivan's popular opera "The Mikado" were enlwined into a Choral Rhapsody sung with decided verve and vigor this being followed by a mellow interpretation of the "Ave Maria" of Bach-Gounod, another favorite of all who like good melodious music. An unusual effect was produced in the "Echo Song" by the early Italian Di' Lasso that kept the audience guessing as from where the reSaltory echo was emanating. Only three voices were used in this echo throwback to the entire choir, but it had a misleading effect, in that it sounded like many more voices were utilized. "Dry Bones" a type of Negro Spiritual by Gerhardt, using the diatonic scale up and down to depict its story was accompanied by all sorts of 'guess what' musical instruments by some of the singers, producing a very descriptive, background to this enthusiastically received number.

Highlights from Richard 'Rodger's "Oklahoma" in a most colorful tonal mass of rhythm and harmony formed the scheduled program to its close. Two encores were graciously given by the choir, first a tuneful little Tyrolian folk-song followed by the Negro Spiritual "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray", another vocal intonation from the Old Log Church performed with perfection.

These sensitive changes by the choir added greatly to the enjoyment of the audience, both as to eye as well as ear. Bridge Street United Church Choir, the sponsors of this concert, are to be complimented on their fine choice in having this group of female singers that all Canada should be well proud of.

A reception was held in the Sunday School Rooms for the Bell Singers following their well received program.

Running races, relays, ballthrowing, and jumping with such special events as cartwheel races, roll-call race, bean and knife contests featured the program.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Husband Has Been Convicted of a Crime

A young wife of 19 who has been married only about seven months writes me about a terrible shock she had recently which has precipitated an immediate crisis in her marriage. That crisis has confronted her with the necessity of choosing whether she will stick to a husband who has been convicted of a crime and sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years, but whom she says she loves dearly and does not wish to give up, or break with her family, who want nothing more to do with her unless she divorces her husband.

The problem is complicated by the fact that she is pregnant and without any means of support. Her family are willing to help her but only on their own terms. Her husband's people, she says, "are wonderful about this whole affair. I know for certain that they would be only too glad to pay the expense for having the baby, only at the present time they are in hard luck.

"Should I give up my husband and seek help from my people, or should I try and stick it out with his people? We get along fine, but the financial problems have me so worried."

Now the difficulty here that makes it impossible to advise this girl intelligently is that her letter gi- es no hint of the nature of the c..me for which her husband was sentenced. She devotes only two sentences of her entire letter to the matter which is the key to the whole problem. All she says is:

"My husband was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years. He was convicted for something that I sincerely know was more or less a frame-up."

This girl says that her marriage, up to the time the tragedy occurred, had been completely happy. She and her husband had a nicely furnished home of their own. Everything seemed to be going well.

What I would like to know, however, is, first, the nature of the trouble he got into and, second, the reasons for her belief that his conviction was "more or less a frameup." Without knowing these two things it is would not be possible to tell whether she would be wise or foolish to continue her marriage.

Under ordinary circumstances, of course, a wife who loves her husband should stand by him through any sort of trouble. But if his record is one to indicate he might commit other crimes, and possibly involve or endanger her in some way, then it is not so certain that she should stay with him.

Before she makes her decision, my advice would be that she carefully investigate the whole matter and find out exactly where her husband stands in it. Whatever the circumstances may be, there is certainly something wrong in a situation where a husband's involvement with the law comes to his wife as a complete surprise. If she has been left in ignorance in one respect, how does she know there are not other important things of which she has been left ignorant?

She certainly should make no decision in a hurry, as she should think that she might well cast in her lot with her husband's people while she is making things over. I think it would be a good idea, too, if she would go to some welfare agency and see if she can get practical advice and help on her financial problems. If she would care to write me again and give me a name and address to which I may send a letter, I will be glad to tell her where she can go for this kind of advice.

A' Difficult Skin Condition

Removal of old make-up is important to keep your skin in a healthy condition, says Norma Star Janis Carter who likes to use a liquid make-up remover.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Correcting enlarged pores is one of the toughest jobs tackled by the facial operator. It means changing the texture of the skin that has got that way through neglect, by failing to remove powder at bedtime, or by the use of soaps that were not sufficiently bland. In some cases the diet may have had something to do with the coarse-grained condition. All beauticians insist upon a fat-free diet during the best period in which the treatments are given.

The use of hot water is forbidden, as it is relaxing. Use water just warm enough to fluff up a lather when washing the face, never fail to rinse all the soap away with warm water. After which one should dip a large wash cloth in ice cold water, press close to the flesh. Immediately following the drying an astringent should be applied with pledgets of cotton. Witch hazel will serve for this purpose.

Complexion packs are helpful. Here is an excellent one: If blackheads are present it will have a favorable effect upon them:

Get some kaolin from your druggist. This is refined, sterilized Fuller's earth. Mix with witch hazel until the mass is the consistency of whipped cream. Apply to a clean skin surface. Let it remain on until it flakes. Give this treatment once a week.

Any beauty treatment, even a simple cleansing treatment is best carried out at bed time, thereby giving the skin an opportunity, while the other tissues and cells of the body, to rest and recuperate during hours of sleep.

When coarse pores are present, it is best to use oily cosmetics sparingly, as the pores of the skin is rough and it is necessary to apply a little cream, don't let it remain on for any length of time.

Keep in mind the matter of the diet, cutting down of butter, pastries, cream and fried foods.

Fashion Flashes

HOT COLORS are beginning to appear in new millinery. A bonnet-type hat of natural Milan straw is trimmed with huge bows of taffeta in a vibrant, burnt-orange color.

THE BIG FAVORITE in almost all price brackets is the combination made up of print dress and wool jacket. Silk crepe printed in a black button design on a cocoa-brown background is worn with a fitted jacket of black woolen with six rows of twin buttons covered in the black button design of the print. Jacket is lined with the dress print and has deep cuffs of the print finished with a tiny frill.

A SLIGHT CHANGE from the strapless bodice is noted, now that almost every collection shows one or more evening models with deep bodice and narrowest of shoestring shoulder straps. This type of shoulder strap in satin is used for an evening dress composed of a very full, frothy skirt of black net and a snug, very deep-necked bodice of black satin studded with tiny rhinestones.

Pantry Shower Different From Kitchen Shower

Dear Mrs. Beekman,

Our group (small income girls) wants to give a shower for a dancing friend we're all devoted to, but because we each want to give her a wedding present too, the shower seems just must be inexpensive ones. We would like to know the difference between a Pantry Shower and a Kitchen Shower ... some of us think they are the same thing. If they are different, which would be the more inexpensive one?

— Mims.

These showers are different ... and each gives a wide opportunity for practical and very inexpensive presents. For example, suitable presents for the Pantry Shower—cans of fruit juices, canned fruits, vegetables, soups; canned meats and sandwich spread; baking powder; all kinds of mixes (biscuit, pancake, muffin, gingerbread, cake, and so forth); sugar (granulated, loaf, powdered, brown); rice, cereals; tea, coffee, chocolate, cocoa; packaged desserts; herbs, spices, or other seasonings; macaroni, spaghetti, noodles; preserves, jams, jellies.

For a Kitchen Shower, here are some suggestions for inexpensive and always-welcome presents—potholders, mop, type of kitchen brush; pairing knife; nutcracker; rotary beater; cooking fork or spoon; cookie sheet; saucepan of any size; cake pans, muffin tins; tray; egg beater; mixing bowl; measuring spoon; measuring cup, measuring spoons; paper napkin holder; can opener; pastry cutter; rolling pin; strainer; pancake turner; food grater refrigerator dishes; set of plastic bowl covers.

It's Customary to Divide Hours for Tea Assistants

Dear Mrs. Beekman,

A friend in whose home is giving a large and (I take it from the type of invitations sent) formal tea in honor of a newcomer is coming to address our state organization and then is to stay on for a visit here with the hostess for a few days. The tea is from four to seven o'clock, the hostess has asked me to "pour" from "five to six only," on her. This confuses me, because heretofore when I have been invited to pour, it has been for the duration of the party. Can you explain this division of the hours? (2) Also, at this type of very formal tea, should I take it for granted that I am to wear my hat, or should I ask the hostess about this?

— S. L.

Yes, I am delighted to explain this, for it is the tea-or-reception procedure I always recommend and which today is the custom. Every plan—that is, having refinguity hostesses to preside over the tea-table (one for the tea-service, one for the coffee-service, if there is to be this alternative) for only one hour or two hours. This means that either before or after their presiding, the hostesses are free to circulate, mingling with the guests, chatting with the rest of the group when there is one, joining friends and being introduced to guests they don't know. It also gives the hostess the pleasant opportunity to expand the number of gracious gestures she can make to her close friends ... in this case, she can have her tea to sit, instead of to two. (2) If I were you, I would take it for granted that I should wear my hat ... but if you have any doubt, by all means ask your hostess. It is customary for all the guests, including the "pourers", to wear hats at an afternoon tea.

Correct to Place Knife at Right of Plate

Dear Mrs. Beekman,

When I give a luncheon more or less informal, and when, for the menu I have planned, there is no need for a knife, is it correct to place the fork at the right of the plate, the spoon at the left?

To have a really correct setting, you should set your table with a knife at the right of the plate (even though it may not be needed) and the fork at the left. This makes a proper design and frame for a place setting, a balance of the right side, left side.

WE GLOW WITH pride as we admire the exquisite lingerie designed and made here, and offered at prices that take it out of the "luxury" bracket. Dora Gottlieb does a beautiful nightgown with a stole that can be worn over the head, draped over the shoulders in bed-jacket version, or with one end drawn through the lace trimmed, capelet effect shoulder bands of the gown. It is fashioned of "multi-filament crepe that is wonderfully soft and packs easily. Three tiers of Val lace form the high Empire bodice. A dust-ruffle hem billows out below a narrow lace insertion. The stole is of crepe and lace to match.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Personality Can Be Cultivated

No one need be told that a charming personality is stronger force for gaining friends and getting places than mere prettiness. You see it in the lighting of the eyes, in a smile, in the pose of the head.

To cultivate a delightful personality costs nothing at all. You don't need money to get it, or expensive clothes. What you do need is tolerance, intelligence and a warm, responsive nature. If you haven't these qualities, you can create them. You can rise from the ranks of the commonplace if you will be honest with yourself.

Let us put a charming woman's character under the microscope of observation and note her system.

Her attitude toward her family, her friends, her work and life in general is enthusiastic. She is a Woman Alive. You'll never find her in the dumps for even if she is depressed, she will carry on, realizing that it is unfair business to kill the good spirits of those with whom she comes in contact. She radiates cheer. Others find her encouraging. She makes it a point to be helpful and sympathetic.

Her conversation is not made up of sentences that start with I. She does not brag about her smart children or dwell upon the shortcomings of her husband, nor does she describe her new wardrobe down to the slightest detail. She knows that these subjects will bore any listener. So she talks about what others are doing, your many interests. And you think she is a swell girl all right. Never do you tell you the story and details of a movie she has just seen.

She is never critical, even in the slightest way, nor is she looking for faults. Her slogan is "Peace of Mind." You can't help but feel at ease in this little girl with people or argue with them. She knows you can't change others, and when you have a shoulder yourself smarter anyway, or she can change them. She may be on the wrong side of the fence yourself.

She makes it a part of her life's business to read good books. She has developed a definite philosophy, has definite aims in life. She does not act on sudden impulses, but gives herself time to think things over.

Most important of all, she minds her own business, does not offer advice. She is sympathetic and helpful, but never, as helpful as to be meddlesome. Some of our most enthusiastic helpers are just meddlers at heart, wanting to boss the lives of others.

Natural colored diagonal weave tweed is the material used for the topper while tan twin tabs that close the front below the narrow collar and revers.

"NERVES" She Called It

Losing husband—losing friends—she never went out and never—always tired. "Nerves," she thought—but it was her kidneys. Symptoms of her kidney trouble that made almost anyone think of Doan's Kidney Pills at once. The hurried action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, backache, headache, lack of energy disappeared. Doan's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly on the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 144

General Election Campaign Opens On Two Fronts

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

The campaign for Canada's June 27 general election, now seven weeks away, opened Monday night with curtain-raiser speeches delivered by the two major party leaders—Prime Minister St. Laurent and George Drew, Progressive Conservative chieftain. Neither contained the expected pre-election fireworks.

Mr. St. Laurent spoke from Ottawa, just a few hours before he left on a swing through the Maritime Provinces, and in a broadcast address championed the record of his Liberal administration and stressed that he was seeking a personal mandate from the people.

Mr. Drew, already in the Maritimes, is expected to deliver his main blasts against the government, and possibly his election issue views, in a broadcast tonight from Sydney, N.S.

Mr. St. Laurent, from Ottawa, called for a mandate to "continue to work for peace and security, for trade and prosperity, for full employment an' social security, for complete recognition of Canadian nationhood and the development of all aspects of national life."

He did not believe that Canadians wanted "Socialism, not even those I have described as Liberals-in-a-hurry." Nor did he believe they wanted a return to "reactionary torpitude."

Liberals were prepared to use the power of the state to help give all the people "greater equality of opportunity and to protect the public from exploitation by selfish interests."

Mr. Drew recalled that the Progressive Conservative platform pledged higher income tax exemptions and allowances and said the party had one program for all 10 provinces and stood for old-age pensions at the age of 65 without a means test.

He denied suggestion that a Progressive Conservative government would weaken family allowances legislation and said the party, in fact, advocated not only the continuation of allowances but the elimination of discrepancies.

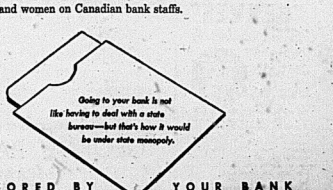
Oil in the driving gears



BANK CREDIT oils the driving gears of production, industry and commerce. It helps to produce the goods and provide the services and jobs which mark the Canadian way of life.

"Money in the bank" is the foundation of credit. You and some seven million other depositors have nearly seven billion dollars in the chartered banks.

To pay for work done, goods produced, bought and sold, Canadians issue—every month—upwards of six billion dollars in cheques.

Cashing these cheques, making loans, discounting notes—in many different ways your bank keeps money and credit moving through all the channels of trade and opportunity . . . like oil in the machinery.

This whole vast, private, competitive, efficient process is made possible by your "money in the bank"—and by the experience and skill and integrity of the men and women on Canadian bank staffs.

STIRLING

Auditor's Report Adopted by Village Council

Stirling—The village finances are in good financial position according to Mr. F. A. R. McFadden auditor who at the regular meeting of council held Monday afternoon. The auditor discussed the different departments, incl. (1) general account, schools, waterworks, theatre and and made four recommendations to council.

(1) Increase public liability insurance on streets.

(2) Place a surety bond on the manager and secretary of the Hydro Electric Commission covering duties in collection of water rates, theatre admissions, etc.

(3) Increase insurance on community building.

(4) Use duplicate tax receipt forms.

Auditor's Report Adopted

The report was adopted on motion of councillors Elliott and Holt.

The matter of securing new seats for the local theatre was discussed and after considering prices available, the clerk was instructed to advertise tenders for new seats, in the Daily Commercial News.

The discussion of an application for relief was left in abeyance until the local Relief Committee reported. Clerk Mallory was appointed as relief administrator.

A report from the Ontario Department of Planning and Development for the naming of an industrial commissioner resulted in councillor W. T. Elliott being appointed to the position.

A request of a guard on the village water pump on their premises was referred to the property committee for action.

Communications Tabled

Communications were also tabled from the Workmen's Compensation Board and the Department of Highways re collection of fines.

A letter from the Stirling Branch No. 288 of the Canadian Legion drew the attention of council to the unsatisfactory condition of several of the wartime houses and asked a complete and thorough investigation be taken.

Councillor James Holt stated Front Street W. had been surveyed and costs estimated for the lowering of this portion of street and submitted to the Department of Highways. No word had been heard from the department and the clerk was instructed to write the Hon. Mr. Doucett, Minister of Highways inquiring as to what action is to be taken on lowering this street which is a part of provincial highway.

Must Have Mobile Pumper

It was pointed out that it was necessary to have a mobile pumper for the local fire brigade to qualify for the government grants towards fire department expenses and the property committee was instructed to make enquiries on prices and types of pumpers and report at the next council meeting.

The matter of Stirling going into the Centre Hastings High School Area was again discussed and on motion of councillors Bradshaw and Holt, the reeve and clerk were authorized to sign the application for admission into the Centre Hastings High School Area.

The matter of securing a site for the new public school was also discussed and on motion of councillors Bradshaw and Holt, Reeve Wells and councillor W. T. Elliott were appointed to act in conjunction with two members of the Board of Education (Messrs. C. I. Hatton and R. E. Fox) in choosing three sites and obtaining options on the same.

The unsatisfactory condition of the village dump caused by dumping of refuse along the roadway leading to the dump was next discussed and council will pay a visit to the scene before taking definite action.

The need of a public parking lot was emphasized by Reeve Wells and after a somewhat lengthy discussion it was decided to purchase the corner of Emily and Church streets for a parking lot and that $200 be spent in fill for the same.

A REAL BIG ONE

CANNY SCOTS

Isle of Lewis, Scotland — (CP) —Faced with a £2,000 ($11,600) estimate for laying water pipes to Grimshadar School, education authorities decided it would be cheaper to move the school. "It would be cheaper to take the school to the loch than the loch to the school," said an official.

In spite of staggering loss, new stores are being built and the merchants are determined to get back into business. At the same time, the town wants a community hall as an attraction to summer tourists.

Reconstruction of Fort Ste. Marie, which will be the centre of this summer's tercentenary of the Jesuit Martyrs in Huronia, is proceeding slowly but surely. Bastions of the old fort have been rebuilt, and inner works laid out as they were in 1649.

N.Y. Giants Combine Good Pitching With Stout Hitting In Seven-Game Winning Streak

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One swallow doesn't make a spring and one week doesn't make a season, but during the last seven days Leo Durocher's New York Giants have been as near-perfect as a baseball club can be.

The team is the one the experts predicted would wind up an also-ran because the pitchers would give away more runs than the hitters could manufacture.

Including last night's handy 7-2 triumph over Chicago Cubs, the Giants have won their last seven starts to take a 1½-game lead in the National League.

During that stretch, Giant pitchers have gone the route in all but one game. In that one, Sheldon Jones, who went all the way last night, was removed for a pinch-hitter after allowing only one earned run in eight innings.

The club has used a four-man rotating system on the mound throughout the season — Clint Hartung, Larry Jansen, Monte Kennedy and Jones. No other pitcher has started a game. This big four has allowed only 14 runs in the last seven games. In short, the hurling has been phenomenal.

Braves in Second Place

Vern Bickford last night pitched Boston Braves into second place, 1½ games behind the Giants, with a three-hit, 4-1 triumph over Pittsburgh. The sophomore right-hander struck out six, walked the last 15 batters in succession.

The Braves got eight of their 10 hits and three runs off loser Murry Dickson. Marv Rickert and Jimmy Russell paced Boston's attack with three and two hits, respectively.

In an afternoon afair, St. Louis Cardinals snapped a three-game losing streak by thrashing Brooklyn Dodgers 14-5, to move out of the league cellar. The loss dropped the Dodgers into third place, half a game behind the

Brakes

A pair of rookies—Eddie Kazak and Tommy Glaviano—sparked the Redbirds' 15-hit attack against the Dodger hurlers.

New York Yankees, leader of the American League, who have been surging through the west in old championship style received a surprising setback by the Tigers in Detroit. Young Ted Gray limited the Bronx bombers to five hits to outpitch Vic Raschi. It was the second straight victory for Gray and the first defeat for the Yankee ace, who won his first four starts.

All other teams in the American League enjoyed a day off. The scheduled night game in the National League between Cincinnati and the Phils in Philadelphia was postponed by rain.

Montreal Royals And Brandon Ready for Tilt

Brandon, Man., May 10 (CP)—Montreal Royals and Brandon Wheat Kings, rivals for the Memorial Cup, came as close together as football terms as they ever will for the season Monday night when both teams attended a banquet staged in their honor.

However, the two teams will be back battling each other again here tonight in the sixth game of their best - of - seven Dominion junior hockey final before another sell - out crowd of approximately 5,000.

It will be do-or-die for Wheat Kings, down three games to one, with one contest tied. Royals need only a tie to clinch the title.

At Monday night's banquet, Mayor Frank Williamson of Brandon extended greetings to Royals and Wheat Kings when he crashed into the boards.

The Mayor, to quit, it will leave a gap in the Royal forward lines which Coach Tag Millar says, have "just begun to click".

The rest of the squad left in good shape except for minor bruises. Underdogs at the start by 8-5 of the series, they are picked as the majority of bettors to end the series tonight.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

The upright swing is, mechanically, the best swing. Practically all successfully well-qualified to use an upright swing but at the same time it is almost being over the top of his right shoulder, are in the best position. His left arm should be held high and over the point of his right shoulder. The right shoulder should be up and left down. In this position his straight left arm would be pointing at the ball. Then he'd be swinging correctly in a nearly perpendicular plane that will deliver the best flight. With a perpendicular swing there is less likelihood of either hooking or slicing because the clubhead can travel along the direction line for a greater distance. Only the player limited the flat swing short and wants to use a flat swing in order to use a hook or slice and therefor get more distance, or the very heavy man with a body big in the centre, should use the flat swing.

HELP FROM JUNIOR TEAM

Toronto, May 10 (CP)— Mimico Mountaineers, Ontario Lacrosse Association senior finalists last season plan injection of youth to the squad in a bid to garner the Mann Cup and Dominion championship this season.

Mimico, which Coloured the distinguished fallire) for the past two years. I wish you would convey to all gentlemen who were a part of the tournament the thanks of our Cobourg team. We enjoyed ourselves to the hilt and were squarely treated all the way by a fine bunch of fellows. We hope to return again not only in hockey but in softball, football and other sports.

"But first bring on this softball squad and lets have this challenge accepted as soon as possible. We really don't care who we trim."

Harry Thibeault informs us the tickets for the bus conveying fans to the Softball Tournament in Peterborough, May 24 are now available at Ed. Thomas' Store and at Juby's Canteen, Point Anne. The tab is $3.50 return; and there are only 20 available here and 15 in Point Anne. The bus leaves the City Hall at 8 a.m. on the holiday.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Tall, erect, grey-thatched A. G. Kelly, member of the city council of Brockville, chairman of the Community Memorial Committee sponsoring the Brockville senior hockey club entry in the Central Ontario Baseball League, represented that team and city at the COBL executive meeting here on Sunday.

Kelly, with other Brockville and Smiths Falls representatives were among strangers, but in a few short minutes the eastern representatives had won the admiration of the COBL reps by their straightforward manner in presenting suggestions; their attitude in discussion and their general co-operation in what all present deemed was for the success of the league as a whole. It was one of the most constructive baseball meetings, or any other kind of sports conclave we have attended in many years. It seemed that all were for and over was for all. There were somewhat lengthy discussions—but no argument. The meeting was singularly devoid of verbal hatchets and there was a decided give-and-take attitude on the part of all concerned.

But back to Mr. Kelly. His experience as a city councillor and baseball umpire has stood him in good stead as a speaker. He has a straightforward way of talking, as do all umpires, and he was open to suggestions, and ready to suggest. He told the meeting that he intended to do a bit of officiating this year "for free, just to help the boys along." And he should be quite a lad to have behind the scene as the latter for he has had experience in the International, Border, New England, Canadian American pro leagues as well as a number of amateur leagues.

But what interested the Belleville faction most was the fact that Kelly represented the Community Memorial Committee of Brockville which is sponsoring the BROCKVILLE BASEBALL TEAM. "Baseball has lost a lot of its former prestige and spot among sports both in Brockville and Smiths Falls," he said, "and we feel that the COBL is the ideal set-up, committee that is, are trying to see what can be done to bring the game back to its former standing with the fans. That is why we are interested in entering the COBL."

Kelly almost gasped when he was told that this fair city of Belleville would not be represented in baseball circles by a senior or intermediate team. "What's wrong with you people here?" he asked.

That question is one which a lot of people would like answered. Belleville, former bethed of baseball in the good old days, has not produced a team of any real worth during the past few years, is once more allowing the grass to wave over the baseball diamonds at the sports centre as senior and intermediate baseball is concerned. The Kiwanis Club is keeping the flame burning in junior ranks—and that's about all. Nowhere, it seems, in this city is a city said to be "busting at the seams with expansion" with a population which is growing by leaps and bounds in the city, is there a senior baseball team entered in the District League, but that has nothing to do with the situation insofar as city representation in OBA circles is concerned.

Business men formerly interested in sport, and others were lackadaisical when approached on the subject of sponsorship. Others were unapproachable. Still others threw their hands full operating their own particular line of athletics. Private individuals looked across the street when the subject was mentioned.

Brockville, a city of some 13,000 souls and Smiths Falls, yet smaller, will have outstanding senior baseball teams in the COBL this year. And there's no reason why we can't see American legion on the centers of both clubs. Which is perfectly legal, so we are told as long as certain regulations are observed. The Brockville City Council through its Community Memorial Committee is taking care of its baseball team. It's time something along similar lines was done here.

The trouble with our fair village is that it has too many sports "experts" whose mouths are always open and whose purses are forever closed, as far as contributing to sport is concerned. If each one could be conscripted to surrender over a cock-eyed criticism of the work being done by those doing an honest effort to promote sport and further it, the critic could be fined a buck, we could sponsor a half-dozen baseball teams.

The "ancient" diamond enemies, Oshawa, Peterborough, Kingston are recruiting, equipped and are ready to once again take up the battle cry in the COBL. We, thanks to a lackadaisical citizenry, plus, are forced to sit by the sidelines and watch "others" reap the supply for the entertainment. We're off with the leitiue. Ha & and state of affairs—one that could and should be remedied.

THANKS PAL"

This from Ed Haynes, of Cobourg, who wants to arrange a series of softball games with the Belleville Nationals:

"If for nothing else than a renewal of the fine friendships formed between the two clubs during the series last year we would like to arrange some softball games with Belleville. Having mentioned this it reminds me of our pleasant associations during the hockey season in the Belleville and District Hockey League which Cobourg won (after a

Toronto, May 10 (CP)— Price of admission to most sporting events gives the fan the right to boo(?), hiss(?), jeer, etc., but not (Niagara Falls Review) Gaynon, it doesn't include the right to hurl personal insults at players.

Bill, referring to the exoneration of Lou (Bulldog) Diminico, allegedly cuffed a loud-mouthed fan says: If (Durocher) experience before Commissioner Chandler did nothing else, it may have the effect of improving living conditions for fandom in general, and players in particular at all major league parks.

"The Commissioner took a rap at owners, by claiming that something would have to be done to eliminate flannel-mouthed spectators 'from hurling insults at players,' and all owners would be wise to adopt the Chandler advice immediately."

"Experts" Make Bad Start

Those "experts" who make wild predictions early in the season are back again. Even the one who predicted Montreal would draw the largest opening day crowd of the northern cities in the International League didn't have long to wait to find out how wrong they were.

Jack Sheppard (Oshawa Times-Gazette) Campbell writes: "Before the opening day the experts put down Montreal as the place to expect the largest crowd and then they listed the crowds expected until they got right down to the bottom near Toronto with a calculated 16,000.

"Things were just the reverse, however, with fans from Toronto and district turning out in numbers never before attained in the history of the club. The final official count—23,203—topped all previous openers in the circuit."

Did It For Carfare

Some of the better players and sportsmen in the public eye are bound to pick up odd and sometimes significant nicknames.

Alan (Trenton Evening Courier) Rose, writing about an English jockey, Bill (last race) Cook says:

"Cook, the favorite jockey in England, got the nickname by the thoughtful of many bettors wagered on his mount in the last race to get carfare home."

Athletics Make Poor Showing In the West

Chicago, May 10 (AP)— Connie Mack is worried—in the face of his Philadelphia Athletics' poor showing in their first swing west in the American League's schedule.

A pitcher with a sore arm and a rookie hurler he almost shuffled off to Buffalo produced the only victories of the tour, against four defeats.

His two Canadian pitchers, Dick Fowler of Toronto and Phil Marchildon of Penetanguishene, are ailing, Fowler with bursitis and Phil with a sore shoulder.

Another sore-armed hurler, Bill McCahan, produced one of the victories on the tour. Fowler gave a relief stint but McCahan who hadn't been able to get anybody out for two seasons because of his arm, got credit for the decision over Chicago White Sox 23.

The other triumph came when Bobby Shantz, optioned to Buffalo 24 hours earlier and then recalled got a victory over Detroit Tigers with a brilliant relief effort of nine innings—three at bat or a run.

The only regular pitchers the A's can really count on at the moment are Joe Coleman and Lou Brissie. Carl Scheib, the other regular, hasn't been doing well all season.

Intercollegiate Sports Hailed As Necessary

London, Ont., May 10 (CP)— Intercollegiate sports were hailed Monday as one of the most necessary phases in a university or collegiate career, by Vic Obeck, director of athletics of McGill University here Monday.

He said that competitive sports at school was one of the factors that determined a boys character in later life.

"There are many values received in competitive activities which cannot be learned in the classroom," he said, "especially stressing competitive sports." A sense of self-sacrifice and co-operation are necessary and a man must learned to subimate himself for the team.

May be Last Windjammer Race Of Seven Seas, Two Ships Sail From S. Australia to Britain

By A. A. DAVIS

Adelaide, Australia, May 10—(AP)—Two tall sailing ships are embarking on what may be the last windjammer race of the seven seas.

Sailing non-stop from Port Victoria near Adelaide to Falmouth, England, the 'round the world Horn may take 90 or 100 days. More likely, the ships, the Pamir and the Passat, both Finnish, will need 120 to 130 days.

The Pamir and the Passat are the sole survivors of the annual grain race from South Australian waters to Britain.

It is not long ago that as many as 70 sailing ships—barques, brigs and square-riggers—came up to the big land-locked bay of Port Victoria on Spencer Gulf on the southern coast of Australia.

Their numbers fell, but just before the Second World War there was a revival.

The fastest and most graceful of them all was the Hertzogin Cecille, but her bones now lie in the English Channel.

Only a few of these good looking sailing ships now remain in service. Last year there were only four in the grain race. This year there are but two.

The Passat and Pamir are both four-masted barques. The 2,700-ton Pamir carries 40,000 bags of wheat. The 4,000-ton Passat has a 56,000-bag cargo.

Neither ship is a flier. The 43-year-old Pamir, built at Hamburg for the nitrate trade, is the bluff bows of a transport. Even the gales of the roaring '40s will not drive her over 10 or 12 knots.

Their time to Falmouth is unlikely to be anywhere near the Hertzogin Cecille's fastest of 86 days. Last year the best time was 120 days.

Their crews—about 30 to each ship—have little of the old sheilback flavor. Mostly they are youngsters seeking adventure who come from all parts of the world but chiefly from the Baltic and New Zealand.

Many Imports Will be Used By St. Thomas

This is the fourth in a preseason series on prospects of the Senior Intercounty Baseball clubs. Today's story is about St. Thomas Vets, next: Waterloo Tigers.

By NELSON D. (WHIT) WHITMORE
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

St. Thomas, May 10 (CP)—St. Thomas Branch No. 41 of the Canadian Legion which fostered an intermediate "A" team in the Intercounty Baseball Association for the first years, winning two titles, has taken over the senior franchise here. It hasn't been operated for some 15 years.

In fact ... ... senior ball to the high plane enjoyed back in the 1930s will stay. The Legion baseball executive—headed by Jim Burgess as president, Al Kington as vice-president, and Goldie Whitfield, convener—has gone far afield for diamond talent to cope with the strong opposing teams in the powerful eight-club circuit.

The state of Pennsylvania could either break or make the St. Thomas Vets as Philadelphia and scouting are to provide the American players with which the Legion hopes to maintain a fairly commendable place in the league race.

Frank Slack, pitcher, and Jack Mockrick, catcher, former House of David outfielders, have come here from Philadelphia. Ray McCracken, centre fielder, who was with Hamilton in the Provincial League last year is also a newcomer. He hails from Philadelphia, too. College and high school players rated high across the border will come from Reading on June 22 and be available for play three days later, according to league regulations. Two well-known western Ontario baseball players will form another battery for the Legion, Elmer Cook, Negro pitcher and infielder, and Red Brewer, catcher, boil of Dresden.

Some Local Players

Among local players likely to be carried on the team are: Trout Caldwell, infielder; Bob Berry, first base; Jack Garton, Bill Fishleigh and Bob Storms, pitchers; Pete Parker, infielder; Les Cliborn, outfielder.

Another local player received from Reading May 23 are Max Miss Bach, jr., third baseman; Bernie Little, second baseman; Jim Maschert, shortstop; Sylvester Comparelli, catcher; Walter Winter, catcher, and Franklin Price, pitcher.

The general belief among the officials and rallibirds is that St. Thomas has a team that will improve steadily as the season advances. St. Thomas, like other rival senior teams, will play 21 home games in the league schedule but will start off with an exhibition game on May 7 against Buffalo Counties going to Waterloo May 14 for their first league contest. Stratford is here May 15 and other exhibition games are booked with Kokomo Citewa May 20; House of David June 8, and Zulu Jungle Giants June 13.

In conjunction with the revival of senior ball, a great number of improvements have been carried out in Pinafore Park and it is expected that floodlights for night play will come within a year, or two. A new radio-press box has been erected on the roof of the huge concrete grandstand and new bleachers have been erected along both first and third base lines.

About 20 years ago Galt Terriers and St. Thomas Tomcats and Saints broke all amateur baseball attendance records with crowds exceeding 5,000 for important

Letters to the Sports Editor

"WHAT ABOUT THE BOYS?

Sports Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:

"With the opening of the diamond sport" many thoughts goes to the youngsters of the local community, the future baseball players and stars of tomorrow.

I am a boy who believes in giving credit where it is due, and these youngsters are deserving of much praise. For it was through their efforts that baseball was brought back to Belleville.

"Back in 1944 a group of boys got together and chose two teams and so inaugurated the diamond sport once again in Belleville. The two teams were composed of such ball players as Allan Kelleher, Bob Bland, Bob Sunley, Earl Bush, George Reeves, Russell Soule, Bob Strachan, Bob Dall, Mike Hogan, Harry Wardaugh. That year there was instituted the public playing exhibition games with Latta, Alexandria and Trenton.

"Don't you think it would be wise and just to get behind some younger generation and help them in their sports activities by having a few more bantam, midget and juvenile clubs in our beautiful but unpatronized city!

"An Old Gentleman".

Skyscraper Talun Meets O'Connor Here Fri. Night

Dangerous Dan O'Connor the wildest Irishman in the province of Kansas City returns to the Belleville mat wars next Friday night. O'Connor and the mat fans here last season with his unorthodox ring tactics to such an extent that on several occasions he had to have police protection in leaving the ring and building. But on Friday even the obstreperous O'Connor says his match for his opponent will be the immense Wladyslaw (Gus) Talun of Poland. Talun is a ... ... scraper-ish giant towering some six feet eight inches and weighing over three hundred pounds and there isn't an ounce of fat on the mighty frame.

The O'Connor-Talun bout will headline a card that comes close to nearing the all-star rating. In the semi-final Jimmy (Pal) Flanagan who has won a long series of hard matches this year will step up to tangle with another mat giant Sky-Hi Lee of Kansas. Flanagan has amazing speed and is rated as one of the cleverest of the heavyweights but he may be giving away too much weight to Sky-Hi Lee's giant.

In the opening bout Irish Tom Collins who is also a speedy demon meets Ben Morzan the Tennessee blacksmith, in lining up the card Manager Walt Gerow seems to be living up to his promise at the first of the season that he intends to bring in the world's greatest grapplers for the fans here to howl, or cheer over, as the case may be.

Toronto, May 10 (CP)—No reply was received last night by the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association concerning a request to the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association that they rescind the new rule denying trainers with only one horse a license. The H.B.P.A. demanded a reply by midnight.

Rocky Graziano Given His Card For Illinois

(By The Canadian Press)

The Illinois State Athletic Commission at Chicago Monday cleared the way for the return of Rocky Graziano, ex-middleweight champion, to the boxing by cancelling a rule barring fighters dishonorably discharged from service.

Graziano last Friday was reinstated in New York after being suspended in that state for failure to report an alleged bribe offer two years ago.

The first disqualification of the Toronto racing season came in the fourth race at Dufferin Park here Monday.

Wrakfair, ridden by Eddie O'Sullivan came in first in the photo but the stewards at the track ruled that the horse had interfered with the second running horse Pies Pat, twice during the race. By the stewards decision, Pies Pat was awarded first place and Wrakfair was dropped to the second position. Jockey O'Sullivan was fined $50 and suspended for five days.

At Chicago, officials of South Shore Hospital said physicians Monday night amputated above the knee the right leg of baseball player Charles Koney. The 22-year-old second baseman for Louisville Colonels of the American Association suffered a shattered right leg, fractured left leg and a broken nose when a hot-water tank exploded in the basement of his home Saturday night.

At New York, Mort Cooper, veteran right hander, was released Monday by Cincinnati Reds. Cooper formerly pitched with St. Louis Cardinals, Boston Braves and New York Giants. He was trying for a comeback with the Cubs after being shelved with a sore arm.

At St. Louis, the United States Table Tennis Association Monday announced the suspension for one year of three New York City players on charges of bad conduct. Elmer F. Cinnaster, president of the Association, identified the three as Richard Miles, 23, United States National champion, Martin Reisman, 19, English and Canadian champion, and Douglas Cartland, 33, ranked fourth in the United States.

At Toronto, heavyweight Earl Walls of Toronto Monday night knocked out Bill McCarty of New Bedford, Mass., at 1:50 of the first round of a scheduled eight round bout in the main event of a professional boxing card here. Walls weighed 190 pounds McCarty 182.

At Vienna, Yugoslavia became the first country to enter the third round of the European Davis Cup of competition Monday. Yugoslavia's doubles players, Nikola Branovic and Dragutin Mitic swept the last two tennis matches of the series against Austria to win a 4-1 margin.

Cleveland Indians Monday announced they have claimed Hector Wrazidlo from Washington Senators. The Indians sent Hatch to Washington on waivers 10 days ago. No reason was given for the re-acquisition of Hatch who hit .308 for Portland in the Pacific Coast League last year.

Tight Pennant Race Being Staged In International

(By The Canadian Press)

The National League has nothing on the International when it comes to tight pennant races. This one promises to be a humdinger.

Nearly three weeks of the baseball campaign have gone and no team has shown any marked superiority over the others.

Buffalo leads today, but is ... ... only three games ahead of ... 300. Newark, in last place, is only 3 1-2 games behind the Bisons.

Should Buffalo lose to Jersey City tonight and Rochester wins, the Bisons could drop into fourth place overnight.

Rochester climbed to within half a game of the Bisons Monday night, coming from behind to defeat Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

Eddie Blake, who pitched two innings of runless relief ball after succeeding starter Johnny Yuhas, was credited with his first victory of the season against two losses. Johnny Muldowea was the loser.

In the only other scheduled game, Syracuse nosed out Toronto Maple Leafs 9-7, to oust the losers from fifth place. The Chiefs took an early 7-0 lead, but the Leafs came up with a six run eighth inning to pull within one run of a tie. They much scored once in the ninth. Joe Perkowski was the winner. Nick Strincevich suffered his fourth straight defeat.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, May 10 — (AP)— Tommy Deckard, Texas track coach, is plugging Wisconsin's Don Bowden as "the greatest middle distance runner this country has produced." ... Deckard, he's bragging his own Drake relays where Gehrmann ran a 1:49.5 half — nine tenths came back instead an hour later to do a 4:13.1 mile, but Deckard claims Glenn Cunningham, Don Lash and the other good ones never could score a double like that ... a husky lineman was limping away from a rugged scrimmage session at Michigan this spring when line coach Jack Blott spotted him ... "What's the matter, son? Legs bothering you?" Blott asked sympathetically ... the kid clutched his limbs and replied: "Yeah, the muscles are all gone along the back here." ... "That's strange, Jack tat-tutted," was watching you. You couldn't have got it from charging too fast; it must be from getting up so many times after that little guard knocked you down."

Talk around Jacobs Beach is that Jack Hurley, who had Billy Petrolle in Mike Jacobs' first big fight promotion and Vince Foster in one of Mike's last, ... may be picked to handle boxing under the new Garden set-up ... Guys who saw Art Mandelman pitch batting practice for Detroit Tigers Sunday ... his first working since he was injured in Florida — figure the $3k will be in their pitching ball emish before long.

HANDS IN TRAINING... FOR ONTARIO

Learning to Work With Copper and Brass

IN Ontario the wheels of industry turn for the benefit of every single one of us. Our lathes, dynamos, drill presses, farm combines, tractors, business machines, etc. are producing goods and services which earn dollars. These dollars provide food, clothing, medical care and other necessities which contribute to our security and high standard of living. Every single one of us, therefore, has a very personal interest in the flow of a steady supply of trained workers to industrial plants. These workers will operate machines which are important to our way of life.

We should appreciate, then, the co-operative efforts of government, industry and labour in the field of employee training. In schools and in factories our workers, young and old, are given the opportunity to develop new and specific skills in every field of business and industrial activity. For instance, every dollars provide food, clothing, medical care and other necessities which con-effort on the part of workers to become proficient in the art of shaping and moulding copper and brass, will mean greater industrial progress—will help to make Ontario a finer place in which to live and work.

THE BREWING INDUSTRY (ONTARIO)

Our Way of Life Rewards Trained Hands
Ontario workers know they can earn more, have executive responsibility and enjoy a higher standard of living in direct ratio to the skills they acquire and the way they make use of them. That's always true in a free economy —that's why our competitive system will continue to make Canada great and a great place in which to live.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 10 (AP) — There's little chance that Claude Jarman, Jr., will go Hollywood.

The child sensation of "The Yearling" has a living arrangement unique among film stars. He'll continue to make his home in Nashville, Tenn., reporting to Hollywood only when called to make a picture.

Young Jarman returns home after finishing the sound track for "Intruder In The Dust." He'll probably be reporting back to Hollywood less frequently. It's hard to find roles for a 14-year-old ex-footer.

Bing And Bob

Bing Crosby will join his Pittsburgh Pirates after finishing "Riding High". As soon as his boys are out of school, he'll take the family to his Elko, Nev. ranch where he expects to spend a couple of months.

Bob Hope should nab himself some rest. The only time I have ever heard him sound tired was on his air show last week after returning from his second United States tour. Slow down, Robert.

Fred Astaire and Betty Hutton should make a good combination in their upcoming musical.

Bill Holden figures he's in a rut. Now in "Sunset Blvd.", he's slated for "Beyond The Sunset" and "Red Sunset".

Capsule Review

"The Window" (R.K.O.) again proves that some of the best Hollywood films are the less costly. It has no star names and no "production values," but it holds more interest than many expensive films. The story of a boy who witnesses a murder is told with imagination in a suspenseful 79 minutes. Bobby Driscoll shines as the boy, parented by Barbara Hale and Arthur Kennedy.

GRANTED DIVORCE

Los Angeles, May 10 — (AP) — Actress Eva Gabor yesterday was granted a divorce from Charles Isaacs, wealthy real-estate man. She was awarded a property settlement of $1,000 a month for 11 years.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Jobber

Every time I open my mouth, Elva Tyme puts a couple of questions in it. Like when I told her that each voluntary no-trump bid by either partner of a pair shows one more high card in his hand.

"One more high card than what?" is one of her questions. Before I can get launched on the answer, "what do you mean by voluntary," she demands to know.

When a player opens with a bid of one in a suit he promises a set of values. Among these values are four high cards (aces, kings, queens). Each high card is counted as one no-trump trick.

Thereafter, any voluntary no-trump bid by such an opener promises a fifth high card. Another voluntary no-trump bid on another round would promise still another (a sixth) high card.

Partner of an opening one bidder is assumed to have two high cards. Each voluntary no-trump bid by such partner promises an other (third) high card, or another shows a fourth.

When either partner sees enough high cards for a game, it is not necessary to make no-trump bids gradually. A one-jump is signal for almost enough high cards for a no-trump game.

A takeout to a new suit or a jump forces partner to keep the bidding open. If such forced bid is no-trump, it does not promise another high card. It is not a voluntary bid in no-trump.

South opened the bidding with one heart when he held this hand:

♠ K 9 3
♥ K J 7 6
♦ K 5 3
♣ K 10 7

North responded with one no-trump. It was not a forced no-trump bid. So, north promised three high cards (a third high).

South has six high cards. He has two voluntary no-trump bids for the future. But with three in north he sees nine for a game. Instead of two separate no-trump bids he can jump to three no-trump.

Add them up and tell partner the total.

BUMPER TO BUMPER, CARS CRAWL ON NIAGARA PENINSULA

Automobiles — thousands of them — slowed motoring in the Niagara peninsula down to horse-and-buggy speed last weekend. The number of cars on the road, officials said, was as great as at any time on record, and motorists who anticipate travelling across the border at Buffalo or Niagara Falls on statutory holidays can expect a bumper-to-bumper parade. Here is a section of the highways at Niagara Falls.—Central Press Canadian.

DISDAIN DOG HOUSE

While a world wide search for his owner continues, Brownie, the Eskimo type pooch believed inadvertently deserted by a crew member aboard a visiting tanker, ignores his new residence built by employees of the Esso Co. refinery at Linden, N.J. Tanker men who call at the Esso docks are carrying the story of Brownie to other ports of call in the hope that his master will hear of his plight. Meanwhile, perhaps in disdain of a dwelling planted on terra firma or out of just plain lonesiteess, the dog sleeps out in the open and the new house, complete with burlap bedding and a handsome nameplate, remains unoccupied.

TO STOP WORK

Manchester, England, May 10 (Reuters) — More than 1,000 workers at six cotton mills at Wigan, Lancas, yesterday gave notice that they will stop work Friday because they failed to qualify for wage increases announced last week by the Labor Ministry's Arbitration Tribunal. The walkout, which could dislocate Wigan's cotton industry, is not supported by the Cotton Workers' Union.

Ma was sniffing and sneezing, trying to pop, Oh dear, if im never an inher cold I dont know what I'll do.

Did you do anything the last time you cawt one? pop said, ma said, no I didn't, because there's nothing to do but grin and bare it like a sheep to the slawn. I dont believe doctors know any more about germs and medecine than they did before the discovery of the North Pole, she said.

You wrong there, my dear, pop said. They're working day and nite in their little laboratories discovering cures for colds and penes. Every time I pick up a newspaper I read about something eits that they've turned up, more about it. They got it out of the mold on old woodpecker eggs, pop said.

Charity begins at home, why don't they work on the common cold? ma said, and pop said, They are, my dear. They're working along lniirely new principals. They've developed a hankerchiff a yard square, he said.

Oh hush, I dont think I'm really getting a cold, ma said.

Being naturelly optimistic he said, and ma said, Then please tell them to tern up something that will keep innocent people from sniffling half their lives away.

Give them time, pop said. Only the other day a research doctor stepped out of his laboratory and read a paper explaining how he found a new drug to cure stiffness in. It cures baldness in a certain hitry variety of terlies, and after more experiments he expects to try it on people. He developed it from a mold that forms on abandoned oyster shells. That's where the, ... ed he finding all these new wonder drugs, in different kinds of molds. A cupple of other chaps have dug up some stuff they call goodyrin. O.H.A. Injects Draft Rule To Protect Clubs and Game

Toronto, May 10 (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association has designed a draft policy that will protect the rights of the player, the club and the game. It will go into operation later this month.

George Panter, assistant secretary of the O.H.A. said following a meeting here last night that "such a thing has never been attempted in amateur sport before . . . we must make competition even and must not exploit players."

In brief, senior 'A' and junior 'A' clubs may draft players from clubs of lower classification upon payment of $150 for each player. The senior 'A' clubs may draft as many players as they wish, but no club of lower classification is compelled to give up more than two players in any one season.

Only players exempt from the draft rule are those under 16 by Nov. 1 of the current year, and players whose names appear on the reserve or sponsored players' lists of professional clubs on April 30 of the current season.

But, players on these lists may be drafted by an O.H.A. club which is officially sponsored by the professional club on whose list the name of the player appears.

Must be Kept Season

The rule also stipulates that a drafted player must be retained for one season unless (1) he is returned to the club from which he was drafted, or (2) transferred to another club in the drafting club's group, before Dec. 15, or he may advance to the senior team belonging to the same group.

However, no player may be moved to his lower classification when drafted, but he may not advance to another group club during that season and must stay in the same company as when drafted.

Applications for the general draft will be opened on the fourth Monday in May and will not be accepted after the second Monday following, Panter said.

Players subject to draft are all those registered the previous season in the O.H.A. and N.O.H.A., below senior 'A' and junior 'A' ranks, and all O.M.H.A., T.H.L., and W.O.A.A. and the O.R.H.A.

Plans for the formation of a central sports registry for all O.H.A. players was tabled for further discussion.

GEN. CLAY'S JOB

With news of the retirement on May 15 of General Lucius D. Clay as military governor of the U.S. zone in Germany, came speculation on his probable successor. One of those mentioned as a likely candidate is John J. McCloy, shown here. McCloy was reported to be reluctant to leave his job as president of the International Bank for the new post. General Clay's job is to be divided in two, with a military man named to command the U.S. occupation forces and a civilian to be appointed the U.S. high commissioner to control the western German state through the German government.

Cream of Crop Now on Hand For Preakness

Baltimore, May 10 (AP)—With the cream of the crop from the Kentucky Derby now at the grounds at Old Pimlico, prospects are that the Preakness (second jewel in the turf racing's triple crown— will be a high horse race Saturday.

Five of the 14 starters at Louisville have arrived and they're enough to assure a crack field for Preakness.

Only the best came up from Kentucky. They were the first four and seventh colts across the Derby line. All that remains now is for the outsiders to come in to determine the size of the field. The best guess now is that it will be around 10.

Each starter will throw another $2,000 into the over-all pot, which now stands at $101,200.

The train from Louisville today brought in Calumet Farm's Derby winner, Ponder; second place Capot; and Model Cadet, the seventh finisher last Saturday. They joined Palestinian, the Derby dark colt, and fourth place Old Rockport, both of which arrived Monday.

Olympia, the Derby favorite who came in a disappointing sixth will be in the Preakness run. But a new place setter to replace Olympia may be found in Noble Impulse. The Crispin Ogleby colt demanded consideration by setting a Pimlico track record Monday for a mile and one-sixteenth that's two-sixteenths short of the Preakness distance.

Noble Impulse was clipped at 1:48, two-fifths of a second better than the old record, and he did it while winning by five lengths.

PRIZE-WINNER

Picked from more than 100 entries, this painting was the winner of the first prize of $1,200 in the Quebec government's 1949 art competition. The work of Mrs. Simone Mathy-Beaulieu of Montreal, the painting bears the title "Femme Assise dans un Paysage," (Seated Woman Against a Landscape.) — (CP Photo.)

CHARGED WITH SABOTAGE WORDS

The name of Ralph Shaw, chairman of the Missouri State Communist party came into the testimony at the trial of Communist party leaders in session in New York, Witness Thomas Youngblove, testified that Shaw, shown here addressing a Red Training class in St. Louis, relayed a message allegedly passed on by a personal representative of Premier Stalin, that if war with the Soviet was near, the party in the U.S. must be prepared to go underground. According to Youngblove, Shaw said: "If war does come, we will do all we can in the party to sabotage the war effort."

ABEL WINS TROPHY

Montreal, May 10 (CP)—Captain Sid Abel of the Nationa! Hockey League champion Detroit Red Wings has been selected his team's most valuable player and awarded the Hart Trophy, the N. H. L. announced today.

A veteran of 11 seasons in the N.H.L., Abel edged Bill Durnan, Montreal Canadiens goalminder, 43-37 in the polling to capture the trophy for the first time. The award carries a cash bonus of $1,000.

SENTENCED TO PENITENTIARY

Oshawa, May 10 — (CP) — John Hance, 22, of Oshawa, was sentenced yesterday to eight years and Vernon Craig Topping, 23, also of Oshawa, was sentenced to six years for the robbery last April 20 of Fritz A. Von Gunten, 71-year-old jeweller.

Evidence was that the pair slugged Von Gunten over the head, bound him, and robbed him of $4,000 in jewelry. Hance was sentenced to three years, concurrent with the eight-year sentence, on two other charges of housebreaking.

Brighteners

Chicago — The president of the suburban village of Hazelcrest has calloused hands and muddy boots to prove that when he promised the voters sewer repairs he meant it.

Every evening, and on Saturdays and Sundays, the president, Raymond J. O'Brien, and the village trustees haul out their tools, dig out broken sewer tiles and replace them. They expect to finish the job this summer.

The broken-down sewer system was a major issue in the election campaign. Repairs would cost more than the village of 1,299 population could afford.

But O'Brien promised repairs and repairs the village is getting.

Baton Rouge, La. — Two men were arrested yesterday on an ice company's complaint that they were conducting their own "cold war" against the company.

The company claimed in an affidavit that a dismissed iceman and one of his friends continued to patrol his old route ahead of the ice truck, turning the signs in the housewives' windows so that they read "No ice today."

The men were booked on charges of criminal mischief and disturbing the peace.

Houghton, Mich. — An ambitious beaver is perplexing people here.

Two fishermen found the animal floundering in Lake Superior.

Beavers usually don't stray far from their dams, but this one was five miles from the nearest land.

He swam right up to the boat, and the fishermen lifted him in. He showed signs of being exhausted.

When the fishermen returned to land, they put him in a fish box, but he escaped. He no doubt went for another swim.

ONE KILLED IN CRASH

Lake George, N. Y., May 10 — (AP) — Frank Eldridge, 55 was killed and 16 passengers were injured when his automobile and a bus collided near here yesterday. Police said the bus went over an embankment and tipped over on its side after the collision. The 30 bus passengers escaped through an emergency door.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Some people's hackles rise and warn them when they are being made use of, and they say NO. My hackles rise all right, but all they do is to turn my neck red because I can't say no. I can accept all around an issue, hint like anyway, and end up having the final decision to my opponent.

When I washed the dishes, Roger said, "You know, Lee, you must not lean on me too confidently, there's no certainty of my being stationed here forever."

"No?" I said hopefully.

"No." Roger echoed gravely. "I've been thinking you should meet some of the men I think you'd find congenial. One colonel, for instance."

It startled me that the paucity of our friendship was so apparent. Bob would have been posted in Montana except that his mother elected to spend that winter in Florida. He'd grown up with the native sons, however. During the 15 years I'd lived in our town, somehow I'd been invited to both the top-flight sewing circle, dancing club, literary club, musical club, travel club, contract bridge club, the Junior League, and several other organizations. But Roger plugged on, "Colonel Morris is free tomorrow night. I suggested he hold the evening until he heard from me."

In spite of Roger's starved childhood, in spite of his uniform and potential as a hero, I was about to address him with some well-chosen words — when Bob broke into the kitchen to hear what all the conversation was about. Roger told him. I tried to tell Bob with a fish eye, but he ignored me. "Give him his party," he said.

"Not so fast. We haven't any red points," I gloated.

"What's that got to do?" Roger asked.

"Robbie hates chicken. Got too much of it in France."

"That's all right," said the man who'd sworn to protect me, "chicken'll have to do if it's all you can get."

Rob, I was learning, thought he had been opposed to taking in a roomer, was pathetically glad to have a boy around the house again. It seemed to fill some of the hollow left by Jill's absence.

Though Roger often tried us to the limit, he was careful not to try us both at the same time: what drove me to distraction, Robbie waved aside as unimportant; when Robbie was burned up, I felt reasonable. He could have liquidated Roger in a hurry if we'd ever thrown in together, but we didn't.

We had Colonel Morris to dinner, also his secretary, without her, it seemed, he could not eat. The urgency of including Miss McGillivray was impressed upon me that I half expected her to arrive carrying a typewriter for fear Colonel Morris should suddenly be taken with a letter. Also we had Colonel Morris' adjutant and his girl, and her sister.

We never again heard from Colonel Morris, or from his secretary, or from the adjutant and his girl, or from her sister,. but three weeks later Roger was recommended for Officer Candidate School.

Roger was perpetually alerted to opportunity, whether for personal pleasure or personal advancement. We didn't fully recognize this quality until he had exercised it a good many times at our expense. Hence, when he broke down on us with the news that the National Parks were closed at the end of the current season to remain closed for the duration, and that he'd heard Old Faithful all his life and that Major Drummond—

"Major Drummond"! Rob echoed. "How'd he get in the picture?"

"Headquarters Company," Roger acknowledged the interruption. "He's going to help me get the appointment to O.C.S." He went on to tell us that ever since Major Drummond had been a kid in school and had seen a picture of Old Faithful in his geography, he had wanted to see the geyser, and here they both were within 300 miles of it and unless they went immediately, they'd miss it altogether. Pulling aside base suspicions of Caesar and ambition, I thought that it would be nice if he could arrange to go to Yellowstone Park since he was so eager.

"No trouble about that, have a three-day pass. I was thinking you would like a good idea for all of us to go."

"What's all?" Rob asked in a flat voice.

"Major Drummond and his wife and you and Lee and me."

"How?" This was one of those days when I was reasonable and Rob was difficult.

"In your car, of course," Roger said brightly, as though he were arranging something for our benefit instead of for himself, "or—"

"Not me!" Rob objected. "I've seen Yellowstone."

"You don't want a book—you've got a book," Roger persisted. I thought Yellowstone National Park was wonderful enough to see many times."

"It is." I entered the argument. "I'd like to go." I thought with a relief it would be to cut the mileage of Red Cross and home duties for a few days.

It boiled down to Rob deciding to stay home while I went with the Drummonds and Roger. As there was ready to leave, Rob gave his set of keys to the sedan to Roger.

"Too much jingle-jangle," Roger said, removing the key.

"Aren't you afraid you'll lose it?" I asked.

"Not me," Quoth Roger, tapping his watch pocket. "This little nest is the safest place in the world for small objects."

We shoved off bright and early next morning. We crossed town and picked up Major Drummond, a vociferous, bristly character with sandy hair and bushy eyebrows, and his timid little wife who made no comment during our entire trip. Not that there wasn't plenty she might have said. . . .

It boiled down to a full day, with the warm sun and mellow air and a careful of people glad to be hitting the trail—as though all this were not enough to make chatter easy, the speedometer needle stuck at 70.

Roger reduced speed while he pounded on the dashboard. The needle sank to the bottom. "Oh, well," he said, "it isn't important. I'm a good judge of speed. It isn't worth wasting time to have it fixed. Means taking the whole instrument panel off."

Roger may have thought he was a good judge of speed, but Major Drummond didn't concur. Hourly he spilled, "Hasn't this car anything but high gear and a throttle?" As often as he spilled, Roger slowed down, only to creep up again to his preferred speed. Racing along a bad stretch of road we hit a bump and there was a rattle needs them. Always getting locked out of her house. Or her car."

"But—" I began.

Roger cut me off with a motion of disgust. He walked over where Major Drummond had buried himself attempting to pry a window open with a knife blade. "You good a job of locking up," he said.

"And miles from nowhere," Roger contributed, looking at me reproachfully. "You leave me no alternative but to break a window." He picked up a rock. "A beautiful car like this and I have nerds of love and suplier + mache mountains on a roller coaster."

"If we hurry," Rob said, as though we'd been doing anything else but, "we'll get to the Canyon for sunset. But I've got to tighten this sun visor before we go any farther. Keeps falling down and bothering me." He tightened it. It really fell down this time, right into his lap. "Hot!" he observed. "Crystallized sweat. Oh, well, the sun will soon be set. Won't need it after all." The sun was late for Drummond avoided my questing eye.

"All aboard!" Roger called, hurrying to lay by the starting the motor and letting it backfire. It made a loud noise.

"There goes your muffler," Major Drummond said, laconically like a disinterested spectator over losing out a score.

We rooted-tooted to the Canyon in time to see the setting sun tint the rocks with a variegated pattern in soft colors, and later we trooped to the dump to watch the bears come down from the woods to feed.

The only spectacle we didn't see was the person who spotted the yellow necks of the gasoline tubes sticking out like horns, and who removed them and their new tires something during the night, substituting what he had on hand at the moment.

"You're insured, aren't you?" Roger asked.

"Yes. But — "I began, remembering how scarce good tires were.

"No but's about it." he said playfully. "Just let Lee insurance company worry."

We drove the loop to the Lake, set high in the cradle of mountains, and after the lunch struck off south for a quick peek at the Grand TetonsWe caught first sight of them through a break in the trees. "Stop!" Mayor cried. "This I gotta see."

Unable to come to a stop until we had passed our vantage point by several hundred yards, rather than back up, we pilled out to walk. "Look the doors," Major cautioned. "Remember the tires." We locked the car thoroughly.

And then we discovered that Roger had left the key in the ignition. "That's all right," he reassured Major, who was preparing to have a fit. "Lee has her keys." Aware of my fault, he added in anguished disbelief, "Haven't you?"

I stood paralyzed, dumb as a fish.

"That's a woman for you," Roger called on the world to note. "Never has her keys when she

BARRIE FESTIVAL ATTRACTS U.S. VISITORS

Busloads of U.S. visitors are expected for the International Festival of high school music at Barrie, Ont., on May 12. The Barrie collegiate band of 65 will be reinforced by 80 high-school musicians from Hornell, N.Y. Shown here is Jane Perkins, of Barrie, who plays both piano and cornet. In addition to the musical events, hundreds of visitors and participants are expected to join in the festival.

hit a bump and there was a rattle

Millions of people have seen it just that way, but they weren't with Roger.

We were on the balcony before dinner when Roger strutted to the rail, stuck a cigaret in his mouth and drew a match folder from his watch pocket. He lit the cigaret and in an airy gesture tossed the match folder over the balcony railing. A wave of panic swept the look of well being from his face. He went through every pocket several times in rapid frenzy. He slapped his breast pocket. Felt carefully up on it like a man scrambling a stre tooth with his tongue. Ran his hand into his pants pockets. Began all over again . . .

He began to look like a frenzied chicken locked out of the roist at night and cruelly running from possible loophole to possible loophole trying to get in.

Major said, "Here. Keep your shirt on. I've got a match."

"Match, nothing! Roger roared. "I've lost the key to the car."

He did a quick search of his pockets again, "It was in my watch pocket. I always carry car keys there."

"And match folders," Major said scornfully.

"They just fit," Roger explained, becoming more calm, now that he had pooled his trouble.

"And keys just fit match folders, too," Major snapped. "I've heard of fool doings before in my life, but to carry a key loose in a pocket with match folders is asking for trouble. And we've got it," he concluded grimly. Major Drummond picked up his flash-light and led the way to the shrubs below, mumbling as he turned the beam into the heavy foliage. "Now look in a circle."

Not having eyes in the backs of our heads, we missed Old Faithful as we snagged out tin foil, bottle tops, shiny bits of glass and broken glass — all manner of small refuse from under the planting. But no key.

"If I call Rob now," I offered, "he could put my key on the midnight train to Billings, and it could catch a morning bus to the Park and perhaps reach us here by tomorrow night."

"Tomorrow night!" Major thundered in a crashing bellow, "I'm taking off for Alaska Monday! I'm getting out of here on the first train! Straightening up, he continued. "And I'm eating my dinner now."

FULL STEAM AHEAD ON BERLIN TRAINS

As soon as the news had been announced of the lifting of the Berlin blockade by the Russians, activity around the railroad cars and locomotives in the western sectors which had been standing idle for the past 10 months. Here at Grunderwald station in the British sector of Berlin, crane operator Schilles was pictured as he loaded the locomotives in order to get steam up after their long inactivity—Central Press Canadian.

BERLIN BLOCKADE ENDS PEACEFULLY AT MIDNIGHT

Trains, Trucks, Buses Poised to Move East

Berlin, May 11 (AP) — The Berlin blockade, which brought the east and western powers to the brink of war, is to end peacefully tonight.

At one minute after midnight (6:01 p.m., today, EDT), the land routes to and from west Germany are to be open again.

This is the 327th day of Russia's siege and the 320th day of the air lift that enabled the United States, British and France to cling tenaciously to their sectors of Berlin, encircled by an anti-Communist "island" 100 miles behind the Red army's lines.

Although the blockade and the western counter-blockade are in their final hours, the struggle between the Soviet Union and the Western Allies over Germany's destiny will continue. There is no prospect for the scheduled four-power foreign ministers' conference in Paris May 23.

But 2,000,000 west Germans and west Berliners alike will be in the last day that the food on their tables and the fire in their hearths would be dependent on international power politics.

Trains are ready to roll past the old blockade line. Trucks and buses were poised in the east zone and on the super-highway that Hitler built from the Spree to sunnier Isar Ellbe.

The first Berlin-bound train since the blockade started left Frankfurt, scheduled to arrive at the Berlin terminal (12:35 a.m. EDT). It carried 100 news and radio correspondents and British and American officials.

Strike Averted

A threatened strike of German railway workers was averted. The railway leaders said their demands that the wages of those who work in East Berlin but live in West Berlin be paid in west mark had been granted.

West Germans seemed to find it difficult to realize that the hated blockade finally was dying. But they planned a big celebration.

Even after the blockade ends, however, the air lift will continue. The American and British commanders have said it will be kept intact until there is no doubt that the days of blockading of the Communist-controlled east ended.

Berlin still will have two city governments, two police forces and fire departments, separate trade-union headquarters, and operation of almost everything else —one for the western sectors and one for the Russian-controlled part.

Dismantling of brick and metal barricades erected by the Communists started today.

The Soviet headquarters announced the long-severed electrical supply from East Berlin from Russian sector power plants would be resumed, and that water from Russian zone would have as much current as they need. That means the end of the Russian-imposed blackout, and normal supply to the household use.

The Russians announced that west zone German business men may go into the east zone business again with the eastern part.

POWER PLANT DAMAGED

Mont Laurier, Que., May 11 — (CP)—Damage estimated at more than $50,000 was caused Thursday when fire of unknown origin destroyed an old power plant here. It was said the surrounding district will be short of electricity until a new hydro-electric supply is nearing completion, goes into operation.

Mont Laurier is about 125 miles north of Hull, Que.

Dark Labor View Seen New Element In Steel Picture

New York, May 11 (AP)— The Iron Age, metalworking trade weekly, says today the "dark labor outlook" is a new element in the steel picture this week.

"It will affect steel," the publication says, "because auto strikes mean cutbacks in steel orders."

It adds, however, that "if there is a coal strike lasting for several months steel ingot output may not be affected to the same extent as in other years. Stocks of steel and coke are heavy and are still being built up. That suggests that as a strong front is being set up against any United Mine Worker demand the steel company coal mine officials consider unreasonable."

Probe Continues In Windsor Fire

Windsor, May 11 (CP)—Possibility that Tuesday's fire at the J. and T. Hurley Coal Company wharf may have been of incendiary origin was expressed today by Windsor fire officials.

Sheds, two trucks, a car, plumbers' and builders' supplies and 1,000 tons of stored coal and coke were destroyed in the blaze. Damage was estimated at between $25,000 and $35,000.

Fire officials said three children, age seven, reported seeing a youth light fires at three different points in the Hurley coal yard. Further questioning and the fact that none of the children could give a description of the alleged firebug led the officials to believe the boys were informants were responsible.

Investigation is continuing.

Know Nothing Of Invitation To Princess

London, May 11. (CP)—Buckingham Palace officials said today they know nothing as to invitation to Princess Margaret to attend the 50th anniversary of the incorporation of Preston Ont., as a town.

"We know of no plan for the Princess to visit Canada this year," commented the official.

As the honorary colonel-in-chief of the Highland Light Infantry of Canada, the Princess had been sent an invitation to attend the incorporation July 9.

Preston celebrated the freedom of the town in a drumhead service.

The invitation was reported to have been sent through Governor General Vincent Massey-Smollett of Glasgow, commanding the parent regiments, and Canada's High Commissioner now holidaying in Italy.

London, May 11 (AP)—A typesetting British Protestant group today protested to the King over Princess Margaret's audience with Pope Pius.

The Protestant Truth Society and other Protestant groups had protested to the King in advance of the audience.

Frost Damage To Fruit Trees In London Area

London, Ont., May 11 (CP) — This district escaped major frost damage in last night's cold snap when the mercury here fell to the freezing point. Agriculture Department officials said a preliminary check showed scattered damage to fruit trees but it likely will not be extensive.

Halifax May 11 (CP)— An aircraft was reported today to have crashed in the area near the big Eastern Passage fleet air arm base but there was no word as to fatalities or naval plane was involved.

"We have established contact with all our planes in the area and none is in trouble," the navy service said.

Earlier Cole Harbor residents had reported to the navy that a plane had crashed.

A Cole Harbor resident said two women told him: "They have seen a heavy fighter spin earthward and apparently crash."

Planes from the air base flew over the area in an attempt to check the report further.

Kingston, May 11 — (CP) Colin Campbell, K.C., said in the court house as too dusty, Magistrate James B. Garvin Tuesday ordered the court cleaned.

Magistrate Garvin later said he had ordered it to find that the court cleaned but met with no success. He had pointed out the condition of the courtroom to the janitor and authorities on several occasions.

CHARGE 29 MEN REFUSED TO OBEY LAWFUL ORDERS

Crew Members Held As They Leave Ship

Vancouver, May 11 (CP) — Twenty-nine Canadian Seamen's (T.L.C.) crew members were booked at police headquarters today on charges of refusing to obey lawful commands of their officers.

They were arrested as they left the strike-bound eastern-owned SS Islandside and the SS Rockside earlier in the morning. The seamen will appear in court later in the day.

Warrants charging the crews with refusing to obey officers were served Tuesday night by Police Chief Walter Mulligan and a squad of 12 men. The seamen agreed to quit their gear and surrender to police custody after spending the night on the vessels.

In a brief flare-up of violence on the waterfront Tuesday night, a 42-year-old merchant marine officer suffered severe face bruises and lacerations. He is in hospital.

John Ovans, second officer of the Islandside, said he and others were attacked as he left his S.I.U.-manned vessel and stopped ashore.

Harold Gleu, first mate of the Seaside, said Ovans was attacked by one of two men.

Arrested Man Charged With Manslaughter

Hamilton, May 11 — (CP) — Arthur Priddle, 34, of (2302 Murray St.) Niagara Falls, Ont., today was remanded till Monday on a charge of motor manslaughter. The accused did not enter a plea and bail was set at $20,000.

Police allege that Priddle is the driver who, recently, escaped from a stolen car which during a wild chase in the vicinity of Waterdown, struck Mrs. H. Grant, also another car and caused fatal injuries to Murray Buchan, 18, of Waterdown.

Two other men allegedly in the stolen car, Ross Young, and Marvin Braxton were arraigned on charges of theft of the car. They have appeared in court on several occasions but their trial has been adjourned from time to time.

While sitting in the prisoners' dock some weeks ago Young had slashed his wrists with a piece of glass and required hospital attention.

Detectives William Homer and Provincial Constable John Allgood arrested Priddle in Tillsonburg, Ont., Tuesday on a charge preferred some weeks ago. At the time of his arrest the accused man was in custody charged with the latter returned with him to Hamilton, but police refused to charge as he has been laid against her.

Dr. J. H. King Dies, Former M.P.P.

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Dr. J. H. King, former member of the Ontario legislature for South Renfrew and a medical practitioner in Guelph for the last 47 years, died in hospital today. Elected to the Ontario legislature at a by-election in 1910, Dr. King was returned in two subsequent elections. Prior to coming to Guelph, Dr. King practised medicine in Aberfoyle and Morriston. He was a graduate of University of Western Ontario Medical School.

End of Blockade Brings Fresh Fruit, Potatoes, Coal, Gas and Lights

Berlin, May 11 (AP)— You'd count the hours, too, if you were a German in blockaded West Berlin.

You'd be thinking, "the blockade ends tonight, and I can hardly wait. Perhaps now, fresh food on the table, a job to work at, and no more of the cruelty of living on 1 and 1-a-p. Maybe the police will leave us alone in the streets, too." That's what many Germans here say is monotonous fare, but he knew it was necessary. Fresh food would have wasted weight and space on the air lift.

Also banished of fresh potatoes will move into Berlin when the blockade ends one minute past midnight. It won't last long, but its arrival will be a big event here.

The coal will start to roll next. A lump of coal is precious. Twenty-five hundredweight of coal is the air ration per person for all of winter.

Coal deliveries by rail will mean a chance to reopen factories which had to close for lack of fuel, throwing 100,000 men out of work.

Enough coal also will mean that street lights can be lit, and that will be a welcome end of the order limiting household lighting to 60 watts. There is also a ration of gas for household purposes for only a little longer. Refugees who lived in areas which got their gas supplies only in the early morning, are sometimes had to start cooking the whole day's food at 2 a.m.

Many Germans also want to take a warm bath when you want it, not soon enough time to catch up on your reading will seem luxurious living.

200 Volunteers Save Eagle Lake Village From Fire

120 D.P.'s Assist in Halting Blaze at Edge of Settlement

Haliburton, Ont., May 11 (CP) —Two hundred volunteers saved Eagle Lake, a village of 400 persons, from a bush fire that raged for 24 hours near this community, 33 miles north of Peterborough.

The blaze was checked Tuesday night a few hundred yards from the village. Only with the aid of 120 DPs brought in by Ontario Hydro linemen was the fire brought under control in the 50-acre area.

A Hydro gang was burning brush when the blaze, fanned by a high wind, got out of control. Deputy Fire Warden William Sargent Tuesday night cancelled all permits for burning brush in the Haliburton area.

The wind carried the flames into nearby bush and fanned them out of control. Within an hour, 50 acres of brush and timber were ablaze.

Fight Fire for 12 Hours

For 12 hours 50 firefighters from Haliburton fought a losing battle with it, but increased its manpower to compensate this. The fire progressed.

Tuesday's negotiations were adjourned without any announced progress.

For a time a picket-line of about 100 men ringed the 11-mile building where company and union officials were negotiating.

U.A.W. president Walter Reuther said it was a demonstration "engineered by communists."

Some pickets carried signs saying "Speed-ups are all over Rouge."

Reuther, however, said the demonstrations would be discontinued.

"We have decided there will be no other issues injected into these negotiations except those out of the original notice," he said.

The demonstrators departed a short time after Reuther's statement, president of local 600, ordered them to disband.

The scene at the picketed Rouge and Lincoln-Mercury plants remained quiet.

Meanwhile, the city of Detroit took steps to meet any slack on its welfare funds from financially-pressed strikers.

The city council approved the issuance of 2,000,000 in short term notes "to meet any possible contingency."

Strikers are eligible for welfare benefits if need is proved. So far, however, no emergency has developed.

FOREIGN TRADE EMERGES AS ONE ELECTION ISSUE

Both Conservatives and C.C.F. Leaders Make Question as Address Theme

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

The spectre of a possible trade crisis emerged as a dominant issue Tuesday as the campaign for the June 27 general election began to unfold in Canada's eastern provinces.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, gave the trade question 30-minute debut in an election-manifesto address broadcast from Sydney, N.S., while M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. chieftain, used it as the theme of a pre-election statement issued from Ottawa.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, on the first leg of a two-weeks jaunt which will take him through the Maritime Provinces, spent the day aboard his native town of Compton, Que., and told a group of old-time friends that his return as the country's administrative head as a "striking demonstration of democratic reality."

Touching only lightly on the political side of his visit, he spoke of the Atlantic security pact and said "we are fixing things up so there won't be any more wars."

Later, at a campaign meeting in Compton, the Quebec's eastern townships, where English and French people live together, is a lesson for all of Canada.

"Both Canadian races should cultivate characteristics, which should not try to assimilate the other, and should blend together to form one national edifice of different stones," he said.

Mr. Drew, opening in a national broadcast, said official figures show that Canada's export trade is falling "at an alarming rate" and warned that the country is headed "into an extremely dangerous situation."

He promised, should a Progressive Conservative government unseat the Liberals, to "adopt such legislative steps to recapture the faltering market and develop new avenues for Canadian trade."

He touched, too, on social security and outlined a five-point program which would include abolition of the pension at 70 without a Means Test; accident, sickness and disability benefits; extended unemployment insurance payments, family allowances regardless of the size of family, and a national health scheme.

In addition, a Progressive Conservative government would amend the criminal code to deal "effectively with Communists."

Mr. Coldwell charged Trade Minister Gordon Conant with a "lull" the people about the trade crisis until the election is over.

Mr. Howe's announcement Monday of a prospective $25,000,000 British credit, he charged, "Canada was mere "window dressing."

He cited official statistics to show that British imports from Canada have dropped $54,000,000 in the first quarter of this year and said Mr. Howe had not even "mentioned the tide, let alone reverse it."

Mr. Coldwell also released the text of a five-minute address to be broadcast over local stations across Canada, in which he argued that the only solution to the trade crisis was by long-term contracts and bulk purchases between governments.

Drive-Yourself Cars Reported Stolen, Man Held

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Police announced today the arrest of a man who, they said, stole automobiles after renting them from Drive-Yourself firms throughout western Canada and Ontario. Police said he posed as a clergyman.

Earlier today the accused, charged with car theft, as John Read, Police said he was known as Arthur Jones, Byron Stubbert and John Flintstones.

Police said they also arrested a woman companion who posed as the clergyman's wife. They said Read disposed of the cars by transferring ownership to "wife" of motor before selling them. She was identified as a native of Guelph, Ont., but her name was not released.

Police said they recognized the licence number of a parked automobile as that of a car reported stolen. They notified the car to headquarters. Read was arrested when he came to report it stolen, police said.

Plan to Extend Russo-China Pact

Shanghai, May 11 (AP)— Central News Agency said today the Chinese-Russian aviation agreement of 1939 will be extended for five years.

The agreement gives Russia virtually complete commercial aviation rights in China's northwest western Sinkiang Province. The province is bordered by Russia, Russian-supported Outer Mongolia, India and Afghanistan. It is almost inaccessible from this area, except by air.

FREE COURT ACTION

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 11 — (CP) — A prize court action concerning ownership of 19 registered vessels, estimated at nearly $2,800,000 in European, South African and South American funds will come before Chief Justice Sir Brooke Francis of Bermuda tomorrow.

The letters were seized as war prizes from United States planes passing through Bermuda in 1940.

Claimants are Carl Marks and Co. Inc., of New York.

Sponsors, Critics Praise Painting Of 'Artist' Who Splashes Colors

Loughborough, Leicester, England, May 11 (AP) — Artist Jackson Pollock doesn't use a lot of trouble over his painting.

He splashes the colors — dozens of them — with a bold brush, or his tiny fingers, or an old stick with a chewed end.

He lets his cat, Jill, sail over the fresh paint, sit on it and switch her tail over it.

And while turning out his masterpiece "Figure 8: Skegness," he spilled a saucer of paint on it by accident, smudged it, tried erasing, muttered "oh shucks" and let it ride.

But sponsors of a local are show thought "Figure 8: Skegness" was good enough to hang.

Critics praised it. Said the Leicester Mail: "A fine specimen of modernism by the Kerrigan-Colman artist Thomas Warbis."

They found later that artist Warbis doesn't exist.

Tommy's father Alfred, a concert hall artist, is here with Tommy's canture in modern art while looking for backing paper to send his pictures to the exhibit.

"I sent the picture as a joke and a test of people's knowledge of art," he moaned. "And to think I've been trying for 40 years to get recognition as an artist."

Thomas D. Pearce, the organizer, went hurriedly to see Tommy.

"It's no worse than a lot of stuff which poses as modern art," he said.

Dominion Stores Ltd. Reports Profit

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Dominion Stores Ltd. and subsidiaries reported a profit of $1,000,000 for the 52 weeks ended March 26, 1949, after all charges including depreciation, interest and taxes, but before provision for contingencies.

The profit was equivalent to $2.50 per common share, after preferred dividends, and compared with $1,000,000 or $2.50 per common share in the previous year.

NO OUTWARD SIGN SETTLEMENT NEAR IN FORD STRIKE

Thousands of Workers In Supplying Plants Being Made Idle

Detroit, May 11 (AP)—Ford and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) resumed negotiations today on the seventh day of a strike of 85,000 employees who walked out because of a speed-up dispute, but there were no outward signs that a settlement was near.

Thousands of other workers, both in Ford factories and supplying plants, also were idle.

The Union charges Ford with a production rate increase of 10 per cent since the 1947 negotiation of the Lincoln-Mercury plants. Ford says it has increased its manpower to compensate this. The union disagrees.

Tuesday's negotiations were adjourned without any announced progress.

For a time a picket-line of about 100 men ringed the 11-mile building where company and union officials were negotiating.

U.A.W. president Walter Reuther said it was a demonstration "engineered by communists."

Some pickets carried signs saying "Speed-ups are all over Rouge."

Gordon Graydon To Run in Peel

Brampton, May 11 (CP)—Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member of parliament for Peel since 1940, today said he was nominated to contest the riding in the federal election on June 27. Nominated by Ontario Agriculture Minister J. Kenneth Greer, Graydon attacked the Liberal government for its economic policies, maintaining that war-born taxation and alleged extravagance.

"They have for far too long been cruising down the river on a Sunday afternoon with a delightely no regard for storm clouds" said Mr. Graydon. "This disregard continued until Mr. St. Laurent travelled across Canada, saw the storm clouds and immediately rushed back to Ottawa to call for an election before it was too late."

NO OUTWARD SIGN SETTLEMENT NEAR IN FORD STRIKE

Thousands of Workers In Supplying Plants Being Made Idle

Detroit, May 11 (AP)—Ford and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) resumed negotiations today on the seventh day of a strike of 85,000 employees who walked out because of a speed-up dispute, but there were no outward signs that a settlement was near.

Thousands of other workers, both in Ford factories and supplying plants, also were idle.

The Union charges Ford with a production rate increase of 10 per cent since the 1947 negotiation of the Lincoln-Mercury plants. Ford says it has increased its manpower to compensate this. The union disagrees.

Tuesday's negotiations were adjourned without any announced progress.

For a time a picket-line of about 100 men ringed the 11-mile building where company and union officials were negotiating.

U.A.W. president Walter Reuther said it was a demonstration "engineered by communists."

Some pickets carried signs saying "Speed-ups are all over Rouge."

Reuther, however, said the demonstrations would be discontinued.

"We have decided there will be no other issues injected into these negotiations except those out of the original notice," he said.

The demonstrators departed a short time after Reuther's statement, president of local 600, ordered them to disband.

The scene at the picketed Rouge and Lincoln-Mercury plants remained quiet.

Meanwhile, the city of Detroit took steps to meet any slack on its welfare funds from financially-pressed strikers.

The city council approved the issuance of 2,000,000 in short term notes "to meet any possible contingency."

Strikers are eligible for welfare benefits if need is proved. So far, however, no emergency has developed.

SOOT AND ASH COVER WASHING JUST HUNG OUT

The Coleman Street lady had completed her weekly wash and had hung it out to line to dry. A short time later heavy black smoke belched from the chimney of a nearby laundry and covered the wash with soot and ash.

In possibly what was rightious wrath the woman called the police station asking that the laundry be checked for permitting the chimney to belch forth smoke.

Constables were advised to check the chimney for times and duration of the smoke omissions. According to the by-laws the chimney of a commercial business can be permitted to smoke only for six minutes during the hour.

New Aerial Ladder, Escape Chute Demonstrated by Department on Market Square

The taxpayer in Belleville Tuesday afternoon had a good look at what they got for $28,000 in the new 75-foot aerial ladder which Saturday was delivered to the city after a wait of more than two years.

Members of the local fire department, under the direction of Fire Chief Gerald Vance, and a demonstrator for Bickle-Seagrave, manufacturers of the truck, put the aerial ladder through its operational paces. The result was one of general satisfaction on the part of taxpayers witnessing the demonstration, who had a feeling they had received something for their money.

Parked on the south side of the city hall the truck was viewed by several hundred interested spectators who watched the aerial ladder being swung up and extended to almost its full 75-foot length.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance was the first to receive a "ride" on the new ladder as he was swung up to the roof of the city hall. Then other members of the force took turns in familiarizing themselves with the "feel" of being swung aloft atop a ladder 60 feet in the air.

Escape 'Chute Demonstrated

The escape 'chute was also demonstrated and firemen slid down from the roof of the city hall in almost less time than it takes to ask an explain.

The 'chute is an accessory to the aerial ladder and is used for rescue work. It is expected city council will go "whole hog" and purchase the 'chute which is expected to be completed.

Masonic Temple Sold to K. of C., Masons to Build New Edifice

Sale of the Masonic Temple at 399 Front Street, opposite the Upper Bridge, to the local branch of the Knights of Columbus, was announced this week, the K. of C. to use the building as their headquarters.

The local Masons will construct a new Masonic Temple on Foster Ave., just north of Dundas Street, but will continue to occupy their present Front Street building until the new edifice is completed.

In the meantime the Knights of Columbus are being forced to vacate their present headquarters in the Robertson Block and will occupy the lower floor of the building they have purchased from the Masons. The K. of C. will have the use of their present headquarters for the past 42 years.

With the recent growth of the city, the Masons for several years have considered that new headquarters were necessary, and that their new building will be a credit both to the Masonic Order and the city.

Thus far plans for the new building have not yet reached the drawing board, but it is expected the building will be approximately 60 feet by 80 feet in width by a length of about 100 feet. The structure will be possibly of two storeys and basement, and will include an auditorium capable of seating between five and six hundred people. It is understood this auditorium will be available to the general public for meetings.

Just when construction of the new Temple will commence has not been announced, but it is expected the building will be completed within the next year or year-and-a-half.

Belleville Masons have occupied their present building on Front Street for the past 75 years, the Masonic Order having taken over the building back in 1874.

Response Good But More Clothing Is Badly Needed

The response to the appeal for clothing for war-stricken people of Europe, Great Britain and the Orient has been generous from a Belleville point of view, the Rev. Don C. Amos, minister of Bridge Street United Church, and chairman of the committee said today.

"Bill", Mr. Amos added, "we of the committee feel that there is a great number of people who have not as yet sent in their contributions.

"We urge them to do so at once or as soon as possible, for packing of the clothing is scheduled to start next week."

Good used clothing is needed, but remember, no hats or shoes please. They take up too much of the urgently needed shipping space. And don't forget the kiddies when you are forraging out that used clothing from your attic, wardrobe, or closet. The youngsters in the countries are badly in need of wearing apparel, so do what you can, eh?

Take your bundle of clothing to your church as soon as possible. If you have no way of getting it there call your minister or the Rev. Don. C. Amos, Bridge Street East. He will take care of your transportation needs.

Overseas, the distribution of the clothing donated by Canadians will be made through recognizable committees of Christian churches.

So lend a hand. Dig out that used clothing now, parcel it and send for that is to your minister. He will take over from there. But do it now, please.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN RECESSION WITHOUT PLAN

Fort Erie, Ont., May 11 (CP)—If it were not for the Marshall Plan there might have been a major recession in Canada, Agnes MacPhail, C. C. F. member of the Ontario Legislature for York East told an audience here Tuesday night.

"A great deal of food was bought in this country to keep the hungry people of Europe as well as in the United States," she said.

3-Act Comedy At Collegiate Much Enjoyed

The Belleville Independent Grocers' Association last night presented George M. Cohan's three-act comedy entitled "It Pays to Advertise" at the Collegiate auditorium.

It is a very enjoyable evening's entertainment produced by Eric Greenwood and was well received by a near capacity audience. It was very well presented by an experienced cast, despite the fact that due to unfortunate circumstances the costumes and scenery were too late in arriving from Kitchener. The play has had a very successful run both in New York and in London.

The play consists of a plan devised by a wealthy soap king to have his son go out into the world and earn his own living and also to win a boy to be made by a rival soap producer, Cyrus Martin. The boy, Peter Pringle, has been hired by Martin to devise a plan by which they could get young Pringle to do some work by promising to marry him to Martin's daughter.

Ambrose Peale, an ex-producer, who has gone broke is hired by Rod Martin to be his advertising manager and between them they launch a mammoth advertising campaign in an attempt to win Pringle's hand for him. His father does not believe in advertising campaigns other than his conservative ads. It was decided between them that they should manufacture the world's most expensive soap to try and force Cyrus Martin to buy them out because he had control of all the soap companies but one.

In Debt in Short Time

Rodney started with very little capital and in a very short time was in debt. Their hopes were suddenly raised when the Countess Di Vino, who supposedly did not speak a word of English, arrived from Italy with the French rights to their soap but it was discovered before they lost their investment that she was a fake and a swindler who had tried to swindle the Cyrus Martin Co.

Cyrus Martin finally breaks down and buys them out for a half a million dollars when he finds out that their clever advertising campaign had really worked out and the soap has sold in a very short time.

From that day on Cyrus Martin was a firm believer in high grade advertising and his son had proved that he could be a successful businessman. He also won his bet from his rival even if it did cost him half a million dollars to do it. Thus it was proved that it really pays to advertise".

The show is playing again tonight and is something worth while seeing.

DECLINE TO INDICT

Mincola, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—A Nassau County Grand Jury has declined to indict a 38-year-old mother in the slaying of her landlord.

Mrs. Dorothy Miners was freed from the county jail Tuesday to return to her husband and two children.

She had been held since April 29 on a police charge of fatally shooting her landlord, John A. Grady, 50, as he fought with her husband.

Police said the fight resulted from Grady's complaint that the Miners were burning lights too late, and consuming too much electricity.

Proper front wheel alignment is highly important!

You may be driving side-ways and never know it! A bad bump at the curb can sometimes throw your car's wheels out of line. Then you'd literally be dragging your tires side-ways over miles of highway.

Don't risk it. It's cheaper and safer to drive in now for our Precision Wheel Alignment Service. We'll check your steering, inspect front-end alignment, balance front wheel assemblies and equalize your tire pressure.

Drive in today—our factory-trained mechanics know your car inside and out.

Key Clubbers Put on Program For Kiwanis Club

Little brother took charge of big brother this week as the Key Club took over the weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club. Key clubbers were in attendance at this meeting to give a report on their recent convention in Washington.

Harry Croll, president of the Key Club, very ably took over the chair of President Norm Edwards. Don Rose, who was elected international trustee at the convention, told of the tours and the proceedings of some of the meetings. He also told of the training that was given the new executive, how to do their filling etc., and the importance of keeping a neat appearance. The next convention is to be held in Columbus, Ohio, and he expressed his hope that there would be a better international relationship between Canada and the United States.

Bob Cook told of some of the suggestions put to the executive at the convention. One of these was to have the Key Club extended to the universities. This would be to let those back into the club who had to withdraw their membership when they finished high school. He also spoke of the big brother idea to help the parent Kiwanis Club — giving as much support as possible to the Key Clubs.

He also spoke of having weekend conferences with the neighboring clubs and having sports programs to help them to know each other better. Another suggestion was to correspond with other clubs, to give them ideas and receive new ideas in return that might help to better the Club.

President Harry Croll announced that the installation of the new officers would be held at the Kiwanis Centre on Monday, May 23rd. Some of the new officers are as follows: President, Don Rose; vice-president, Kevin Doyle; secretary, Leo Marcus; treasurer, Bob Barber.

Grace was sung by Brock Stackhouse and he also sang a solo accompanied by Bob Barber. Honored guests at the meeting were Roy Roberts of Kingston, Rev. J. M. Bonella and Clinton Rose.

He'll be Careful How He Says It

Kitchener, May 11 (CP)— A Displaced Person farm resident told police today he'll be careful how he says things to children in the future. While crossing his car yesterday he told a child he was washing it because he hit a pedestrian. He found a 5-year-old in the trunk of the car. It eventually got out of the confusion they found the body — a dead rabbit.

Seven Members Honored by K. of C. Council

An important milestone in the life of the Knights of Columbus in this community was observed last night in the K. of C. rooms on Front Street when five members were signally honored by being presented with membership in membership in the council. Other presentations were made and splendid addresses were given by the Chaplain of the Order, Monsignor J. F. Hinchey, Rev. J. A. Carley, At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

Past State Deputy A. E. Collins, K.C., Past Grand Knights W. N. Belaiy, J.V.C. The ceremony was performed under the direction of Frank Domenico, Grand Knight of the Council, Robert Kidner, Deputy Grand Knight, Maurice Callaghan as Chancellor and Morris Bradley as Warden. It was an impressive ceremony and the members of the Council — for the work accomplished by these brethren in the years that have passed. W. N. Belaiy is the only living charter member of the Council and this Council is one of the oldest in Ontario. Those who were honored represented 240 years of service.

For outstanding work in the Council, Vincent McIntyre, the financial secretary and Terry Scanlan, treasurer, were presented with silver service trays and each expressed his thanks for the remembrance. The four team captains, who have worked hard and provided within the council, Henry Hatfield, Frank Deacon, Ted Royle and Claude Finnegan were presented with pen and pencil sets. The meeting was one of the best held in many years.

INDIA AND HER PEOPLE'S HEALTH

India has attracted world attention on the very important decision which has been made in her relation to the Commonwealth of Nations, as she, though a republic, retains her place in the group of British peoples. Now there is another field in which India has taken the world's note, a new development of vital importance to the social life of the people. It has to do with a nine-million dollar program drawn up by a conference of ministers for the construction and operation of a drug-manufacturing plant in the Province of Bombay. It will be operated by the central and provincial governments of India and will produce annually 1,200 billion units of penicillin, 100,000 pounds of anti-malarial drugs, 60,000 pounds of sulfonamerazine and 20,000 pounds each of sulfathiazole and sulfanilamide.

Such a step clearly indicates the influence which modern health problems are exerting on peoples in all parts of the world. Western nations are having a profound reaction upon numbers of other nations and the questions of health will have an influence on India which cannot be overestimated. Sickness and disease are faced in every part of the globe and modern medicine and surgery and investigation are working improvements which should widen the appeal of the western nations to those of the east.

DESIGN IN HOUSES

Britain is td build 150 houses, each of different design, as a test of new building methods. The aim is to determine the types of construction, fittings and equipment likely to ensure the ideal living conditions in inexpensive homes. It is proposed that groups of ten houses should be built on 15 different sites. They would be constructed in pairs facing south and be fitted with heat insulation of a specified standard. But this is the only feature in which the houses would resemble one another. There would be for instance, three varying ground floor plans and a different layout for the first floors. There would also be variations in materials used, in methods of ventilation, in systems of heating and cooking as well as in facilities for food storage. It is anticipated that the results of these comprehensive trials will be of the greatest importance to health authorities, local authorities and building experts.

ROBOTS

Robots and gadgets are making life too easy and soft. Under the lure of more refined ease, people are becoming the slaves of intricate thingumabobs and secret formulas that hold social cells, even communities, in the hollow of their hands.

The time-honored, lather 'em and rub 'em shave has given way to a brushless technique that takes little more effort than the wipe of a towel; the old-fashioned razor has been supplanted by a shaving implement that disdains soap or water. Only a quaint Victorian ever carries pocket matches any more. Television threatens to crowd the living-room with a little more of the raucous world. After a hot snow shovel is perfected there will hardly be any field left for the inventors to work on.

Yet, let a switch fail somewhere, or the power go off, and all this elaborate gadgetry is suddenly paralyzed.

Some people have actually become so sedentary in recent years that they do not move about enough in a day to keep a self-winding watch in operation. Not much bodily movement was required to do that. Swiss watchmakers have overcome this difficulty, however. They now have a self-winder containing a minute ball bearing that will keep the watch going even if its wearer does nothing more than lift his hand to suppress a yawn.

It is going to be just too bad if the robots and gadgets ever deprive us all it a day and flee to another realm, leaving humanity flat on its back.—Hamilton Spectator.

CHANCES OF SURVIVAL AT SEA

Britain is carrying out important experiments designed to improve the chances of survival for mariners obliged to abandon ship. The Admiralty has set up a Naval Life Saving Committee to be responsible for the design and development of suitable equipment. The first step has been to carry out exhaustive tests on all known types of lifesaving gear used not only in Britain but elsewhere.

THE COMMON COLD

The germ that breeds the common cold
Seems blind to wealth and fame,
Alike it treats both young and old

For when its fiendish work is done

And from it streams of stuff will run,
The same as yours and mine.

The cold germ cannot flattered be

One of the most notable events in the history of the Bay of Quinte District was the Grand Peace Assembly which was held in the Belleville Armouries on Thursday under the the Publicity Committee of the County of Hastings Development Association. The object of the assembly was to celebrate the cessation of hostilities and the dawning of world peace, and also to afford an opportunity for the people of the various parts of the district to meet and fraternize and thus incorporate a spirit of co-operation which will be helpful in the upbuilding of a prosperous and contented district working for the best interests of all in an association seeking to develop the resources and trade of the district. The affair was a great and enjoyable success; the attendance being large. Dr. Hon. Chairman of the function was Mr. Thomas F. Naylor, Reeve of Deseronto; Hon. Secretary Mr. William H. Letters to the Editor

Would Disqualify Communists

Belleville, May 8.

Sir—

Leaders and members of political parties have grounds in condemnation of communism. Churches, fraternal societies, service clubs, and other organizations have condemned communism. But it would seem that the labor unions are the only organizations that have acted. Labor organizations have excluded communists.

Sticks and stones will break my bones,

But names will never hurt me.

I have drafted a bill to be considered by parliament, an outline of which is as follows:

Clause 1. Defines a communist.

Clause 2. Disqualifies a communist from being a candidate for parliament, and from holding any public office in the gift of the Dominion Government.

Clause 3. Disqualifies a communist from voting in the Dominion elections.

History repeats itself, and in various countries of the world where communism was permitted to exist, it proved that communists have by force captured the control of government in those countries. What happen in Canada if the "sticks and stones" policy were followed. Words are not enough.

The Russians have six different provinces have power over civil rights and property. The various legislatures have the right to make policy, and in addition prohibit a communist who has been prosecuted from holding real or personal property or any interest therein.

Yours truly,
W. C. Mikel.

Appointment Of School Principal

Belleville, May 10.

Sir—

As a former Belleville boy I was considerably disturbed by several letters appearing in your paper speaking disparagingly of the recent appointment of Department made by the Belleville Board of Education.

These letters in particular, speaks rather vaguely of "veterans' rights" and claim that a veteran should have been given preference for the job. Now I don't feel this represents the opinion of the majority of veterans.

If an ex-service veteran were competing for a job of general nature I submit he should be given preference but the position in question is a very specialized and one of considerable responsibility and the veteran in question should be considered on the principles for which many of our lads died.

I for no doubt the citizens of Belleville are quite content to leave the administration of our school system to their elected representatives rather than to influential ex-service officials good as their influence may be

Britain's Colony Of Hong Kong To be Defended

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Britain's Crown colony of Hong Kong off the southeast coast of China is only a pinpoint on the map of Asia, but it could become a dangerous cause of strife between Britain and the Chinese communists if the reds conquer the country.

The reason is that this famous island through endless centuries belonged to China until Britain acquired it after winning the "opium war" against China in 1841. Indications are that the Chinese communists intend to reclaim Hong Kong and other adjoining territory on the mainland — a total of more than 390 square miles.

The London Daily Mail sums up the situation by declaring Britain in China" like this:

"The siege in the west is over, but the siege in the east and that of Hong Kong have only other Berlin."

The Mail is doubtful it enough is being done to protect Hong Kong against possible aggression and says that Britain's defense policy in the Far East is "a slave of the Cabinet system" of the new political symbol of our resolve to resist red pressure. Bluntly now here it is:

The British government always has had Hong Kong in contingencies. Defence Minister Alexander told the Commons a few days ago that Britain was sending substantial land, sea and air reinforcements to the Yangtze River at a cost of 43 British lives.

Could Britain defend this possession if the Chinese communists should make an attack on it in force?

That certainly raises a great big question. It would be difficult to feed Hong Kong from the outside. Its population could only be carried out under cover of big scale naval and air operations.

In short, it strikes us that defense of Hong Kong against an all-out communist attack would involve a risk of war. Surely we would mean another world war. A decision along these lines every Britain will be up against.

May 11 — A veteran of 54½ years service (2 years overseas), congratulate the Board on having the courage to make the appointment in the best interests of the town and the people of Belleville on their choice of discerning School Board representatives.

Yours very truly,
Kenneth I. Perry,

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

This is no time of year for politics; yet many men seem to have no sense of fitness. In the smoking compartment on the Pullman last night, I listened to six men discussing politics with a futility and finality. I took no part in the discussion, except to egg them on with a word or two, for there was no place for me to sit except on the smoking car seats. I don't really do justice to your opinions from such a situation.

But what I did get from the discussion was an extraordinary impression of the prejudices of men with regard to politics. It was deeper than prejudice. It seems to me that men are born with a set of views, and that no intellectual screening which, automatically, leap up before their minds when certain subjects are mentioned. Prejudice comes from the heart, and not to be judged. But the opinions of these good average citizens, as they hetled in the smoking compartment, were not the product of judgment of any kind. Their opinions seemed to be born in them, the same as the colors of their eyes, the length of their legs or the color of their hair. In each man's mind was this little rack, or set of pigeon holes or screens. Mention religion, and up pops the screen that has to do with religion. Through that screen, not a word, not an idea penetrates to the brain of the listener could penetrate. Mention wages, salaries, taxes, prices, costs, and up popped the respective screen. You could almost hear the little screen clicking into place in their minds. Mention the Canadian Pacific Railway West, Ontario; mention labor unions, and you get the picture. Imaginable in a political discussion — and up comes those auto-

IS THAT BATH REALLY NECESSARY?

How often you you think, asks a reader, a bath is necessary? My husband takes one every night. Does a tub bath soaks too much of the oil out of the skin. I like a bath in the morning because I have to wear a shower cap or get my hair wet. Should one take a shower six days a week and only one bath a week? If you approve of a shower or tub bath every day should it be taken night or morning? On a visit to the coast in February we met the man from Nova Scotia you catched horseshoes with at Hot Springs, Ark. He said you are only a pleasure, but that you can catch a disease.

(Mrs. F. M. L.)

Careful, there, Marion. It is for each reader to decide for himself what I pitch. Unless it was in my dreams or the Nova Scotian and I haven't pitched a horseshoe since Tony was a pup. I do hope the man had not lost or mislaid his wallet just before you met him—something that often happens to many intimate acquaintances of ours when they first meet.

Without bias I assure you that a humanitarial whether one takes a shower or tub bath.

If you wear a modern plastic cover instead of a rubber shower cap you can get into the shower without wetting your hair, and the cover takes a second to put on or remove.

With bias I say that I share your humanitarian preference for a quick shower—the quicker the better.

If I wanted a shower or tub bath several times a day I'd take it—and I'd get into the shower the world about it. I shudder at the very suggestion of a wet head or any kind first thing in the morning, except in extremely warm weather.

Your husband is right about the skin softening more of the natural skin oil than the shower, particularly if the water is hard, irritable and itchy—a complaint of many persons who take too many, too hot, too prolonged, too many soakings in the tub. They'd be as clean and considerably more comfortable with showers lasting only a few moments, and a minimum of soaping. People who washed the very life out of their skin by years of hot, soaking water soaking may find the Skin Oil described in booklet Save Your Skin soothing to apply after the bath, especially those who prefer with bath privilege. For the booklet send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope. Of the recipes given the easiest to prepare (at home if you wish) and perhaps the most satisfactory for regular use, is the one called (with apologies to Louisville dermatologists) Dew of Sahara. The very name suggests soften, soothe, beautify.

Whether a bath should be cold, cool, tepid, warm, hot is a question of individual preference as with many other matters of health or hygiene.

Except in really cool or cold baths somehow increase resistance to colds. Only the common respiratory infections, or what your favorite quacks call "colds."

The notion that an individual who takes cold baths or cool ones goes out of doors on a cold day without hood or blanket and who takes warm baths or hot ones without head cover or blanket will be protected because of their hair is dry.

The notion that a hot bath of one kind or another prevents so-called "breaks up" pneumonia, bronchitis, meningitis, influenza, diphtheria or other respiratory infections is all bosh.

These notions are all shockingly widespread, even among people who have never had the advantage of instruction in physiology and hygiene.

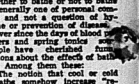
EYES FOR SPIRITUAL REALITIES

Many years ago there was a jolly, smiling fisherman named Peter Grim. Old Peter, who had died, was pictured as standing in spirit once in a while into the distraught household in which the old fisherman had lived. Those who were quarreling were never conscious of Peter's presence. The maid, whom, during his lifetime he had reproved every day to wind the clock, would go on performing this duty when Peter's spirit entered the room. Only the child of the household, Gretchen, was able to see and really saw the old man.



Peter Grim's visits witnessed the performance was aware of its testimony to Jesus' words explained. Only those people were conscious of the spiritual presence of Peter Grim whose lives were prepared to discern spiritual things. The querulous passed him by and never saw him. The sensual and the trifling were utterly unaware of his presence. Only the humble and the pure in heart fully sensed the reality of things.

Jesus put into the mouth of religion, this means that we become aware of the presence of God only if our hearts, minds, and souls are attuned to the beauty of spiritual things. Hatred, jealousy, evil passions of all kinds make us blind to the presence of God in the world. "Blessed are the pure in heart," said Jesus, "for they shall see God."

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GREATEST HOBBY OF ALL

The longer I live the more am I fascinated with all Nature. What an open book is this Book of Nature! From boyhood it has intrigued me, but each year had added to my interest and love of all things in the open. Increasingly are there published books about birds — the almost endless varieties, their habits, their calls and songs, and their kinship to each one of us.

Anyone can become a naturalist in his own right. And what a hobby it is — the greatest of all hobbies. To delve into it with loving relaxation, peace of mind, and an accumulation of interesting lore that will never leave one. Only recently I picked up at a second-hand book store a volume by John Burroughs, called "Squirrels and Other Fur-Bearers," that was published nearly fifty years ago. I got it for less than the price of a cheap lunch!

From this Burroughs book I learned what I had never known before, and it has told me things to watch for among the animals described. Burroughs made himself friendly with every animal and bird wherever he went. They were his neighbors all his life long.

It is impossible to pick up a single stone without learning something from its composition and history. For eighteen years I have lived upon a small island on Grand Lake in Nova Scotia. Once every year I learn something new about trees, foliage, rock formations, birds, and flowers. I never get bored with them. I am too busy eyeing about!

All animals and birds seem to fear man, yet when kindly treated and intelligently fed, they lose this fear. The red squirrels at my island are tame from year to year. I introduced them to peanuts! Even a pair of young ones showed no fear when I first discovered them, and soon had them as tame as their parents. It was better if they talk it all over among themselves.

There is a mental and spiritual stimulus to Nature loving, as a hobby. These animals in the wildland have many of our own characteristics. And the wildland flower offers to us its kindest smile. The more skilled we are to know, the more akin we are to the Creator of all.

Prince Edward Teachers Hold Convention

The Prince Edward County Teachers' Convention was held in Kingston, on Friday last, where they were guests of the Kingston teachers.

Registration took place between 9:30 - 9:55 at the Churchill School. From there, guides directed the teachers to various Kingston Schools, to observe teaching during the morning.

At noon the ladies of St. Andrew's Church served a delicious luncheon. After the meal, the President, Miss Viola Valleau, proposed the toast to The King with Miss Mary Huff at the piano.

Mr. F. P. Smith, inspector of Kingston schools, and former inspector of Prince Edward, welcomed the Prince Edward teachers to Kingston and recalled some of his experiences as inspector in Prince Edward.

Inspector A. F. Brown expressed appreciation to Mr. Smith, that the convention was held in Kingston and thought the day's experience should be helpful to all.

Mrs. Hugh MacDonald rendered a lovely piano solo "Valse Parisienne".

With Mrs. MacDonald at the piano, a number of Bloomfield teachers sang "Tiptoe Thru the Tulips", which was enjoyed by all.

Miss Helen Hobbs introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison, Art supervisor at Kingston schools. Under her direction, Kingston school art received many prizes at the C.N.E. last year.

Mrs. Harrison spoke on "New Methods in Art", and demonstrated her points with samples of art, done by Kingston pupils. She said that the reason for teaching Art is to help a child to be himself—an individual person. His efforts must be praised to help him feel secure.

When a child is allowed to draw his own pictures, the ideas come from within himself, and although they may not always understood by adults, they do mean something to the child. A child's Art should be judged by the enjoyment he has had in doing it.

Young children have natural instincts and their drawings contain the elements of excitement, or happiness or horror. By encouragement of his efforts, the child develops his talent.

Mr. Carl Reid moved a sincere vote of thanks to Mrs. Harrison for her very interesting and informative address.

Mrs. Edgar Matthews then expressed thanks to the ladies of St. Andrew's for an excellent meal, to Mr. and Mrs. Smith for planning to plan the convention; to Miss Hubbs for her help in securing the speaker; and to Miss Valleau and her executive, for their work in planning such a fine convention.

Miss Vera Pyne took the names of those who plan to attend the County Association meeting in May.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in observing more schools in Kingston. The following schools were used for observation:—Frontenac, Central, Churchill, Rideau, Victoria, Robert Meek, Portsmouth, Sydenham. The teachers of these schools served delicious teas to the guest teachers, both morning and afternoon.

Flowered Millinery

By ALICE ALDEN

PEEP INTO a millinery showroom these days and it is apt to resemble a florist shop or a flower garden bright with blossoms. The flower hat flourishes this season, as a quick glance will prove. The models range from all-flower toques touched with ribbon through flower-trimmed straws to dainty flower caps of the head-hugging variety. In the latter group is a charmer by John Frederics fashioned of delicate lavender and white lilacs. It is gently veiled with delicate lime green mesh that trails with brief streamers down the back.

Oldest Mother Honored on Mother's Day

A large congregation was present in the United church on Sunday evening to join in the annual Mother's Day service, which was under the auspices of the local Sunday School. The superintendent, Mr. William Slavin presided, announcing the hymns and offering prayer. The church orchestra, Mary Hare, pianist, at the piano and appropriate music was played during the offertory. The offering to be used in the varied work of the Religious Education Council.

The members of the Sunshine Girls' Club comprised the choir and presented a very suitable voluntary "My Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me."

Oldest Mother Present

Before the singing of Hallelujah, the president of the club Miss Beatrice Uens escorted the oldest mother in the congregation, Mrs. Rose, to a seat of honor at the front of the church. Miss Uens read a poem entitle "Mother" and then presented Mrs. Rose with a lovely bouquet of cut flowers as a token of esteem from the Sunshine Girls' Club of the Sunday School.

The choir was comprised of Misses Beatrice Uens, Narina Martin, Leona Uens, Helen Jackson, Doreen Carter, Myrtle Uens and Bernice Hendrix.

Mother's Day Story

Mrs. Ross Shetler told an interesting Mother's Day story, based on the life of David Livingstone. Of how he was sealed by a camp fire in Darkest Africa, and his thoughts wandering back to his old home in Scotland. He thought of his school days, in the class that not many were privileged to attend, on account of the lack of money and even though, his father was very poor, there was always money for his schooling.

David thought of the church where they walked three miles to attend, and of the Bible he was presented by a Sunday School teacher, which he cherished, and carried with him for years; of his last evening at home and the many questions his brothers asked, if he would be lonely, and afraid going away to an almost unknown country, but David knew God would be with him.

He thought of his father getting down the family Bible that last evening, and reading the 121st Psalm, and realized how much he owed to his home and Christian parents. Sealed that evening in strife, surrounded by dark inhabited natives, he thought what a blessing it had been.

Miss Doreen Carter and Mr. Ernest Crispe had charge of the Scripture readings during the service.

Farmer Famed For Writings In Icelandic

By DON WEIGHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg (CP) — Guttormur J. Guttormsson, 71-year-old Icelander who wanted to be a plasterer, has gained continental recognition as author, dramatist and poet of Canada.

Considered one of North American Icelandic literature's best, Mr. Guttormsson has been honored several times for his contributions to literature. He is the only prominent Icelandic Canadian poet born in Canada.

Writing "off-and-on" through "impulse" and only in Icelandic, he has had published four volumes of poetry and one of plays together with a volume of collected works. Many of his poems have been translated into English and French.

Among honors bestowed on him for his literary achievements was appointment last February as Grand Commander of the Order of the Falcon — Iceland's highest award to a civilian. His initial visit to Iceland in 1938 marked the first time an Icelandic-Canadian entered the country a guest of the nation.

The lean, tall farmer values the award more highly than a Nobel prize because Icelanders are extremely critical about their poetry." In a recent interview here before returning to his Riverton, Man., he said:

Writes of Pioneers

"Icelandic poetry is difficult to write or translate properly because it's more expressive. Much of the punch is lost in translation.'

"Candy Bar," his most widely-known poem, immortalizes the defeats and victories of Icelandic pioneers in Manitoba's Lake Winnipeg district. Throughout is a deep sympathy for the underdog, for those "whose luckless starting wrecks their ships."

Born Dec. 21, 1878, at Icelandic River (now Riverton), Guttormsson, tanned, wrinkled visaged shows his learned father has not He entered school at 12, intent on becoming a plasterer, but after a was short because "I couldn't spell the teachers . . . was not an ornament in the class."

After tackling the open road and short-term jobs in carpentry, construction, railroading and lumbering, he settled near Shoal Lake, Man., in 1910, later returning to his birthplace where since he has been "taking life easy the way farmers do." And he's there to stay.

"I'm straight from the soil and won't respect you for it," he says, "it's a sentimental feeling one gets."

Big Public Works Reflect Prospects

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) — Auckland, New Zealand's fastest-growing city, is about to enter on a period of major development works to cope with an even faster growth which is thought to lie ahead.

Thirty years ago Auckland was little larger than Wellington and Christchurch, the other chief towns, but today it has a population of almost 300,000, which is over 100,000 more than Wellington, the capital. Experts think that Auckland's population will be doubled in the next 25 years.

A large contract is to be let for the electrification of railways in the Auckland district by a British firm. In addition the suburban railway system is to be completely reorganized to handle the needs of a modern metropolis. Several new lines will be built and at least one will be an underground line beneath the central city area. Two of Auckland's leading underground railway experts have been retained as consultants for the project.

Another major work will be the construction of a great harbor bridge. Extensive surveys have already been made and Sir Ralph Freeman, designer of Sydney harbor bridge, has been engaged to prepare the design. The construction of the bridge will open the way for great development on the northern shore of the harbor, at present served by ferry.

Auckland has grown so rapidly that its present sewage system has proved inadequate. Sewage discharge has made the nearby beaches unsafe for bathing and a commission is now examining schemes for a system able to cope with the city's growing needs.

The city has become an important air terminus for international air services and surveys are now proceeding for the construction of an airport capable of handling the largest modern machines.

1,000 VARIETIES

More than 1,000 varieties of wheat have been identified in Australia.

The number of seats in the new House of Commons will be increased by 17 under the redistribution of provincial representation following the 1941 census. The redistribution, delayed because of the war, has been completed and the members elected to the new Parliament June 27 will total 262 instead of 245. The addition of Newfoundland as a province accounts for seven of the new seats. Four provinces gain seats, two lose seats and three are unchanged. In the case of Yukon-Mackenzie, the territory included in the riding was extended but it there will still be one member.—(CP Photo.)

Pope Receives Princess In Audience

Vatican City, May 11 — (AP) — Pope Pius Tuesday received Princess Margaret in a 20-minute private audience.

It was the first meeting of a member of British royalty with the Roman Catholic Pontiff in more than a quarter century.

Margaret made the visit despite protests in England by Protestant organizations.

The royal party drove through the Arch of the Bells in two cars. In the first car were Margaret, wearing a dark dress and veil, and Sir John V. T. Perowne, British Minister to the Holy See.

In the second were Maj. E. B. C. Harvey and Lady Mary Harvey, who have been accompanying the Princess on her Italian vacation.

The Princess left her automobile in the courtyard of St. Damasus, where she was received by a chamberlain. She then was introduced to Professor Bartolomeo Nogara, director of the Vatican museums, who accompanied her to the Station Chapel.

Veteran Politicians Out of N.S. Contest

Halifax — (CP) — Three veteran members of the Nova Scotia Legislature are not included among the candidates seeking election in the June 9 provincial election.

They are MacQuarrie, former attorney-general, was named to the bench of the provincial supreme court; J. Willie Comeau, former provincial treasurer-controller, was elevated to the Senate; and Dr. Frank R. Davis, former health minister, died.

Mr. MacQuarrie entered the House in 1933 after being defeated in an 1930 election for a House of Commons seat.

Mr. Comeau was a veteran Acadian member of the provincial House. He first entered the Legislative Assembly for Digby by acclamation in 1907.

Dr. Davis was health minister from 1933 to the time of his death, Sept. 16, 1948. He was first elected in 1925.

The two C.C.F. members who formed the official opposition after the 1945 general election are seeking re-election.

Russell Case, Antigonish, House leader, is running again in Cape Breton East, and Michael McDonald is contesting the Cape Breton Centre seat.

The C.C.F. has named Mrs. Lewis Shaw to contest the agricultural riding of Annapolis.

Colorful Opals From Australia For Trade Fair

By LESLIE BRODIE
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia — (CP) — The hunt for dollar-earning industries has ended in the opal fields of Australia's interior.

John H. Unger, a director of the Opal Cutting and Distributing Company of Australasia, has taken a collection of 300 Down Australian opals to the International Trade Fair at Toronto. Later he will take them to New York to stimulate United States interest.

The federal treasurer is backing Unger's efforts to establish dollar markets by making available to him an extra allocation of dollars.

Australia has a monopoly of them all beautiful gems. Coober Pedy, in South Australia, Lightning Ridge and Grawin bluffs in New South Wales have produced opals that are the envy of jewelers in other parts of the world.

Millions of years ago the formation of the opals began with the chemical mixture of silica and silicates. The chemical action attacked anything from flah to a dinosaur.

No two opals are alike and, so far, they have defied all efforts by jewelers to imitate them.

Looking into a good opal one may at first sight resemble Chinese writing in fire, fork lightning, or designs of colored stars floating up and down within as the opal is moved and the light plays in fascinating. The most prominent colors they show are blue, green, red, grey, black and yellow.

Prospecting for opals reached its height at the turn of the century, and in the early days most of the known fields are almost worked out.

Underground Town

The exception is Coober Pedy in that dry, hot patch of land almost in the center of South Australia. Most opals being marketed today come from that field.

Besides the world's biggest producer of opals, Coober Pedy has the distinction of being one of the world's few underground towns. It's named a "sanitarial for "white man lives in ground".)

Wind from the interior sweep through the area making it hard to keep a dwelling cool, unless, such as the diggers use, on the surface. Coupled with the wind is the heat which soars up to 130 degrees in the shade during the summer months. At night it is as cold as a mild Arctic winter is.

To dodge the elements the opal diggers built their homes underground and post office under the ground. The rooms are well ventilated, and comfortable. The old diggings at Coober Pedy were giving out about two years ago when a party of prospectors found a pocket of opal about eight miles from the town.

Little publicity has been given the new field. Only individuals that it is worthwhile come from Australia, such as Australian L. W. Parkin, a South Australian government geologist, who spent some time on the field. Parkin declared that a few thousand dollars spent on earth-moving equipment would return many times its stake-holders.

Should Unger's mission to Canada and the United States prove a success there is little doubt a sufficient money will be available for the equipment.

European Orphans Form Unique Club

Vancouver — (CP) — A club has been formed here whose teen-age members are Jewish orphans from European camps. It is known as the 'Ralph Foster Club in honor of a Vancouver pilot who died fighting in Palestine.

Each member has a background of terror in ghettos, concentration camps and underground. They were brought to Canada during the last year under sponsorship of the Canadian Jewish Congress and placed in foster homes throughout the city.

The club tries to make the youngsters feel secure during the period of their adjustment to their new homeland. Dances, sports and English language classes are arranged for them.

"It's the best way I know of instilling into them a knowledge and respect for the Canadian way of life," says Lou Zimmerman, director of the Red Feather Jewish Community Association. "They're catching on fast."

'Drys' May Use Old Convenant To Stop Sale

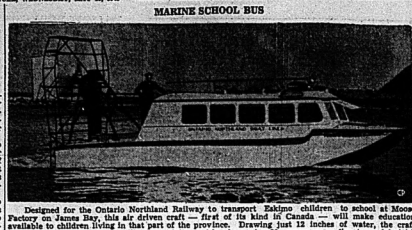
Parry Sound, May 11 (CP) — "Dry" forces in this Georgian Bay resort town may use a 78-year-old real covenant in order to prevent the sale of beer and liquor here.

The convenant was drawn up by William Beatty, a lumber dealer who once owned most of this townsite through a grant made by the crown. He was known then as "Governor" Beatty.

When Beatty sold his land to the town's first settlers he deeds included a convenant that no liquor was to be sold on the property. The penalty for breach of the convenant was that the land be returned to the Beatty estate. Since then, when any of the original Beatty land changed hands this convenant has been part of the deeds.

The Liquor Licence Board of Ontario recently granted a licence to sell beer to Cecil Sager who owns the Brunswick Hotel here. William Beatty, grandson of the "Governor" said Tuesday:

"As I understand it, any home owner in Parry Sound who has a deed containing the regulations laid down by my grandfather's convenant is entitled to bring action against a violator of the convenant."



C. E. Woodrow, solicitor of the board, said a Liquor Control Board retail store was built here in 1927 on Beatty land "and no objections were raised." He said he believed the convenant would be a matter for civil action between the property owners of Beatty land who wish to sell liquor and the Beatty heirs.

There are already two outlets in Parry Sound for the sale of beer —the Belevedere summer hotel and the Parry Sound Canadian Legion Club. Court records here show that the Belevedere Hotel was sold for tax in 1934. Court officials here said they believed that since the proceeds from the sale of the property went to the crown the convenant's clauses were not binding. The hotel obtained a beverage room licence the following year.

Some Centres Will Celebrate 24th on Monday

Toronto May 11 (CP)— Some Ontario municipalities plan to celebrate Victoria Day on Monday, May 23, but Ottawa officials said Tuesday banks and Dominion government offices will be closed Tuesday, May 24, as usual.

Cadbury and Wingham plan to declare a Monday holiday, giving workers a long weekend. However, civic officials in Toronto, London, Windsor, North Bay, Woodstock, Niagara Falls and Stratford announced they plan need to stick to the regular May 24 date.

Any municipality may appoint any day it wishes as a civic holiday under the Bills of Exchange Act, Ottawa officials said. The government has no power to enforce statutory holidays such as May 24 except in closing banks and giving holidays to Federal civil servants.

Japanese Deserters Lived Like Crusoes

Brisbane — (Reuters) — Two Japanese deserters who had hidden on Manus Island, north of New Guinea for five years lived like Robinson Crusoe until they were captured by Islanders recently.

Captain R. C. Clammer, an inspector of the Royal Papuan Constabulary, said during a recent visit to Brisbane, that the two Japanese had deserted from the Japanese army in February 1944, when the Allies landed at Los Negros.

The area in which the Japanese lived was taboo to the Islanders, whose lore related that at some time in the past a fierce tribal fight had occurred there.

The pair had hunted wild pigs and other game for food. To obtain salt, essential for health in the tropics, they had burnt a species of tree and used the ash.

The Japanese had not seen a man for five years.

Picket Lines At Orillia Quiet

Orillia, May 11 (CP)— Reinforced picket lines were quiet Tuesday as the ninth day of the strike at the Heywood-Wakefield Company, baby-carriage manufacturers, passed with no break in the deadlock between union and company.

The Orillia General Workers Union (C.C.L.) walked out in protest against what they called the "arbitrary dismissal" of 18 employees. Company officials claim the strike is illegal and that the union does not represent the majority of employees.

Two automobiles carrying foremen and office workers were stopped at the plant gates at noon but police opened the picket lines and the cars proceeded into the premises without further incident. Tuesday one car was overturned and there were numerous fights between strikers and non-strikers.

Mayor W. M. Seymour said the Ontario Labor Department had agreed to set up a board of inquiry if both sides agreed but George Brough, C.C.L. organizer, said he could not call off the pickets unless he was assured the discharged employees would be reinstated.

Town council has authorized the police committee of this town, 63 miles north of Toronto, to call in provincial police assistance if there is any recurrence of Monday's picket-line disturbances.

EXPLOSIVE SOLUTION

Lake Cowichan, B.C. — (CP)— Municipal officials were wondering what to do about the old provincial police offices here, overdue for demolition. The matter was taken out of their hands when some unknown person levelled the building with a dynamite charge. Police are investigating.

Backwoods Town Still Talking About Big Trout

Barry's Bay, Ont., May 11 (CP) —This backwoods settlement still is talking about Murray Daly's speckled trout—the monster weighing nearly 12 pounds, he dragged from Spectacle Lakes Sunday.

He caught it with worms and triple-hooked spinner while fishing in calm, shallow water, 50 feet off-shore. The trout took 20 minutes to land.

It came close to the word record for speckled trout, 14 lbs. 8 ounces, set by Dr. W. J. Cook in 1916 with a spoon in the Nipigon River, near Port Arthur. In New York, Field And Stream magazine said the prize-winning speckled trout in its contests for the last 9 years have averaged between five and eight pounds.

"It didn't put up as hard a fight as you'd imagine a fish that size would," Mr. Daly, a 39-year-old lumber operator, said Tuesday night. "It was in pretty shallow water. Maybe in deep water it would have fought more."

Mr. Daly said Fred Seely fishing "since I was born" but he'd never seen a speckled trout like that before.

Neither had any other fishermen in this district — 100 miles northwest of Ottawa. All day Sunday they drove to Daly's house to see the fish, lodged in the Daly refrigerator and later put in a cold-storage locker. Mr. Daly is having it mounted.

The fish broke water constantly during the 20-minute battle, he said, but the shallow water kept it from diving. He was still-fishing with an 18-pound test line and an ordinary casting rod when the trout struck.

Mrs. Daly—who does a lot of fishing herself—was like most of the anglers in the district. She, at first, didn't think it was a speckled trout. The average one caught in Canada runs at little more than one pound.

Largest in 20 Years

New York—The speckled trout weighing 11 pounds 12 ounces caught near Barry's Bay, Ont., was the largest in about 20 years, Field and Stream Magazine said Tuesday.

The monster was caught in the Spectacle Lakes by Murray J. Daly of Operaska Forks, Ont., it was reported Tuesday. The fish was said to measure 31 inches and had a girth of 19 inches.

The world record for speckled trout was set in 1916 when Daly tipping 14 pounds 8 ounces, the magazine said.

Winning speckled trout entered from the United States and Canada in the Field and Stream annual fishing contest in the last 10 years have averaged between five and eight pounds. In 1932 a 10 pounder took the prize and a 10 pound entry win appeared in 1935.

Automatic Set-up Routes 50 Trains On Single Track

(By RAE CORELLI)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Moncton, N.B. — (CP) —Three years] ago a sleepy, little eastern rail artery and juggle 50 trains a day between Truro and Truro, N.S. on a single-line track. Canadian National Railways officials recently described the $3,000,000 gadget which enabled one man in a tower and engineers on trains to Halifax swiftly, and at the same time handle westbound streams of raw material.

Central Train Control rides herd on traffic between Moncton and Truro, a 125-mile section of the main line to Montreal. When installed in 1941, C.T.C. here was the biggest in the world and the first under C.N.R. operation. Railway officials from South America and India have studied it before making changes in their signal systems.

Three train controllers — one for each eight-hour shift — manipulate a knob-studded switchboard, which covers every train it indicated by tiny red lights dotting a diagram of the Truro-New Moncton single track. Everything a controller needs to route trains safely and speedily — sidings, double-track stretches, signal locations — is displayed.

One of the myriad knobs is flipped and 70 miles away electrical beacon changes color. The engineer of an onrushing freight or passenger train, meanwhile, handle is turned, a switch opens, the locomotive picks up speed while the express flashes by.

Telephone Contact

Section and train crews maintain permanent telephone contact by 150 telephones. They may request the C.T.C. man to put a train onto a siding for way freight. If the controller has no approaching passenger train, he switches the track he closes or opens a switch. No switches can be operated manually without C.T.C. sanction.

A paper chart automatically records arrival and departure times at all points on the section. It also shows where and at what time trains pass.

Track position indicators serve another purpose. A break in the track severs the electric contact and the light nearest the fracture goes out.

At one time during the war, a harried controller found himself faced with 23 trains in the 35-mile stretch between Moncton and Springhill Junction.

"Ate my lunch between times," he observed.

Controllers say the system can handle much more than a double track and is safer. It is normally equipped with safety devices. One of these "freezes" a switch for five minutes after it is moved so that an accidental tripping of knob won't derail a train.

C.T.C. does the job of 22 men. There are no more train orders or feverish dispatchers. Six men along stretches of the network of steel signal towers and track mechanics.

LAST GRAVEL PIT

Edmonton — (CP) — Last major source of gravel within the city limits is being utilized. The new pit on the bank of the North Saskatchewan River is providing gravel for the 1949 public works program. Residents on the truck routes are protesting the dust nuisance.

Alberta Tomato Early Ripener

Edmonton — (CP) — Andrew Fruno of Edmonton has coaxed a tomato plant to ripening four to five days earlier than other good garden varieties in Canada by grafting the plant and the cross-breed is creating interest in university botany departments in Western Canada.

Fruno has been included in department of agriculture trials all across Canada and R. J. Hilton, associate professor of horticulture at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, reports the fruit ripened four to five days before the time handle weed varieties.

The university this year started the process of maintaining foundation seed of the early Alberta tomato.

The fruit, besides ripening early, is bright red, medium-sized and firm. Mr. Furnof is at present engaged in acclimatizing peach tree which he hopes will cope with Alberta winters and brief summers.

Sydney Faces Bleak Winter

Sydney, Australia, May 11 — (CP) — Sydney's 1,500,000 residents face a bleak winter.

Power shortages are causing blackouts so frequently that it is now a fair certain there will be no electricity to heat homes and offices during the cold months now approaching.

For some time the Sydney city council, which controls most of the city's electricity supply, has been urging the government of New South Wales to restrict the use of power in industry and so prevent a breakdown in supplies. So far the state cabinet has been unable to agree on an effective control measure.

One plan that looked as if it might be carried out would have cut power from industry one day in every four. Some cabinet members considered the step too drastic and it lapsed.

The possibility of cutting off power to various suburbs during peak hours is causing great hardship as well as loss of efficiency in many industries.

Poor-quality coal is a main reason for the blackouts. Engineers claim they cannot raise sufficient steam with the coal supplied them.

Equipment also is short. The load on existing plans is heavier than before the war but the equipment remains the same.

At the end of a game he is able to record every move. He dictates a complete record of the entry at the scoresheet.

The blind schoolboy used a Braille chessboard with one set of squares sunk into the board to enable him to distinguish between black and white. The chess pieces have round or pointed tops so he can recognize their color.

Oleo Regulations Go Into Effect Monday Next

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—The Ontario government Tuesday announced its regulations governing sale and manufacture of margarine in Ontario, which go into effect May 16.

The regulations limit coloring content to 1.6 per cent but there is nothing in the rules to prevent a manufacturer supplying additional coloring in a separate packet.

There also is nothing in the regulations to restrict the product's size or shape of containers.

The regulations supplement the margarine act passed at the recent session of the Ontario legislature.

The regulations provide for a manufacturer's licence fee of $100 and wholesalers licence fee of $5. The licences are revocable any time for violation of regulations or the terms of the act.

Margarine may not contain more than 80 per cent vegetable or fish oils or animal fat.

Oils must be specified on the package. It may not contain more than 16 per cent water. Milk solids may not exceed 1.4 per cent.

WINS HUXLEY MEDAL

London — (CP) — Dr. Julian Huxley has been awarded the Huxley Memorial Medal for 1949 by the Royal Anthropological Institute. The medal was instituted in memory of his grandfather, Thomas Henry Huxley.

Brighteners

Los Angeles (AP)—A rattlesnake bit 16-year-old Dave Franklin Saturday.

Dave, who is recuperating, identified himself as an amateur herpetologist, quite philosophical about the incident. He said:

"I was looking for snakes in Griffith Park ... and I was bitten the index finger. Doc, I invited his privacy. I attacked first, without warning, so he didn't warn me. fect May 16.

"I love snakes. They are less harmful than humans. They are closer to earth than we."

Russians Fired Shots at Fishermen

Hamburg, May 10 (Reuters) — A "frontier incident" occurred on the Elbe Monday night when Russian soldiers fired six shots at two German fishermen from Schnackenburg who were about to spread their nets on the British-occupied side of the river.

Schnackenburg is the British control-point for Elbe traffic.

After the shooting, a boat with a Russian officer and two soldiers aboard was rowed across the Elbe to the fishermen. The officer ordered them to jump in so that they could be taken to Luetkenwisch.

The fishermen refused and escaped over the bank into the British zone.

Refuse Exit, Visas To Scientists' Wives

Canberra, May 10 (Reuters) — Russian authorities in Germany have refused to give exit visas to the wives and families of certain German scientists brought to Australia by the Australian government, it was learned authoritatively today.

The Commonwealth government is understood to be asking for their release.

The alleged Russian attitude is said to have led other German scientists to refuse invitations to come to Australia. About 40 are in the Commonwealth.

REDS BREAK POLICE LINE

Vienna, May 11 (AP) — Communist demonstrators broke through a heavy police line today and besieged the headquarters of the Austrian Trade Union Federation. They were protesting a proposed new wage and price agreement approved by the federation.

The Communists shouted slogans denouncing the proposed agreement, which will boost prices along with wages of most workers.

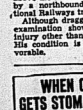
Several persons were knocked to the ground by police who tried to stop the demonstrations with clubs. No shots were fired. Police soon had the demonstration under control.

67-YEAR-OLD FATHER ADMITS CHARGE

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—William H. Bevis, 67-year-old father of eight children, was remanded to May 16 when he pleaded guilty Monday to obtaining $3,766 from the War Veterans Allowance Board and to six other charges of falsifying documents. Police said Bevis had signed a document admitting he falsified three certificates "showing my earnings much lower than they were because otherwise my allowance would be discontinued."

IN HOSPITAL A YEAR

St. Catharines, May 10 — (CP) —Gordon Holland, 28-year-old train accident victim of nearby Thorold, is expected to be in hospital for a year, it was announced today.



Holland had one leg amputated below the knee and the other above the knee after being struck by a northbound Canadian National Railways train last Sunday.

Although dragged some 15 feet examination showed no further injury other than a bruised back. His condition is reported as favorable.

CHROME FURNITURE MARKS: "How can I prevent tubular chrome kitchen chairs from leaving black heel-marks on my linoleum floors or waxed hardwood floors?" Simple answer to avoid these unsightly marks. Wind tube corner with colourless Scotch tape. Paint tubular runner with colourless nail enamel. Paste a thin strip of adhesive tape on the bottom of tubular runner.

CREAM OF RICE: "I have been advised by a pediatrician to use cream of rice cereal for my baby who is a coeliac. Where can I get this cereal?"
Sorry, we have not been able to locate this cereal. Canadian customs tell us it has only recently been taken off the restricted list for import from the United States; it may appear on the Canadian market soon. If anyone knows where it can be purchased, will they please phone this office, Elgin 9032.

SPRING CLEANED LEATHERETTE: "How can I clean wine coloured leatherette on my dining room chairs?"
Try saddle soap, following directions on the package. Finish with a coat of wax. Buff lightly but steadily.

FAMILY BOARD: "What is the cheapest board I could charge for a family of four? The group includes a working father, a mother, a girl of two and a baby of one year, who by the way is still on tinned food and was four or five pounds underweight."
Food for this family will cost you between twenty-five and thirty dollars a week. Fuel would be extra, wear and tear on clothing another extra. If bills were provided you should add, say the housing experts, another ten dollars a week.

MY WILL: "Where should I go to have my will made out? What will the charge be?"
Any lawyer will make out your will for you. Charge ranges from five dollars up, according to the intricacies of the document.

KEYNOTE SPEECH OF CAMPAIGN GIVEN BY DREW

Conservative Leader Says Party is Champion True Principles of Freedom

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sydney, N.S., May 11 (CP) — George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Tuesday night that his party "will at all times conserve the true principles of freedom."

In his first CBC national network broadcast of the federal election campaign, Mr. Drew said: "I do not believe that it should be within the power of any government, and particularly the present government of Canada to frustrate the freedom of any Canadian, without an impartial trial before our courts.

"An amendment can be made to the criminal code which will make it possible to deal effectively with those who are working to destroy the things we wish to conserve, without in any way limiting the full freedom of every Canadian who is loyal to Canada.

"There is abundant evidence that the present laws are not adequate to deal with the situation as it is today. I urged the government to replace section 98 of the criminal code with a properly worded section which would fully respect the freedom of the individual, but at the same time make it possible to deal promptly and effectively, before our courts, with those who are working to destroy our freedom.

Program Outlined

"We were informed that the law officers of the crown were giving careful consideration to this subject. That is the last we have yet heard of it from this government. The Progressive Conservative party will start such legislation if it is necessary to deal effectively with those who are working to destroy our freedom and establish a godless dictatorship in Canada."

In his speech, Mr. Drew laid particular stress on Canada's international relations following his broadcast he left for Newfoundland.

In the speech he reviewed the party's social security platform, and said it included these points:

"1. Adequate old age pensions at 65 without a means test.

"2. Additional sickness and disability benefits.

"3. Extended unemployment insurance benefits—to include payment for time lost due to accident or sickness.

"4. Family allowances regarded less as the number of children.

"5. A national health program.

Would Lift Ban On Relations With Spain

Toronto, May 11 — (CP)—The strike of the A. F. L. Building Laborers Union, seeking a union shop went into its 11th day today with no sign of any break in the deadlock.

The union seeks an agreement with the Toronto Builders Exchange that the latter's member contracting firms will not hire non-union members. Wages and hours are not in issue. A total of 3,000 building trades workers were said to be idle.

All industrial and commercial building by members of the Toronto Building Exchange now is shut down.

The Unionists have accused the contractors of refusing striking tradesmen access to their tools on company property, and charge that the contractors have refused to do business with the unions until the men return to work.

The contractors contend that the strike is illegal and that the union does not represent a majority of their employees.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST EAGLE SCOUT

Believed to Have Killed Schoolmate

Roanoke, Va., May 11 (AP)—Lee Scott, 16-year-old Eagle Scout and member of a church choir, today faced a charge of murder in the church slaying of Dana Marie Wenger, 16-year-old schoolmate.

Detective Frank E. Webb, in an unprecedented press conference Tuesday night, announced simply that Scott had been charged.

"That is all that I can give you at this time," Webb said. He added that he wished he could give more details but the case was one of the worst since I have been in the department."

Webb, however, did tell reporters that Scott had directed police to an alley where a coffee sack, missing from the church, had been found. Scott also told them where they could find his clothing, which was later found darkly-stained. They believed the stains are blood. A brown rope was also found in the coffee sack.

Dana Marie's body was found Monday morning by the janitor of Christ Lutheran Church in the church kitchen. There were signs of a desperate struggle by the girl, investigators said, and she had two pop bottles, one of them smashed, beside her.

Police said the girl apparently had been clubbed to death with a bottle.

She had gone to the church Sunday night to attend a 7:30 p.m. people's group, unaware that the group would not meet. She frequently joined the group on Sunday nights, although she was not a member of the church.

Police Tuesday received reports that Scott's car was recently seen. They proceeded to take him quietly from class in Jefferson High School to police headquarters, where he was questioned continuously from 1 p.m. until the warrant was issued at 9:15 p.m.

Scott's father, Everett Scott, an insurance salesman, was brought in to see him during the all day. He left the room weeping.

Judge Has Trouble Keeping Order During Trial

Montreal, May 11 — (CP) — One verdict was returned and one will be rendered in the case of 46-year-old Eugene Cloutier of Montreal, Que., who accuses his common-law wife of converting $1,000 of his funds.

He testified Tuesday and attended the jury when it rendered order. Judge Edouard Tellier was hard-pressed to keep the jury silent and the leather-lunged plaintiff discussed everything from religious differences that he thought of the earning capacity of certain lawyers.

The accused, Marie Claire Bernard, was charged with enhaving converted to her own use money Cloutier gave her for payment on some furniture. Lacombe said he lived as man and wife with the accused for four years and that he gave her the money in January last month.

Defence Attorney Gerald Legendre asked Lacombe if he proposed to marry her.

He lived alone, a bachelor, in a gloomy old house, Lacombe said, it was the family home for 87 years.

The body was found in a bedroom. There was a bullet hole through the right temple, and a pistol near the right hand. Police Sgt. Frank Zezgenka said it apparently was suicide.

In the same home the father had committed suicide, and the son there in 1922. The sister shot herself at another St. Louis residence in 1920.

First Summer Band Camp For Boys Will Open at Bramberg, Ont.

Waterloo, May 11 — (CP) — Five years ago a 120-year-old sawmill in nearby Bramberg started operations as Band Summer Camp. Ted Thiele, in his pursuit of a music centre for children of small communities. Today the saw mill has been replaced by a modern band camp.

In July some 50 Ontario boy bandsmen between the ages of 12 and 18 will enroll in the Dominion Band Summer Camp, an activity which has the sanction of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association. The faculty is comprising five professional instructors, will be under the direction of Dr. Charles O'Neill of the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

A combined auditorium and dining hall has been accommodated 1,500 persons for a concert and lunch at present. An infirmary, also completed, will be used as sleeping quarters for the younger boys. There will also be 50 huts, each accommodating eight persons.

Officials hope the musical education derived during the summer will enable the boys to carry on their band at home and eventually become teachers in their own community.

Applications For D. P's Must Be in Soon

Bay of Quinte district farmers desiring Displaced Persons as farm laborers on a yearly basis or to replace D.P.'s now working at various points available, were advised today by R. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office to have their applications in within the next ten days.

It was pointed out that ship accommodation for transporting these people to Canada has been cut and the number of D.P.'s coming to Canada will during the Summer months be greatly decreased.

During the past 12 days 26 D.P.'s have arrived in Belleville for placing on district farms, but the Summer months ship accommodation for ocean transportation will be limited to transports as large ocean going boats have now returned to regular service.

"If farmers desiring this type of help do not put in their applications within the next ten days, it may be late in the Fall before the help arrives.

Nominations

Neepawa, Man., May 11 (CP)—Justice Minister Garson told Liberals nominating convention Tuesday night that Progressive Conservative policies on Dominion-Provincial relations are opposed "lock, stock and barrel" to what John Bracken stood for when he was Premier of Manitoba and federal opposition leader.

The convention, called to name a Liberal candidate for the new constituency of Portage-Neepawa, nominated W. G. Weir, member of parliament for MacDonald.

Mr. Weir has been the government whip since 1945.

The Justice Minister accused Mr. Drew of attempting to develop a "new kind of opposition" in the Commons. "Recent proceedings had performed the functions of criticizing the government and of creating headlines to the people.

"This new streamlined 1949 model is something different. It is not really concerned with the people's business before parliament, but rather with publicity stunts designed to get headlines in the press."

Gordon Fraser Nominated

Peterborough — Gordon Fraser, member of parliament for Peterboro 1940, Tuesday night was nominated Progressive Conservative candidate for Peterborough West in the coming federal election.

Chief speaker at the meeting attended by about 300 persons was Hon. Leslie Frost, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto-Eglington in the last House. The meeting declared it was necessary for the people to return the Progressive Conservatives to power on June 27 to restore "responsible government."

Mr. Fleming attacked the Liberal government's "rule by order-in-council," stating that more orders-in-council had been passed since the war ended than even during the war. He said the monthly rate was 1,237 in wartime, but that since the war ended the rate of passage of orders-in-council was 1,302 monthly.

Blockade Ending May be Beginning Of New Campaign

Washington, May 11 (AP)—The ending of the Berlin blockade is counted in Washington as the victorious end of one battle in the cold war and the beginning of a new campaign.

State Secretary Acheson and his advisers are already deeply involved in preparations for this new struggle. It is expected to take form at the Paris meeting of the council of foreign ministers opening May 23.

The struggle now trouble western policy-makers. The first: What can the Russians do next? The second: How can the western governments counter it? Both are being examined toward Moscow if the Russians have any outstanding set of "peace offensive" tactics?

The answer to the first question is that the new turn in Russian diplomacy, as it is symbolized by the ending of the blockade, may emerge in the course of the Paris conference.

It may be shown, in the opinion of informed officials, that the Russians lifted the blockade primarily because it was a losing proposition. The intention in this case would be to insist on a big-four meeting immediately after the Paris meeting to get the cold war behind them.

The second: How can the Russians weaken the unity and determination and solidarity of the west, demonstrated in the Atlantic pact and the agreement on Germany, the Russians are seeking a truce in the cold war.

Officials say the answer to the second question depends largely on the answer to the first.

Say Action Taken By Constable Misunderstanding

Montreal May 11. (CP)—An incident in which 11 amateur photographers were detained when a constable caught them posing with a copy of the United States magazine Newsweek bearing a picture by police today as "just a misunderstanding."

Daniel Monahan, editor of the American commentary on political and economic affairs, which police heads demanding this disciplinary action be taken against the constable. He found it "incredible" that police would "intervene" in the subversive literature and been published.

Alfred Belanger, assistant police director, said the April 26 incident was a misunderstanding and "no disciplinary action was taken since it was not deemed necessary."

He said the constable saw the group posing for informal shots in downtown Montreal. When he saw one of them pull out a copy of New Republic and strike a pose he ordered the group to "follow me." As the police station they were questioned but no charges were laid.

GAIN FOR FREEDOM OF INFORMATION MARKED BY U.N.

Approve Draft of First World News Convention

Lake Success, N.Y., May 11 — (AP)—The United Nations Assembly's social committee Tuesday night approved a draft of the first world convention in the international translation of news and the right of correction.

The committee voted 27 to 0, with 12 abstentions for a preamble and 23 articles meant to guarantee correspondents against discrimination in seeking news and sending it across national frontiers. Fifteen countries were absent. Canada voted with the majority.

Erwin D. Canham, United States delegate and editor of The Christian Science Monitor, told reporters the committee's final version was "a net gain for freedom of information." The vote by a majority of the majority said they voted for it with admitted reservations.

Jacques Kayser of France told the committee he voted "yes with tepid feelings" but was sure the draft was at least a "positive" step.

India, Syria and Egypt all of whom abstained, gave notice they will fight for changes when the draft comes for final approval next this week in the general assembly.

Month's Discussion

The committee discussed the draft convention for just over a month. At one time the United States delegation said it was "completely unacceptable" because of a provision that would have bound a correspondent to "further international understanding" and peace and security in reporting facts.

That section was changed, however, to "promoting" such ethical duties without making them legally binding.

Canham said he felt the current draft, while still "not ideal," contained enough of the ideal binding obligations that could contribute to advancement of news of international peace.

He said these included a right to correct false or distorted reports. Under this, contracting governments would undertake to deliver corrections demanded by other governments and by private correspondents or agencies, but that newspapers or agencies must not be forced to publish or circulate them.

The United States also won the clutches of the House providing censorship in peacetime except for reasons of national safety and that "the press be regarded this as of "major importance" even during periods of tension, outgoing dispatches, is not expected to sign the convention.

Russia, the Ukraine, White Russia and Yugoslavia left the fourday debate on the draft. Czechoslovakia and Poland were absent.

EXPECTS TO BUY EGGS

London, May 11 — (AP) —The treasury of the United Nations Food Mission of Commons that Britain expects to buy $33,000,000 worth of dried eggs from Canada and the United States this year.

Sir Stafford Cripps, the treasurer's economic secretary, gave no breakdown for the two countries.

Jay also said that Britain has set aside $15,000,000 to buy pork from the United States.

Fantastic Story of Courage, Love And Devotion Told of Nurse in North

Quebec, May 11 — (CP) — A fantastic record of luck and endurance was told here today by Marie Antoinette Maloin's attempt to break out of ice-bound Ungava after a miscarriage of mother.

Marie Maloin, a tall, dark-haired woman with blue eyes, arrived here Tuesday by coastal steamer to find her mother had already been buried.

Her story of her arrival tells the chronicle of her life in the Ungava district of the Quebec province. There she serves as nurse, midwife, schoolteacher and what-have-you to the inhabitants of Blanc Sablon on the Newfoundland-Labrador boundary.

For nine months of the year the tiny village is ice-bound. With the blessing of the missionary priest, the 26-year-old nurse left it May 1. She was accompanied by Mrs. Alfred Tremblay and French-speaking Canadians who promised to get her through 150 miles of ice and sea in time to catch the

Chinese Commies Tightening Noose Around Shanghai

Reports Indicate Hankow, Big Chinese Port, Doomed

Shanghai, May 11 —(AP) — Chinese Communists, apparently living off the land, bore down swiftly today on coastal Fukien Province.

At the same time the noose around Shanghai was tightened.

The Nationalist garrison here officially admitted these Communist gains.

Unofficial reports indicated Foochow, big Yangtze port in central China, may be doomed. A three-pronged Communist assault on Hankow seemed to be gathering momentum.

The Shanghai garrison communique today gave this picture:

1. A Communist force of 2,000 men has attacked Kinki in Kiangsi province less than 50 miles from the Fukien boundary. Kinki is opposite the island of Formosa.

2. The Communists were attacking Kashan, 50 miles southwest of Foochow. Government troops with that city were severed at dawn. This usually means capture.

3. Thirty miles northwest of Kashan, the village of Chengpo in the Kunshan area was under Communist attack.

The communique gave no indication of the size of the forces threatening Shanghai. Most sections in that area have been on the alert.

The weight of the Communist offensive has been into southeastern China through Kiangsi and Chekiang provinces. This irregular front extends from Hangchow on the east to Lake Poyang on the west.

There were unofficial reports that a local Nationalist peace move was under way. The majority of 100,000 Nationalist troops there are expected to retreat southward before any large-scale fighting develops.

Here, in Asia's largest city, the problems of the war were overshadowed for most people by the grim economic worries. For example, a cup of coffee today cost half a million Chinese yuan.

No Recent Reports From R. N. Sloot

Shanghai, May 11. (AP)— A British source said today no reports have been received recently from the Royal Navy sloop, Amethyst trapped by Red gunfire in the Yangtze between here and Nanking.

The British source added "as far as know" crew members were still aboard and were being supplied. About half the crew of 150, including wounded, are reported reached Shanghai.

The spokesman said he knew of no plans or negotiations under way to remove the crippled Amethyst from its present position.

Three other Royal Navy ships, including the Cruiser London, were driven away by Communist artillery when they tried to aid the Amethyst last month.

Some 40 Chinese sailors were killed in the fighting.

PRIME MINISTER WELCOMED HOME AS NATIVE SON

St. Laurent Chose to Begin His Election Campaign in Home Town

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Compton, Que., May 11 (CP) — For the first time in years, a Canadian village Tuesday welcomed home a native son as Prime Minister of the nation. It was an occasion replete with tears and joy and feasting.

Prime Minister St. Laurent chose to begin in little Compton, a tidy little plain white house where he grew up, his campaign at the head of the Liberal party for re-election at the polls June 27. He will speak in several Newfoundland towns today.

On his first visit home since he took office as P.M. in 1948 a lusty cold with tears running quietly down his face and his wife on "from the crowd" and to rule for them. Among others for day, outside the wooden family house, outside the wooden family house under stood and wept under the emotional impact of the moment. Among them was Mrs. St. Laurent.

Band Ushers Him In

A band ushered him into the village of 1,000 nestled among the rolling countryside 15 miles from the United States border. There were several hundred others to carry the welcome on from there with cheers, smiles and solemn faces as Mr. St. Laurent spoke of his pride and pleasure "at coming home. Earlier, in speech to the students at St. Charles' Seminary, in nearby Sherbrooke, he had shown great emotion. Now he began to tell them he had never expected to return as Prime Minister when he departed from the school 47 years ago.

Compton, a pleasant, placid village, hadn't seen anything like this in years. People began arriving in the area at noon for the start of the big welcome home ceremony scheduled to share the moment.

At the Prime Minister's place of birth a reached Shanghai.

The spokesman said he knew of no plans or negotiations under way to remove the crippled Amethyst from its present position.

Three other Royal Navy ships, including the Cruiser London, were driven away by Communist artillery when they tried to aid the Amethyst last month.

Some 40 Chinese sailors were killed in the fighting.

Does Not Always Pay to Ask For Direction

That it does not always pay to ask directions of a police officer must be the thought of W. Spry, Toronto, who today drew a small bundle bars on a drunk driving charge.

And in addition to the drunk driving charge, in all probability the Toronto man will find himself charged with a second serious charge —one of issuing a false cheque.

It seems the man went to a service station to get fuel purchased a car, giving a cheque on a Toronto bank in payment.

And Mr. Spry drove to Belleville and apparently became confused as to directions. In any event he asked a police officer the way to Toronto and that officer promptly arrested him on the drunk driving charge.

Today it was found Mr. Spry had no account in the bank to cover the cheque issued in payment for the car. Police Chief J. Spratt of Tweed, since the man was there, charged with issuing a bad cheque.

Receives Burns

Neil Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery, was badly burned last week, when a fire cracker ignited his clothes. He rushed into the house where his mother extinguished the burning clothes. Neil suffered a bad burn to his legs, and required doctor's care for three or four days. Several instances have been reported of children being burned by fire crackers this year. Girls have had holes burned in stockings and dresses from fire crackers thrown by would-be pranksters, and one store in Frankford had a large hole burned through a new awning, by a fire cracker thrown on top of it. It is hoped that the children, both young and old will take these accidents to heart, and exercise more care in the use of fireworks in the future.

Never-Correct ... Tuxedo at Day-time Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Would a tuxedo be considered "correct attire" for a bridegroom to wear at a small home wedding to be held late this month at three o'clock in the afternoon? If not, what would be suitable? The bride and her attendants are to be short-tiered swiss gowns, the bride wearing a finger-tip veil. We want simplicity to be the keynote of the wedding ... no ostentation ... and would appreciate your advice.

H. M.

A tuxedo cannot be considered "correct attire" for a bridegroom or an attendant to wear at any type of wedding in the day-time. It is not that a tuxedo is "simple attire" or inconsiderate attire ... the impression it makes but not necessary ... he may wear a dark blue business suit.

A Small Plate Should Also Be used

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

When, at a luncheon or dinner, the first course is, say, chilled or jellied soup, a bouillon or cream soup cup on a tail or footed dish, and a glass of tomato juice or a fruit juice ... is placed on the service plate, is it necessary to use a small plate underneath any of these? That is: (1) service plate, (2) small plate, (3) container, cup or glass.

Hostess

For correct service ... yes, the small plate should be used also. If it isn't, the place-setting and service looks unfinished.

Thank-you note for wedding gift of money

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you please give me some suggestions as to how to write a thank-you note to an employer and his wife, for a gift of money as a wedding gift? Should one refer to it as a "generous gift of money," or as a "generous gift"? Does one have to tell how the money will be used?

When writing such a note, is it proper to begin ... "John and I thank you very much ..."? And should the note be signed "Sincerely, Anne," or should it be signed, "Sincerely, Anne and John"?

A. M.

My suggestion is that in your first bow of appreciation you refer to this present as "the wonderful wedding present" or "something equally enthusiastic" and then use "generous" to apply to the givers, not to the gift. Also, if possible, tell what you are planning to buy with the money-gift ... but this is not absolutely necessary if you say something about plans. For example:

Dear Mrs. Thompson,

How good you and Mr. Thompson were to send us such a wonderful wedding present! John and I thank you both, with very special thanks, for your kindly message of good wishes and for your kind and generous plan to make us so happy. And happy you did make us, for the fun of having such a joyous time deciding to make a "dream come true" for our new home. We haven't yet quite decided on our purchase, but we have several high-hearted plans, and when we have finally decided, I hope you will both come to see your gift in position in our new home!

John and I thank you again many, many thanks for your kindness, and we both send friendliest greetings.

Sincerely,

Anne Mitchell

Right Make-up for Your Eyes

After Movie Star Susi Crandall h Finishes by running an eyebro By HELEN FOLLETT

YOU may forget the charm of a girl's hair, the graceful contour of her lips, but you never forget her truthful eyes, if she has them. If they are warm, sparkling, animated they make a forceful impression. This girl will never be a wallflower. Smiling orbs with a come-hither look make easy prey of the members of the stern sex. They are an expression of amiability and good nature.

Ordinary, run-of-the-mill eyes can be glorified by the artful use of a few little tricks that every girl should know. A little mascara on he upper lashes will form a dark frame that brings out the color of the eyes. Don't put it on the lower lashes. Often there is a little skin around them and the pigment may run. If the winkers aren't as long as you would like to have them, apply mineral oil every night. The growth will thicken, and the girl in the mirror will be as you would have her.

Of cosmetic counters you will find a wide selection. The blue-eyed girl will notice that there are several shades of blue; she must acquire one that will give accent, not conflict with the color of her eyes.

Fight wrinkles before you get them

Wouldn't it be grand if somebody would discover a magic vitamin that would keep wrinkles away? Until that time comes we will have to depend upon health, a sunny disposition, nightly sessions with the massage cream. If you start early enough to keep the facial tissues firm, you ought to be able to stave off wrinkles as long as you live. There are old ladies of seventy and eighty whose faces are satin-smooth. Long ago, they learned something about the art of living, fighting worry, being at peace with one's soul. That is the secret. A good digestion helps, too.

There are many reasons why the tissues of the face go into a state of dissolution, leaving the skin covering far too much for it. It falls into tiny creases. Loss of sleep will do it in a hurry, because nature has no chance to rebuild cells. The diet may not provide all the necessary elements for repair. Emotional storms will raise the dickens, even with faces that are still fairly young in appearance.

Haefner, Passed up by Indians In Winter Deal, Comes Back to Haunts Tribe With One-Hitter

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Bill Veeck, dynamic head of the Cleveland Indians, may have pulled the boner of the year when he chose pitcher Early Wynn over Mickey Haefner in the Tribe's five-man winter deal with Washington Senators.

Haefner didn't add to Veeck's joys Tuesday when he pitched the Senators to a brilliant 1-0 shutout over the Indians in Cleveland. The little hurler allowed only one hit—a first-inning single by Larry Doby—as the amazing Nats rang up their eighth consecutive victory and their third in a row over Cleveland.

Haefner would be pitching for the Indians today had not Veeck been scared off by his advanced age of 36, and his unimpressive 1945 record of 5-13.

To make Tuesday's completed bust for Veeck and his Indians, Washington's winning hit was delivered by first baseman Eddie Robinson, one of the principals in the deal between the two clubs.

Robinson, a member of Cleveland's world champion team last year, scored Stanley Roberts from second with a fourth-inning single, one of his two hits.

Tied For Fourth

The victory, coupled with Philadelphia's triumph over Chicago White Sox, left the Senators and Athletics tied for fourth place in the American League at an even .500 percentage.

Hal Newhouser, Detroit's sterling southpaw, had a no-hitter until the fifth inning when New York Yankees raked him for two runs and went on to knock him out of the box in the ninth inning to defeat the Tigers 6-1. The victory increased the Yankees' league-leading margin over the Tigers to four games. Allie Reynolds went the route to register his sixth victory against one defeat.

Yogi Berra, Yankee catcher, was hit on the head by a thrown ball during infield practice before the game. He was taken to a hospital where X-rays showed no fracture.

Gerry Priddy batted in both runs to lead St. Louis Browns to a 2-1 victory over Boston Red Sox. The victory stopped a 10-game losing streak for the Browns. Priddy doubled in Dick Kokos with the St. Louis run in the third inning, and broke up the game in the last of the ninth with a home run.

TURNING THE PAGES OF "CANADA UNLIMITED"

When Canada was growing up, hewing a living from the virgin forest left little time for holidaying. By the 1790's, visits to distant friends were rare events. Many travelled three hundred miles by sleigh in winter to see their friends.

Picnics were popular by 1825. While the men fished, the women picked berries, and all joined for lunch. In Springtime, excursions to the woods for "maple-sugaring" were greeted with delight.

With the arrival of the automobile about 1900, and improvement in the roads, people began to travel to "see the sights". Niagara Falls, Muskoka or the Laurentians, became a common holiday pastime.

Today, tourists are big business. Canada is a vast wonderland, with countless surprises for the sightseer—and each year millions of Canadians and visitors tour our land. The opportunities that exist in the tourist industry are many—and there's room to grow in Canada Unlimited.

Just how much room is told in "Canada Unlimited", an illustrated 144-page book published by the O'Keefe Foundation. You may obtain your copy by sending 25c in cash (no stamps or cheques) to "Canada Unlimited", Dept. N3-8, O'Keefe House, Toronto, Ontario. Please print your name and address clearly. Ottawa, May 11—A team from the Regina District Office has been declared winner in a coast to coast mixed bowling tournament conducted by the Taxation Division, Department of National Revenue. To this team will go the Ambassador Trophy representing the mixed team bowling championship presented two years ago for annual competition by Mr. C. Fraser Elliott, K.C., C.M.G., former Deputy Minister and now Ambassador in Chile.

197 teams from 21 District Offices located all the way from Vancouver to St. John's, Newfoundland, competed for the trophy. Results were mailed in to Ottawa from all districts and the winners of the various prizes were announced today by the trustees of the trophy, Messrs. E. W. Culver, R. M. Bligh and L. H. Pereira.

Six teams from the Belleville District office competed in the tournament and they played their games at the Bowl-O-Drome on April 22nd. Ed. Silver of the Belleville District won the prize for second high single with a score of 394.

A Regina team, captained by W. Pitchers, proved a total pinfall of 3,444 to win. They were closely followed by an Ottawa Head Office team with a total pinfall of 3,403 while another team from Regina, with a total pinfall of 3,324, ran third. A team from Quebec City placed fifth while other teams from Ottawa Head Office won the fourth and sixth positions.

A feature of the tournament was the high single of 363 registered by Mr. L. Ready of Kingston who having won the High Game Award, could not also qualify for the high single prize.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Not only does Jackie Wardaugh, versatile young athlete of the city rate tops in hockey, baseball and softball, but he brought to Eldorado Recreation Hall last night with a billiard cue. Jackie, is the newly crowned "snooker" champion of the Northern Ontario Billiards and Snooker Club, as Jimmy Colligan, chairman of the club, informs us.

Jackie who fields the hot corner in baseball and softball and does a remarkable job on a hockey team forward line, wes the N. C. title this from a long list of entrants in the recent tournament sponsored by the club which has a membership of well over 300. Runner-up in the competition Wardaugh was John Zeppell with Eric Rickets and Charles (Chuck) Doyle finishing in third spot with the scores.

Presentation to the winners will be made at a later date. The 1946 club play will start in September with tournament play galling under way early next year. The N. E. Snooker and Billiards Club is the first of its kind to be inaugurated in this city and we are told, in the athletic history of the club.

Ted (Teeder) Kennedy popular captain of the Toronto Maple Leafs who won the Stanley Cup for the third consecutive time last season will be in the city for a personal appearance night. With the "Teeder" will be the dynamic Howie Meeker, star forward of the Leafs, who was an outstanding player all season for the Toronto club. Date has not as yet been set but in the league playoffs or Stanley Cup series because of injuries. The two popular members of the Maple Leaf hockey officials at the drawing of the automobile being offered by the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion, in the Jack Meier Show in the Armouries on May 18-19 and 20th. The draw for the car will be made on Friday evening. A number of other handsome prizes are being offered and the two Leaf hockey stars will formally officiate at the drawing for the prizes.

Herewith is a letter from Dick Bridgeman, baseball player and coach and also sports scribe of the Trenton sheet. It speaks for itself.

"I understand that there is some talk of a Juvenile baseball league being formed in Belleville this year and if so, I believe we could get a club from Trenton, if the loop would be willing to accept an entry from this city. I was in the league 1 also played baseball in Trenton and had a Juvenile "A" and a Senium "A" entry that competed in the OBA playdowns. Recently organized baseball competition with the Kingston Ponies, who went on to capture the provincial crown. I will not be looking for a baseball berth this year, but someone else can likely be found to handle the club. I am quite sure that we can field a club that would be able to hold its own in the league" (sans Belleville loop.

"I would appreciate it if you could pass this on to the proper source. If a Juvenile league should be formed and a Trenton entry would be considered, I would forward my league within forty-eight hours notice whether Trenton would be a definite starter or not.

"Also I would like to know if there is any possibility of baseball being operated in Belleville this year. I had a nice team last year for its first year in baseball, and with practically the entire club again available, the team should be considerably stronger. With no club nearer than Peterborough and Kingston, our club is forced to accept a bye into the OBA playoffs. With no intermediate "A" series or exhibition games and not too much in funds, it is difficult for the team to get in sufficient practice. With Belleville operating a possible last about double that of Trenton, I feel that Belleville might be able to field a couple of clubs. If such a league could be formed, the winner would represent this district in the OBA playoffs. Acting as a conveyer for OBA minor playoffs, Mr. Hayden of Hamilton informed me that Trenton would be granted a bye into the playoffs only if no district league was in operation. In such a case he advised that the winner would be the district representative."

Dick can be reached at 22 North Scott St., Trenton.

Chuck Burnett's Kiwanis Junior baseballers will get their first test tomorrow night at the Trenton Air Station where they meet Sergt. Mike Kelly's Trenton Flyers in an exhibition till. The game gets under way at 6.30 and should be a fine weekend for both squads. The youngsters have been practising hard the last ten days or so, and by the same token so have the airmen. Mike tells us he has a southpaw he is "out of this world" whatever that means, and in general the team is as good if not better than last year. The Juniors have a well-balanced squad and should give a good account of themselves against the boys in blue.

Eleven years after starting his professional career, Sid Abel, Detroit Red Wings' captain, became the recipient of hockey's highest individual award. Abel attained hockey's most prized possession when he was named winner of the Dr. David A. Hart Trophy for 1945-46. This beautiful piece of silverware is presented annually to the player in the National Hockey League adjudged to be most valuable to his team and Abel is the second Detroit player to annex the trophy since it was first presented in 1924. The 31-year-old centre who was the top point scorer in the National League for the X-Army City 9 Buffalo 5; Baltimore 4 Rochester 2. season is also enriched by $1,000 from the National Hockey League for his outstanding performance in winning the Hart Trophy.

It was strictly a two-man race for the trophy, with Bill Durnan, Montreal Canadiens' goalkeeper, finishing seven points back of Abel. Durnan was installed as favorite in the balloting while Durnan, 1944-45 Vezina Trophy winner and the NHL's shutout king, ended up with 24 points. The panel of 18 sportswriters and sportscasters, three from each NHL city, went all out for Abel and Durnan in their selections. Abel was either a first, second or third choice of all but one of the 18 selectors, while only two of the 18 failed to pick Durnan for one of their choices. Points were awarded on the basis of three for a first choice, two for a second and one for a third.

Sam Breadon, Former Owner Of Cards, Dies

St. Louis, May 11 (AP)—Sam Breadon, the "Devil Baruns" of the baseball world, is dead.

The 72-year-old former owner of St. Louis baseball clubs died of cancer Tuesday night. His wife and their daughter, Mrs. Robert E. Hall, were at his bedside.

In 27 years as head of the Redbirds Breadon led the club to nine pennants and on six occasions went on to a world championship.

He was an excellent business man, but he hotly rejected the role of shirtsleeve sense people cast upon him.

From a $300 initial investment in 1917, however, Breadon built up the club to a $1,000,000 organization—the amount he is reported to have received from Robert Hannegan and Fred Saigh in 1947. Saigh later bought out Hannegan.

Breadon became president of the Cardinals in 1920 after he had purchased a majority of the stock.

In 1925 Breadon brought Branch Rickey into the front offices where the pair made the best office team the sport has seen.

Together they started the farm system under which minor-league clubs were helped financially or bought outright.

The amazing side of Sam Breadon was the secrecy which surrounded his generosity to players and game officials.

His constant help to Pitcher Grover Alexander now is generally known, but for years Breadon would allow nothing to be said of it.

The one time Breadon let someone else make up his mind was in 1938 when he let Rickey talk him into firing Frankie Frisch. Ray Blades followed at the helm, had one good year, then slipped. Breadon released Blades in 1940 to head man.

Toronto Leafs Win in Eighth From Chiefs

(By The Associated Press)

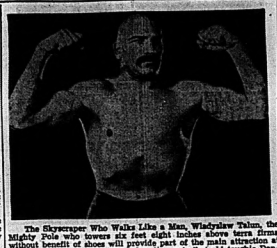
Pitchers Al Widmar and Wes Ferrell, once the property of Boston Red Sox of the American League, are making life miserable for batters in the International league.

Both right-handers Tuesday night turned in their fifth victories of the season, Ferrell pitched Jersey City Giants to a 5-3 victory over Buffalo Bisons and Widmar hurled Baltimore Orioles to a 4-3 decision over Rochester Red Wings.

Bailey's triumph enabled the Giants to recapture first place from the Bisons. Jersey City now leads by a full game.

Widmar held the Red Wings to five hits while his mates collected eight.

Newark Bears trounced the defending champion Montreal Royals 9-4, clinching the game with a five-run seventh inning. Lou Culberson and Ted Sepkowski led Newark's 13-hit attack with three singles each.



Toronto Maple Leafs came from behind and slipped Syracuse Chiefs 7-6.

The Chiefs knocked off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on homers by Al Mels and Carden Gillenwater, and added another in the fifth before the Leafs struck back.

Pitcher Hector Lou Heyman blasted his fifth homer of the season with two on in the last of the fifth and the Leafs added two more in the sixth to tie the count. The Chiefs deadlocked the count in the seventh, but the Leafs managed to stalemate for keeps in the eighth with two runs.

without consulting Rickey.

That led to the split between the two, with Rickey eventually going to the Brooklyn Dodgers as head man.

The Skyscraper Who Walks Like a Man, Windyslaw Talun, the Mighty Pole who towers six feet eight inches above terra firma without benefit of shoes will provide part of the main attraction at Memorial Arena Friday night when he meets that old toughie Dangerous Dan O'Connor who hails from the land of the Shamrock. Both have been seen in action here before and the rough uncouth style of the stratospheric Pole should meet its match in the equally tough style of the O'Connor. Popular Pat Flanagan has a job on his hands when he tangles with the Arkansas mountaineer. Bill Lee, while Irish Tom Collins meets Big Ben Morgan in the opener.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Today's picture illustrates well how the hands pass under the upped body in the beginning of the player continues this swing till the back of his shoulders face the ground. Then he will continue to take that club back and up in the same plane. When he has reached the top position his hands will be behind his right shoulder. Gathering your backswing in this fashion leaves you correctly poised at the top of the backswing for that momentary pause before you start slowly down from the top. As you start down with your hip pivot, followed by your shoulder pivot, the downswing of the arms and finally the wrist throw — all these functions blending successively into the stroke, the result is that your clubhead is traveling at maximum speed at impact with the ball. And it's all done rhythmically. You must have rhythm to get the right timing and to prevent any part of the body being out of correct relationship with the other parts during the swing. When you press or swing too hard you destroy the rhythmic balance of the forces contributing to the stroke.—(Copyright 1948, John F. Dille Co.)

Brandon Kings Back in Running For Memorial Cup

Brandon, Man., May 11 (CP)—Brandon Wheat Kings have a King sized vested interest in their win column today which they needed more than any other in their struggle to the Memorial Cup final.

Their 2-1 win over Montreal Royals Tuesday night — fashioned by captain Frank King — reduced the Royals' margin to 3-2 in games in the best - of - seven Canadian junior final. The other game ended in an overtime tie.

The teams, both striving for their first Dominion title, will meet in the seventh game here Thursday night.

The deciding goal last night came from the stick of King, the Brandon payoff man all along the Memorial Cup trail. The counter spoiled the fighting Brandon captain into the lead in the series' individual point - scoring race. He has scored five goals and three assists for eight points, one more than Montreal's Gordie Knutson.

The tally also served to back up a fighting pep - talk that King gave his team mates at their last practice session. Wheat Kings took a new lease on life and skated hard both ways for the full 60 minutes to prolong the series.

Sharing the spotlight with King was spectacular Ray Frederick, who rose to great heights, especially in the dying minutes of the contest to break the Royals' hearts. A tie would have ended the series but Frederick, cool as a cucumber, kept the Memorial Cup in storage by turning aside seven point - blank shots in the last minute.

Three Majors

Brandon went into a 1-0 lead when Angus Jackes, tireless little winger, netted the first counter. The lead was short-lived, however, when Bill Rattray tallied a minute and 20 seconds later. King's goal came at 9:35 of the middle period and the third period went scoreless.

Royals held a decided edge in the final period but their deluge of rubber found no holes in Frederick's armor.

At the other end of the rink, Bobby Bieau of Royals, although not as busy as Frederick, again turned in a solid performance. He had little chance on the two drives that escaped him.

Led by Captain Bob Frampton and Knutson, Royals outshot Brandon 37-34 over the route.

Three major penalties were handed out — two to Wheat Kings and one to Royals. But no goals were scored while either team was short-handed.

Knutson became involved in a battle with a spectator after the Montreal forward had entered the penalty box. The belligerent fan punched the Royal centre in the face and received Knutson's stick over the head before being escorted by police to the rink exit.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 11 (AP)—The movie double feature gets a formidable foe—Walt Disney.

The cartoon wizard has started a series of half-hour films called "True Life Adventures." The first is an exciting bunk of nature study, "Seal Island." Coming up "The Life of the Beaver" and "The Atom." Says Disney:

"I claim that public would rather see 30 minutes of exciting entertainment than two hours of $1,000,000 boredom.

Disney admitted he would have trouble selling some theatre managers on the idea of running a feature, a half hour subject and some shorts. He had a job convincing RKO too.

"They wanted me to lengthen the 'adventures' into features. But I would have to pad them and they would be less interesting.

Besides, 30 minutes is a good length for showing them in schools.

"And," he added with a glint in his eye, "television."

Gambling Weekend

Last weekend saw a strange sight in Las Vegas. The after-related Nevada pleasure town sponsored the premiere preview of a picture called "The Lady Gambles."

This had been likened to a liquor company's endorsement of "The Lost Weekend" a few years back.

Indeed, the new film does for gambling what "weekend" did for drinking.

Just as Ray Milland was a sucker for rye, Barbara Stanwyck falls for a pack of cards. Milland wound up in the alcoholic ward, and Stanwyck sinks to shooting loaded dice up an alley.

Las Vegas is described in the picture as a town of "quick marriages, quick divorces and quick money." But if that wounded the civic pride, it wasn't noticeable.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You never know what will happen next in a championship battle. There are when you get talked out of a good bid. Or a game. Or even a slam. As in the deal shown here:

♦ Q J 7532
♣ Q 10 4

WEST
♠ A K Q
♥ Q 10 5
♦ K 8 6
♣ 9 8 6 2

EAST
♠ J 9 8 2
♣ K J 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠ 7 4 3
♥ A K J 9 8 4 2
♦ 10 4
♣ None

At most tables the south hand declarer passed. It is not a bad opening bid of one, of course. To open with one a player needs four high cards or five other things. Only two highs are here.

The opening of one spade in a suit promises not less than nine tricks. This hand counts only six. They are his two high cards, one for the short in diamonds, three for his shorts in clubs.

Due to his unusually long distribution, a seventh trick will come in. But these are not nearly enough for an opening bid of two. Even with one more trick somewhere it would not be a bid.

Some players like to use a hand like this for an opening bid of three hearts. Not because such a bid is correct by rule. They do it for a semi-intentional, self-preserving bid.

A true opening of three in a major suit promises eight tricks. The suit should be practically solid with not more than one loser in the suit. And there must be a sure outside trick in the ace.

This hand certainly does not qualify for a correct bid of three hearts. It lacks at least one trick in the suit. It lacks a sure outside trick; an ace or K Q outside of trump.

If it is anything, it is an opening of four hearts. Call it a preempt or a sacrifice or an unmitigated urge. Its purpose is to take a defeat that will be less than opponents could make.

At least one south opened with four hearts. It was doubled and went down three for a loss of 500. Later 11 was learned that 4 spoons had a cinch slam in clubs that would have paid 1470.

Some would readily purge an uncontrollable urge.

Derby, England — (CP) — Dr. A. E. Hamlin says Britain's new national health scheme has changed the popular treatment for headaches.

Noting that 62,077 sight tests for spectacles had been conducted under the scheme in the Derby area, he said: "Previously the treatment would have been a couple of aspirins."

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London — (CP) — Billy (Last Race) Cook is the latest hot-shot Australian jockey to start winning his spurs all over again on the English turf.

Following the trail blazed by such top-notchers as Bas (Crocodile) Johnstone, Tommy Burns and Carner Bird, Cook moved in from "down under" this season and speedily established his popularity with fans and owners.

Riding at a slight 105 pounds, he can get plenty of mounts. Few first-class English veterans can weigh out at much less than 110, and the experience Cook brings to the riding helps a lot in a tight finish. Like many other athletes, he's in his prime about his age, but he's at least 40.

For years, so the story goes, Australian Bas figured the best way of collecting the "get-away stakes" after a tough day at the track was to bet Cook's mount in the last race. So often did the "system" work that Cook won his present sobriquet.

Like Bird, he's already landed a couple of last-race winners, and scored eight victories in a single separate as second-best jockey in the country. Bird has had his share of flat-racing. Current leading winner, as usual, is fireless Gordon Richards.

Best traditions of the British turf have been upheld by established jockeys in races where Cook has taken part. There's been no attempt to jostle him or box him in on the heels — something that English jockeys frequently complain of when they travel to France.

Breezy was the word for what happened to another jockey, amateur Jack Ayden, when riding his own horse Cordeac in the Hitchcote Corinthian Stakes at Salisbury.

In the saddling enclosure, Cordeac bucked and dumped his rider on the seat of thin air, but his pants Askew was caught on a bit and hers were split right down the middle.

There was no time for repairs before the field went to the post. Not surprisingly, he lost the race. Commented the Press Association, in reporting the race:

"If the merit of Cordeac was unknown, much of his rider's form was exposed."

Britain's oldest former professional jockey, Fred Crickmore, is dead. He was 86.

His two most notable victories came in 1871 when he won the City and Suburban Handicap at Epsom on Spigot and the Stewards' Cup at Goodwood aboard Anton. In each race he defeated the great Fred Archer, up on the favorite.

Five feet tall and scaling 98 pounds, Crickmore did most of his racing in France for Baron Rothschild. He retired 46 years ago.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Shorty Judge and Lucky Leroy war bragging about not being able to do anything without having it turn out lucky, saying, I bet you can't guess what happened to me this morning.

Aw, I bet you tripped and broke your ankle, and a solid gold diamond dropped out of it, I said.

Being sourcastic, and Lucky said, You're on the rite track all rite. My coat caut on a nale and the lining tore, and there was 4 cents back there that I didn't ever remember I ever lost, so it was like finding brax new money, he said.

Aw, you think you're grate, dont you? Shorty said, and Lucky Leroy said, Well, I may not be so grate, but I'm certainly lucky.

Aw back, let's change the subject, I said, and Shorty said, lets have a race up to the corner, and the last one there is a old woman.

And we started running all our mite, and Leroy was away ahead on account of getting a lucky start, and all of a sudden he slipped and fell down and came walking in last, rubbing his knees and me and Shorty yelled, You're an old woman, Leroy! an old woman.

Which just then somebody said, What's wrong with old women?

Being a old lady with a cane, anyway I'm 81 years old and could beet you boys at lots of things and don't you forget it. I'm proud of being an old woman and its nuthin to call a boy just because he falls down and hurts himself. Look at his poor knees. Here, boy, here's something for you, she said.

And she gave Lucky Leroy a dime and kept on going, and I said, Aw heck, good nite.

What did I tell you? Lucky said, and Shorty said, Aw what's the use?

Which what is?

Bomber Opens His New Office In Chicago

Chicago, May 11 (AP)— Promoter Joe Louis opened his new office Tuesday and then shadow boxed with questions about where the business would flourish.

Joe conceded that his International Boxing Club was on the verge of hooking up Madison Square Garden in New York with Detroit Olympia and Chicago stadium for an excellent fistic corporation. But the pattern of assigning choice bouts Louis didn't know.

There is plenty of money behind the I.B.C., with wealthy sportsmen Arthur M. Wirtz and James D. Norris as Joe's colleagues.

Furthermore, James Norris Sr., father of Joe's partner, a member of Madison Square Garden is in the process of absorbing the 20th Century Sporting Club, directed by the retiring Mike Jacobs.

That presumably means that Louis can step into Mike's shoes as the game's top promotional figure.

Chicago has landed Louis' first big venture, the June 22 bout between Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott for Joe's vacated heavyweight crown. It will be at Comiskey Park.

After that?

The Walcott-Charles winner is under contract to meet the Savold— if the latter beats the winner of the coming Freddie Mills-Bruce Woodcock British production.

This bout, Louis admitted, could go to New York —if the New York State Athletic Commission will recognize it as a world title affair. The Walcott-Charles bout lacks New York's blessing and is only for the National Boxing Association title. If Savold comes a cropper against his British foe, Gus Lesnevich, Louis said, has second call on a meeting with the Walcott-Charles winner.

Second Baseman From Colonels Loses Leg

Chicago, May 11 (AP)— Those Bobby Doerr fans of the Louisville Colonels can sorrowfully distinguish him as "Stump Club."

Handsome, 23-year-old Charley Koney, star second baseman of the Colonels had his right leg amputated just above the knee Monday night.

It was the tragic climax to a weekend visit to his parents and 21-year-old wife, at Iowa Clinic a daughter three weeks ago.

Chuck's dad was proud of a newly-installed hot water heater. He and Chuck went to the basement to look it over. The father threw some refuse into the disconnected old heater and burned it. Steam pressure exploded the tank.

Both of Chuck's legs, his nose and jaw were fractured by the blast. His father was uninjured.

At the hospital, they told Chuck his right leg would have to come off.

"I'd sooner die," moaned the lad who mowed his stuff in Boston Red Sox training camp in 1947 and 1948 and was on the American Association all-star team in 1947.

His doctor told him to think it over. Then Chuck said:

"Well, if it's necessary, take it off."

Koney last Friday played in Milwaukee against the Brewers.

He was the idol of bobby soxers who formed "Koney Clubs" chapters and rooted spiritedly for him at Louisville's Parkway Field.

Immediately after the explosion vice president Joe Cronin of the Red Sox telephoned Koney's wife and said,

"We'll see that everything in the world is done for your son."

The Ontario Jockey Club announced Tuesday that all Canadian - born three-year-olds still are eligible for the 90th renewal of the $10,000 - added King's Plate at Toronto's Woodbine Park May 28.

This field, about one - third of the original list of 113 entries Dec. 1, 1947, will be trimmed considerably before post - time. A normal field for the classic is about 16.

The owners each have three entries in the Plate. They are George McCullagh and Charlie Hemsley, both of Toronto; the Parkwood Stables, Oshawa, and Jim Kay, Calnaville, Ont.

McCullagh's nominees include Speedy Irish, 2-to-1 favorite and winner of Monday's prize money as a two-year-old last year. Other good thoroughbreds still eligible include Solaria, second choice at 4-to-1 odds and owned by Steve Clark of Kitchener.

The largest daily - double payoff in New Jersey racing history — $3,015.40 for $2 — turned up Tuesday at Garden State Park in Camden.

walked three in a 3-0 victory over won the first race and a 42-1 longshot, Netherby, won the second. Three were 11 tickets on the combination in a pool totaling $44,546.

Melbourne has been given the 1956 Olympics but the man who worked hardest to bring the games to Australia is dead. Sir Raymond Connelly died just five days after learning Melbourne would be host to the world's athletes in 1956. He collapsed on a Melbourne street and died two hours later. Connelly was 53 years old and a former Lord Mayor of Melbourne. He had visited 15 countries at his own expense and talked with Olympic delegates in each.

Vancouver, May 11 (CP)—For lots of British Columbia sportsmen, June 4 and 7 when Newcastle Challenge plays in the Connaught Cup.

The touring invaders will face a B.C. all-star squad which likely wouldn't be assembled for any other occasion than this. And a fair measure of soccer fans are telling themselves they'll be getting a look at two top-flight teams.

But even so, says Jim (Vancouver Province) Watson, there were one or two gasps when the gold, hard facts of costs were laid before the public.

Capsized Gate

Split of the estimated $28,000 gross gate expected will be a complicated affair with provincial amusement tax, advertising and ground-hire fees on the list.

Then the Dominion Football Association pockets 60 per cent of the remainder, Watson says, and the B.C. section takes what's left for a $3,000 guarantee and other matters.

Perhaps naturally enough, the players selected to meet Newcastle are saying a thing or two. They are slated to pick up $20 whether they play against Newcastle or not. Players actually competing will get around $10 for a six-week training grind.

Who's Who

Golf followers says Bill (Vancouver Province) Good, are asking themselves questions about Bill Mawhinney and Walt McElroy. The former is Dominion junior champ who, just turned 20 and the latter is ranked No. 1 Canadian amateur.

The main question arose after Mawhinney defeated McElroy decisively in Vancouver city match play recently.

Good says folks wonder if eight-ranked Mawhinney hasn't arrived to stay on the golfing front and whether McElroy's ranking is valid now.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 11 (AP)— Casey Stengel, baseball's leading exponent of the two-platoon system, is likely to have a difficult time whittling his squad down to the required 25 players by May 19... He wants to keep on changing the Yankee line-up according to the pitching it faces even though four of the five games the Yanks had lost up to yesterday were against southpaw pitchers and a lefty started the other one...Cleveland's Dale Mitchell, who has been clubbed for a couple of seasons as possibly one of the all-time great hitters, apparently is on the road to this season...Dr. Cary Middlecoff, now the second-ranking money winner on the pro golf circuit, told Lloyd Mangrum as the player to beat in the Goodall tournament starting tomorrow. Cary figures a month layoff will help the kind of game Mangrum plays.

Sheets and Sheils

When the 100th birthday anniversary of Hambletonian 10, named sire of harness horses, was celebrated recently at Chester, N.Y., Bill Cane learned that the village did not earn all the land around the burial site. Cane, sponsor of the Hambletonian stake, told the mayor: "Find the owner of those property and buy it. Then send the bill to me."

...Eddie Walker, manager of Steve Bellotes, is due back from Europe tomorrow and Belloisn will arrive Saturday. Then they'll start a duet hollering for a shot at Marcel Cerdan.

Vancouver, May 11 (CP)—For lots of British Columbia sportsmen, June 4 and 7 when Newcastle Challenge plays in the Connaught Cup.

The touring invaders will face a B.C. all-star squad which likely wouldn't be assembled for any other occasion than this. And a fair measure of soccer fans are telling themselves they'll be getting a look at two top-flight teams.

But even so, says Jim (Vancouver Province) Watson, there were one or two gasps when the gold, hard facts of costs were laid before the public.

Capsized Gate

Split of the estimated $28,000 gross gate expected will be a complicated affair with provincial amusement tax, advertising and ground-hire fees on the list.

Then the Dominion Football Association pockets 60 per cent of the remainder, Watson says, and the B.C. section takes what's left for a $3,000 guarantee and other matters.

Perhaps naturally enough, the players selected to meet Newcastle are saying a thing or two. They are slated to pick up $20 whether they play against Newcastle or not. Players actually competing will get around $10 for a six-week training grind.

Horsemen Wonder If Ponder Can Win Preakness

Baltimore, May 11. (AP)— How did Ponder do it, and can he do it again?

Those two questions—asked in one breath—stood out today as Baltimore started to warm up for Saturday's 73rd running of the Preakness at Old Pimlico.

Ponder's arrival Tuesday brought on a rash of post-mortems over the Kentucky Derby, in which the Calumet colt came out of nowhere to win. Everyone seeking an explanation for the upset was searching at the same time for a line on the Preakness.

Even Calumet Trainer Jimmy Jones is still "pleasantly surprised." Jimmy admitted that in Florida he didn't think "Ponder was much"—and he didn't even bother to go down to Louisville last Saturday.

"All the other horses must've dropped dead," he said.

Pondering up from Kentucky with Greentree stable's Capot and Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Model Cadet is

The arrival together of Ponder and Capot was HIRE, for many think the latter is the colt to do it if Ponder can't repeat. Olympia won't be on hand to set the early pace Saturday, and the Preakness is a stretch-run quarter derby. The Capot crowd figures the colt can go out and run his own race instead of setting the pace for Ponder.

VIOLENCE FLARES IN ORILLIA STRIKE

Angry pickets overturned this car at Orillia, Ont., police say, after driver "almost ran down some pickets." The driver was unhurt. This was first strike violence in town in 20 years. Pickets were on duty at Heywood Wakefield plant on strike for 17 days in protest of firing of 17 employees. Air was let out of tires of company manager's car, which followed this one.—Central Press Canadian.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

"Dinner!" Roger repeated hysterically. "How can you think of your stomach at a time like this! I'm in trouble."

"And I'm hungry," Major Drummond said.

"I can't eat," Roger said tragically. "I'd choke me."

"Something ought to," Major fired over his shoulder.

"Come on, Roger," I said. "Doing a Gandhi won't produce the key. No use starving yourself."

I left him disconsolately looking into space while I joined the Drummonds.

What Major saw must have restored his appetite, for when we approached the dining room, he was already at the head of the line.

Old Faithful spouted, so we were told, while we were eating our steaks.

After dinner Major and Mrs. Drummond arranged space home by bus and left immediately to pack. Feeling certain my fate lay in my own hands now, I smiled saccharinly at the transport agent and muttered, "Are you married?"

He stretched his neck to settle his collar, fingered his tie into position, stroked his hair, swallowed hard, and replied, "I . . . well . . . this is—"

"I see," I explained quickly. "I just thought if you were, you'd understand better how it's my fault Roger threw the key to the car away."

The transportation agent looked hastily at Roger and then back at me.

"Oh, no. He's not my husband." I explained again. "Now, what I need is help. How are we going to get home? Roger doesn't want me to tell my husband he lost the key, and I left mine in Great Falls."

The agent finally got the drift. "Don't worry," he said. "There's a kid here who's clever at breaking into locked cars and twisting wires together and rigging up a dummy switch."

Old Faithful spouted while we hung anxiously over the transportation desk.

Roger and I ran up to tell the Drummonds our good news and to suggest that they wait and ride home with us.

"Good news!" Major shouted. "You idiot! No speedometer. Blasted muffler. Hub cap gone. Visor broken. Two tires stolen. Busted windows. And now a fire hazard for a key and you think I'd ride home with you! I'd rather fly a mission in a fog. You're a hoodoo. A car - wrecker. What I'd like would be to give you a brand new automobile and a twenty-pound sledge and watch you knock it to pieces. Wouldn't you have fun!"

We put the Drummonds on their bus, which, of course, left a few minutes before the next scheduled geyser eruption; it was over by the time we returned to the hotel. For all their interest, man and boy, in Yellowstone, Major Drummond and Roger didn't once clap an eye on Old Faithful.

"I think Drummond hates me," Roger said anxiously. "He's as apt to queer my O.C.S. appointment. And to think I brought him along to clinch it." We were at the garage having the car serviced and waiting to take a lesson from young Jimmy Valentine on how to work the gadget he's concocted.

With utter frankness he went on to tell me about Mary. Mary was a little older than Roger; she was a Vassar graduate, he said, with a wonderful job teaching in the English department of a girls' school when he married her. It hadn't occurred to him she'd ever give it up. But the first year of their marriage she presented him with twins. There went any hope of buying an automobile. They bought an outsize baby carriage instead. "And now, just when I get my hands on an automobile, this fiasco. I'm like a man with his foot in a bucket," he concluded. And as the attendant set the pail down after filling the radiator, Roger put one foot into it. "See what I mean?" he said.

In order to free his foot he had to kick and knock the bucket on the cement floor. Two small kicks and the bottom came loose along with Roger's foot.

"What's the big idea!" the outraged attendant shouted. "Bucket's is hard to get." He looked ruefully at the open seam.

"Here, Buddy," Roger said patronizingly, reaching into his pocket for a coin, "get yourself a new one."

"Where at?" demanded the man. "There ain't any. By rights I oughta make you get thin'n welded for me." A few seconds of optical censure and the man accepted the money Roger offered.

Out of the side of my eye I looked at Roger's troubled face, self-conscious under criticism. He was pompous and a chiseler, but childlike. One minute his arrogance chilled all my interest in him; the next his candid admission of failures and frustrations set up a store of sympathetic understanding. At the moment, he was a child who had broken his little red wagon.

Having banked a little sympathy, he began checking on it almost immediately. We reached Gardenvale in time for lunch and Roger turned off the wooden key which he merely had stuck wood hitched to the ignition wires.

"How'll you get started again"? I asked.

"Turn it on." Roger replied. The motor coughed and started. Roger turned it off. Two youngsters attracted by the broken window and missing hub cap stuck their heads in to see what Roger was doing. He showed off for them. They whistled to a couple of pals and Roger showed them several times what an ingenious gadget he'd whipped up.

We had lunch and climbed back into the car. Roger stopped on the starter. Nothing happened. A little nervously he tried again.

In the act of parking next to us was a burly truck driver. Roger stepped on the starter long and loud. The truck driver glanced over, hating to hear a car abused. Then he suggested that Roger hadn't turned on the ignition. With more charm than a druggist has pills, he lured the truck driver to advise him on the situation. The man got down from the cab of his truck, took a turn or two on the wooden key, and said one of the wires must be broken. He raised the hood, tinkered around for a few minutes, closed it, wiped his hands on his trousers and turned on the juice. Waving happily, Roger backed out and headed down the street.

We drove home without incident. Then, as Roger turned off the switch, there was a flash of light, a crackle of fire and the wiring burst into flames.

"Don't tell Robbie," Roger pleaded after extinguishing the blaze. "I'll have the motor pool send a repair man down in the morning. He'll fix everything—except the tires. That wasn't my fault, was it"

Whatever veto Major Drummond may have had in mind, to invoke concerning Roger's appointment to O.C.S., Colonel Morris had worked faster; a notice to report immediately for orders to proceed to school was waiting for Roger.

"Don't worry, Colonel Morris has put in a request for me. Three month'll pass quickly. Before you know it, I'll be right here again. And commiserations!"

He had so completely possessed us during the months he was in residence that I found myself wondering how it would seem for Rob and me to live alone once more.

I needn't have wondered . . . We weren't alone.

I stood on the front porch waving goodbye to Roger, and as his jeep rounded the corner and disappeared, I turned to go into the house. Before the door closed, I heard a car stop and saw a squat young man get out of it. He smiled at me timidly, I thought—but then I'm no judge of character.

"Chapple is my name. John Chapple. I'm here with Consecross Engineering Company to lay out the East Air Base. My boss, Fred Banks, says he knows you. That you have a larger house than you're using. Might rent me a room."

Realizing that here was a pleasant fellow, albeit one engaged in a sandy occupation, I felt awkward about offering him the basement, and so suggested he go down alone and look around uninhibited by any fear of hurting my feelings if he didn't like what he saw.

In less time than it took me to settle down in the garden room, he was back, his car plowing and on his face the Birth of a Great Idea. "You have a bonanza!" he informed me excitedly. "I could set 15¢cots down there and bring you 15 men before night, and they'd all be glad to pay you anything you asked. You can't imagine what we're up against. It's either the hotels—no monthly rates, mind you, but so much per night—or the darndest dumps you ever saw, lumpy beds, one bathroom for the whole houseful, even musty cellars with coal dust all over everywhere."

I hated to pour cold water on such enthusiasm for our house, but I said, "I'm afraid you'll think I'm very selfish when I tell you I don't want a bonanza. If I let you have the bedroom, that's the best I can do."

"No, I don't think you're selfish. I think that your are very generous to take anyone in at all." He offered me a cigaret, lit one himself. He smoked thoughtfully, then tried again. "I noticed you have an extra bed stored away in the corner of the basement. Couldn't I set that up in the sitting room and have a buddy down there with me? He wouldn't be any trouble. He's married. like me, and as soon as he finds a place, he'll send for his wife same as I'll do. He's up against it for a decent place to sleep."

His buddy moved in so fast it made me suspect Henry Snow had been hiding all the time on the floor of the car. They unpacked and disappeared. An hour they returned and this time they brought a friend with them. He had, he said, all of his furniture in storage here while he was looking for an apartment to put it in so he could send for his family, and since he had a perfectly good bed and bureau he could move in. Our basement and use, couldn't he please? The other fellows were willing and he swore he'd not be a bit of trouble. If he hadn't been blond and blue-eyed, freckled and skinny, I might have refused him, but Jimmy looked so much like Bill I couldn't hold out.

I dubbed them the Three Musketeers, so touching was their All for One, One for All devotion, but before another night fell I grew panicky for fear they'd turn out to be the Ten Little Injjujideejji to be the Ten Little Injuneers.

"THERE'S WELCOME ON THE DOORMAT"

To celebrate lifting of the blockade of Berlin, a resident of the German capital nails a large "welcome" sign along the railroad right-of-way shuts a group of neighbors look on approvingly. The Russians, in lifting the blockade, have stipulated that 16 trains a day may enter Berlin, carrying food and supplies.—Central Press Canadian

TRAFFIC FLOWING BETWEEN BERLIN, WEST GERMANY

327-Day Blockade Ended at Midnight

Berlin, May 12 — (AP)—The Russians pulled up their German iron curtain today, ending their 327-day Berlin blockade, major sore spot of the cold war.

The blockade — lifting had all the fanfare of a Hollywood movie premiere.

The Russian and Allied military outdid each other in courtesy as the barricades went down ending the blockade, and the allied counter-blockade.

But the Western Allies were taking nothing for granted. Their air lift, which had made the blockade a useless Soviet weapon by flying in the food, fuel and raw materials needed by West Berlin's 2,000,000 residents, continued flying. It is to continue at least 30 days building a stockpile of supplies and giving a chance for really sound cut Russian inspections.

Allied military trains, followed by food and fuel trains, were the first into Berlin after the barriers were down one minute after midnight. Foreign correspondents, riding above the famous Autobahn speed - highway, were the first into Berlin from the west.

The blockade had a big send-off at the old barrier points, which had been choked full of steel and concrete obstructions by work crews. There was cheering, cool speech, special lighting for the camera men, and a big display of the black, red and gold colors of the new West German government.

People Free Again

For the people the end of the blockade means the promise of fresh foods, more fuel, enough electric lights. It means that they can move between the east and west sectors of Berlin, free and safe from the danger of molestation by the police.

The political split in the city between east and west remained as deep as ever, however. Each has its own police force, city government, fire department and other services.

The first Allied train into Berlin was halted only four minutes to get its clearance from the Russians.

The whole program went off with only two hitches, neither considered serious as of now. The Russians insisted that Soviet-owned locomotives pull the trains into Berlin from the west, and the German police he had commanded would not. The German engineers through, without explaining the reasons for the change of utility.

The race to be first by highway into Berlin from the west was a case of every man for himself.

The first of the pack entered the British zone into Berlin at 1:46 a.m. Berlin time (7:46 p.m. EST yesterday).

An American reporter was at the wheel, with other sections of correspondents in hot pursuit.

R. D. Arnott, Former Mayor, Ex-M.L.A., PC Candidate For Riding of South Hastings

Richard D. Arnott, K.C., former mayor of Belleville and ex-M.L.A. for Hastings West was named the flagbearer of the Progressive Conservative party for Hastings South at the nomination meeting of the South Hastings Progressive Association held yesterday afternoon in the Collegiate Auditorium.

Mr. Arnott was the choice of the convention over two other nominees, George H. Stokes, who has represented the riding since 1940, and Arthur L. Bird. Mr. Arnott won the nomination in the first ballot.

Also nominated but who withdrew their names were Mayor D. L. Storey, Belleville; Eric Denyes, Hastings County clerk, John Wess, ex-M.P., Prince Edward and Lennox, Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, Ray Grant, Belleville and Clarence C. Graham, Tweed, president of the South Hastings Progressive Conservative Association, who acted as chairman of the convention.

Nominations were held before a packed auditorium with party stalwarts from all parts of the district in attendance. Delegates numbered 328 and the Hon. Karl Rowe, M.P.P. former Ontario Conservative leader, was the guest speaker.

Mr. Frank Cushing, K.C., secretary of the South Hastings Progressive Association, read the names of the nominees and each in turn placed his nominational platform before the delegates.

Association President Clarence T. Graham withdrew his name immediately. "I have no intention of running", he smiled, as he called upon the next nominee.

Mayor D. L. Storey, of Belleville, told the delegates in a terse speech that "we have more than six cooks to win this riding". He felt, he said, that it was a mistake to change horses in midstream and "if I let my name go before the convention it would be splitting the vote." He withdrew.

CANADA EXPECTS RECORD TOURIST SEASON IN 1949

26.7 PC More Inquiries Received Than in 1948

Ottawa, May 12 (CP)—Canada is heading toward a record 1949 tourist season.

That prediction was made Wednesday by the Dominion Travel Bureau as officials started to add up travel letters from the United States and elsewhere.

Inquiries were about 26.7 per cent higher than last year with heavy mail continuing to pour in.

"If that keeps up," said a Bureau official, "then Canada can expect more than the 250,000,000 entries made to the dominion last year and more than $282,000,000 spent by tourists."

In addition, it will mean that dollar-short Canada will get a little extra boost, since most of the travel money—about 90 per cent of it—is expected to come from the United States.

In 1948, for example, American tourists dipped into their pockets to the tune of $270,000,000. This year, the Bureau predicts, it may be more—probably around $300,000,000.

Canadian Tourists in U. S.

However, there's one hitch. Although Canada is the centre of a big tourist trade it often has been noted that this has been offset by Canadians spending a lot of these dollars by vacationing in the U.S. under present foreign - exchange control regulations. Each person is allotted $150 yearly.

As an indication, the Bureau of Statistics reported today that although highway traffic between Canada and the U.S. showed an increase during March, "the increase was due to greater volume of Canadian traffic returning from the U.S."

Third-quarter totals for this year place highway border crossings at 1,327,000, an advance of 12 per cent over the same period of 1948. Returning Canadian traffic was up from 327,700 a year ago to 427,000.

"For the same period," said the Statistics Bureau, "U.S. entries increased from 553,900 a year ago to 899,800.

"The American increase into Canada may be partly due to our increased advertising in the U.S."

Canada's tourist publicity and advertising in the U.S. in 1948, this year she is spending $1,000,000.

Truman Pledges Government to Full Support of U.N.

Disappointed at the Failure To Achieve Greater Security

R. D. Arnott, K.C.

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — President Truman today pledged his administration anew to full support of the United Nations despite "disappointment" at that organization's failure to achieve greater security for the world.

He submitted to Congress a report on the United Nations which placed blame for the failure on Russia.

Of the role of the United States in the United Nations, Truman said:

"We have taken the lead in many fields of international relations. We can be proud of what we have done."

His report, including a letter from Secretary Dean Acheson, covered the year 1948 and reflected the bitter political conflicts which divided Russia and the west during that 12 months.

Acheson declared that both "hope and disappointment" marked American participation in the United Nations.

"The hope," Acheson said, "grew out of the continued feeling that the principles and purposes of the United Nations Charter offer the best basis of a peace... time world . . .

"At the same time there was disappointment because of the failure of certain states to observe their obligations under the charter . . .

Acheson said the United States had taken the lead in keeping United Nations attention focused on the questions of Palestine, the independence of Korea, and the maintenance of the territorial and political independence of Greece. The United States has played a "prominent part," he said, in attempts to bring peace to Indonesia.

The 301-page report, which Acheson sent to the president with a brief letter forwarded to Congress dealt in detail with problems which arose before the United Nations Security Council, General Assembly and other agencies during the year.

Tanker Afire, Only Captain And Operator Stay Aboard

Hon. Earl Rowe

New York May 12 (AP) —The 9,683 ton tanker Atlanta radioed early today that she was afire in the Caribbean, the Coast Guard here reported.

The distress messages said all crew members had taken to lifeboats except the captain and radio operator.

Position of the Swedish-owned ship was given as 330 miles northeast of the Barbados Islands.

A Coast Guard cutter, the Pontoosa, was reported en route from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to aid the stricken ship.

An Italian ship, the Foscolo, also was said to be proceeding to the scene, the Coast Guard said.

Whether there were any casualties was not known.

The Coast Guard said static blocked out some of the distress messages from the ship.

Treaty Acceptable To Peace-Loving Peoples -- Bevin

London, May 12 (Reuters) — Foreign Secretary Bevin, moving a government motion in the House of Commons today approving the North Atlantic treaty, said he did so with complete confidence as to its acceptance not only by the House, but the nation and indeed by all peace-loving peoples of the world.

"We firmly believed that with the experience of the war it would be possible to put into use and develop co-operative machinery so that these great problems of peace and stability might be dealt with on a basis of universality," he said.

"In this connection we agreed to the special position given to the five powers within the Security Council with the hope that co-operation between them might assist the world in this tremendous task."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies will clear over Southern Ontario today and frost is expected tonight in the northern Lake Huron, Georgian Bay and Haliburton regions. In the vicinity of the Great Lakes there will be a risk of frost in low-lying areas.

The weather will remain mostly clear with temperatures in the 40s possible. 60s Friday afternoon.

Trade Challenging Issue In Forthcoming Election Earl Rowe Tells Convention

The restoration of sound trade relationship within the British Commonwealth is one of the most challenging issues of the present election campaign, Earl Rowe, M.P., declared here yesterday.

Speaking to the nomination meeting of the South Hastings Progressive Conservative Association in the Collegiate Institute, the former Ontario Progressive Conservative leader said that the trend of the present federal government "is definitely away from the influences in Canada and the United Kingdom, to the setting up of trade with trading agreements, threaten to ruin trade relationship within the British Commonwealth of Nations.

He stated that the Hon. C. D. Howe after a visit to the British Trade Fair returned with new contracts "if the price is satisfactory", for fruit pulp, apples, fish meal, flour and oats. Judging by the minister said that the total sales advantage to Canada may approach 25 millions in all.

"It is to be hoped," Mr. Rowe said, "that this is correct as it might be at least a beginning to establishing a two-way trade." A small portion of the great volume of trade that we have recently lost with the United Kingdom."

During the ten-year period, 1939-1949 Canada negotiated 143 contracts with the United Kingdom for purchase of various agricultural products, in addition to contracts for purchase of lumber, metals, tobacco and other products.

In addition to wheat, there were only three of these in effect at the beginning of this year, all of which will expire by the end of the year.

"The 1949 contract for bacon is reduced by 35 million pounds from the 140 to 140 million pounds less than sold to Britain in 1948 and very much less than sold to Britain 50 years ago. This market has been lost to Poland, Hungary, Denmark and other foreign countries", the speaker said.

Ottawa, May 12 (CP)—More than 800 students from universities and colleges will take air force training this summer in what the RCAF says is its largest peacetime summer training program in history.

The summer also will see the usual camp periods for Boy Service Cadets, the resumption of flying training for air cadets under the scholarship plan and camp periods for auxiliary squadrons.

Nearly 500 university undergraduates will receive summer training at stations at Trenton or Centralia, Ont. Accompanying them will be 30 air cadets from the Royal Roads, B.C., or Royal Military College Kingston.

Organized Gang Stealing Clothes, Police Believe

Toronto, May 12 (CP)— Police said today they thought an organized gang was operating here robbing clothing stores during Wednesday afternoon closing.

Police announced a "liberal reward" for information leading to the arrest of the thieves following a robbery yesterday afternoon in which more than $2,000 in furs was removed from a men's wear shop.

Two weeks ago a store in the northern part of the city had almost its entire stock cleaned out.

Loot from the most recent job consisted of 40 pairs of men's trousers, 25 sports jackets, six dozen shirts, five dressing gowns and six men's suits.

Step Into Dispute Which Began 37 Years Ago

Washington, May 12 (AP)— The National Labor Relations Board today, for the first time, stepped into a dispute between railroad workers and the carriers which started 37 years ago over installation of plant machinery.

The agency decided that an employer may assign the work to his own employees if he chooses, in a ruling favorable to the railroads.

The machinists withdrew from the A.F.L. twice in the controversy, first in 1912 with William (Big Bill) Hutcheson, head of the carpenters, as their leader, involved.

Today's decision came in connection with the shutdown of Westinghouse Electric Corporation operations at Sunnyvale, California Edison Company's plant at Redondo Beach, Calif.

The millwrights attempted to require Westinghouse to give up its insistence on the work of installing steam turbine generators. The work was performed by Westinghouse to employees who are members of Machinists' Lodge 1235.

The Board decided that the Railway Labor Act Trade Unions (A.F.L.) were not "lawful bargaining agents" to require Westinghouse to assign work so as members of the millwright's craft.

The Board said that "the dispute in 1912 in which it report what they have done to comply with today's decision.

SMOKES 168

Wenatchee, Wash., May 12 (CP) — Jim Winkens, grand old man of Wenatchee's oldest residents, is still enjoying his pipe of tobacco despite his 108 years. Believed to be almost the oldest resident, he celebrated his birthday last Thursday.

Native of Atlanta Georgia, he served in the army of the south during the U.S. Civil War.

38 New Diesels Ordered by C.N.R.

Montreal, May 12 — (CP) Canadian National Railways has placed orders in Canada for 38 new diesel - electric locomotives, E. A. Bromley, vice - president in charge of purchases and stores announced today.

An order for 18 72 - ton diesel-electric locomotives has been awarded to the Canadian General Electric Company, and 20 to the Montreal Locomotive Works. They will be assigned to service at various terminals across the country.

Hygiene Code Drafted in U.K. To Reduce Cases of Food Poisoning

London, May 12 (CP)—Health authorities are drafting a new hygiene code for food workers as part of a campaign to reduce cases of food poisoning in Britain.

In announcing the code, Dr. Robert Hutchinson, secretary of the Central Council for Health Education, said that more than 100 people die from food poisoning every year.

The new code, voluntary at first, will require:

1. A minimum standard of accommodation for workers and cleanliness on the wholesale and retail side.

2. Restriction of materials for flies and vermin construction to those easy to clean.

3. Prevention of workers who fall sick from spreading a disease.

Authorities said food poisoning was on the increase because more people were eating meals in restaurants and canteens; Britain was using more imported food which lost its freshness in transit and ration cards made many canned dishes necessary.

But private homes also presented a problem because they cannot be entered.

"Meat lies uncovered, Friday's pie is left on the shelf without a lid until it is reheated for dinner on Monday, tables are dirty and washing-up is often a deferred job," said a health official.

These are the practices which often start infection in the home.

Nearly 100,000 Workers Idle In Ford Strike

Detroit, May 12 (AP)—Peace talks in the Ford strike moved into their third day today as the company's idle production employees approached 100,000.

With 90,000 already off the job, there was a possibility that the entire production force of 108,000 might soon be affected.

The C.I.O. United Auto Workers' "speed-up" strike of 65,000 men began Tuesday after the Ford company's negotiations Ford pulled in another production expert as the union pressed its demand that it operations of the plant.

He was Del S. Harder, vice-president in charge of manufacturing operations.

A chance was developing today for an end to the week of 63,500 Chrysler workers.

Chrysler laid off an additional 3,000 Wednesday night but simultaneously a supplier's tie-up loosened for the plant was being settled.

A dispute over production speeds at the latter company was involved in a company charges of "slow-down" by the U.A.W. charge of "lockout."

$49,000 in Grants Approved by Government

Ottawa, May 12 — (CP) — The federal government has approved grants totalling more than $49,000 to help meet the building costs of the Winchester and Metcalfe Hospital, Winchester, Ont., and St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital, Kingston.

The Winchester and District Memorial Hospital, completed in December, is a new institution with a bed capacity of 23 and complete medical, surgical and obstetrical facilities. It will serve about 12,000 persons in the area. Its federal grant will total more than $15,300.

Federal grant to the hospital in Kingston will be $33,700. Once an orphanage later the Kingston Military Hospital, the building now is being converted for hospital use by the Sisters of Charity of Kingston. It will provide accommodation for 92 chronically ill persons.

City and District News

POLICE CERTAIN JOKESTERS AT WORK

Local police are quite certain there must be a practical joker-ster at work about the city.

On several occasions during the past week motorists have reported their cars or trucks having disappeared from where they had been parked, a brief search by police in each case recovered the vehicles—always a block or so from where they had been taken.

Last night the same thing occurred again, John Bunnett, Rossmore, reported he had parked his car on Pinnacle Street across from Riggs garage. Fifteen minutes later police found the car parked on Market Street by a nearby gangway.

JAY WALKERS LEARN LESSON

Toronto, May 12 (CP)— Toronto's jaywalking law entered its fourth day today and already traffic authorities say a marked improvement in traffic conditions. Both automobilists and pedestrians are travelling farther in shorter periods and with less confusion, they said. Summonses served to persons accused of jay walking dropped to a low of 28 yesterday. Fifty persons had to pay $1 fines Monday.

'Tiger' is Dead

The "Tiger" is dead.

She developed pneumonia a few days ago and was rushed to the veterinary where she failed to rally despite the best of care, and passed away at 1 p.m.

"Tiger" was one of the better-known personalities in downtown Belleville. She was eight years old and lived all her life in the home she adopted when but a mere youngster.

She was popular with all walks of life and enjoyed meeting people. She was sympathetic, always ready for a frolic and was faithful and loyal to her family till the last.

Every morning "Tiger" ate a breakfast of liver and milk. She relished several delicacies, and after they were born would carefully bring them back to her home.

The "Tiger" will be missed, especially by her staunch friend and master.

She was the well-known striped cat which was one of the landmarks of Ed. Thomas Tobacco Store for the past ten years.

Friday Thirteenth: Its Record

Better keep your fingers crossed; don't spill the salt or put the private fedora on the bed. Look out for dark strangers, and don't walk under a leaning ladder.

For tomorrow is Friday, the Thirteenth.

There's a lot of superstitious folk who think there are dire chances on the morrow. Some of them take their superstitions so far that they will not venture forth, risking comparative safety of the house.

We know such a person once. He stayed in the house all day and towards evening as chances of bad luck were slowly glimmering, he stepped on a marble with which the family pride and joy had been playing, fell and broke a leg.

• • • •

Steer clear of black cats, friends, and the superstitious claim that a raven-hued kitty if it crosses your path is good for at least seven years' bad luck. A confirmed old bachelor of our acquaintance, who scorned superstition, had his path crossed by a black cat going through the crossing of his path by a confirmed "old maid" two weeks later, he was married. The bachelor, that is, not the Tom.

• • • •

Others believe that the picking up of a pin on Friday the Thirteenth will bring a run of luck. True, perhaps, but there's the old saying that if you picked a pin on the living room floor. He stooped to retrieve and was declined the privilege of being a Pyramid Club.—G.H.C.

Church Filled To Capacity To Hear Singers

With the seating capacity sold out weeks in advance, many people were disappointed at being unable to obtain tickets for the Leslie Bell Singers at Bridge Street Church last Monday evening. Upwards of 200 applications had to be refused due to the sell-out.

Chairs were brought from the Sunday School rooms to augment the seating capacity of the church which was filled to overflowing. It was absolutely impossible to crowd another person into the edifice.

Reports that the audience was a most appreciative one — which carried with them the inference that seats were available at opening time, has caused some comment on the part of those unable to secure seats.

Those in charge of the concert here stated today that every seat had been sold prior to the time the concert took place and not a single seat was available when the curtain rose on the opening number.

Spend 30 Millions On Health

Toronto, May 12 — (CP)—Dr. W. S. Stanbury, Toronto, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, said today approximately $30,000,000 would be spent this year by private volunteer agencies interested in promoting Canadian health and welfare.

"Even in this year of increasing federal and provincial aids to health services, Canadian volunteer organizations will spend $30,000,000 — more than twice that, spent by all governments combined less than 20 years ago" Dr. Stanbury told the Red Cross Central Council annual meeting.

He said the Red Cross had pioneered such services as its bereavists clinics, schools for public health nurses, home makers' services and other early efforts in medicine, dentistry and hospital service. Many of these services were now operated by governments or other agencies.

C. A. Aferis, head of the society's transportation committee, announced more than $33,000,000 worth of Red Cross goods had been sent overseas in the last 9 years.

The amount represents goods shipped for the Red Cross and other organizations 1940-48. Of that figure, $28,933,989 has gone to Britain and the rest to 37 other countries.

In Canada, 79,891 rural Canadians were treated by Red Cross outpost hospital nurses last year. There now are 73 outpost hospitals and nursing stations.

ARAB DELEGATES STAGE WALKOUT AS ISRAEL JOINS

New State Now Member U.N. General Assembly

Lake Success, N. Y., May 12 — (CP) — A simple flag — raising ceremony today will complete Israel's formal induction as the 59th member of the United Nations.

Israel took her seat among the other countries Wednesday night after the General Assembly finally approved her membership bid by a vote of 37 to 12 with nine abstentions.

But when Moshe Sharett, Israeli foreign minister, was called to the rostrum after the vote was announced the delegates of six Arab countries walked out of the hall.

Delegates of Egypt and Yemen returned two hours later. The rest — Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and Syria — were expected back at their places today, their protest ended.

The Assembly went on with its work without them in a late night session, deciding to:

1. Defer action on The Netherlands-Indonesian dispute until the fall session in the light of a reported agreement "Between the Dutch and the Indonesian Republicans.

2. Accept a Bolivian proposal to study the economic and social conditions of Aborigines of North America.

Informed sources said Israel would play a neutral role in voting at this session on any questions of controversy. They said the new state had not had time to acquaint herself sufficiently with most of the problems.

The question of Franco Spain is expected to be taken up today. The Assembly has before it a recommendation of its political committee that member nations be given complete freedom to decide whether they should restore full diplomatic relations with the Franco regime. A 1946 Assembly resolution recommended the withdrawal of top diplomatic representatives from Madrid.

The political committee voted 25 to 16, with 16 sstentions, in favor of lifting the restrictions. Only a simple majority is required, but in the Assembly itself two-thirds of those present and voting are needed for approval.

The political committee was scheduled to meet at Lake Success to act on a draft plan for disposing of the pre-war Italian colonies along lines previously agreed on by Italy and Britain. The plan was approved yesterday by a 16-country sub-committee.

Swimming, Wading Pools Will Open

Welland, May 12 (CP)—Possible closing of the swimming and wading pools here this summer has been averted by a compromise agreed upon by representatives of the Welland and District Health Unit and the Parks Board. Dr. W. C. Sturgeon, director of the Health Unit, had warned that permission to operate the pools would not be given until the Parks Board installed suitable shower and lavatories. Dr. Sturgeon termed an existing dressing room "entirely inadequate" to accommodate the 1,000 to 1,500 persons who used the two pools each day. He recommended the station be used exclusively for the wading pool.

At the conference of interested parties called after the warning was given, Dr. Sturgeon stated the Health Unit would permit the swimming pool to remain open if necessary showers were installed at the swimming pool and toilet facilities provided at the earliest opportunity.

A special meeting of the Parks Board has been called for Monday night to discuss ways and means of installing the recommended facilities. Consideration will be given at the meeting to the feasibility of charging adults a fee for using the pools. Use of the pool to date has been free.

PLAGUE RECALLED

London — (CP) — Six human skulls and 20 limb bones were found by workmen excavating on a London County Council site in Southwark. Experts believe the spot was a plague burial ground in 1665.

Dismiss Charge Of Ill-Treating Farm Animals

Charged with ill-treating farm animals through failure to provide sufficient feed, a Tyendinaga township resident was dismissed of the charge when he appeared in Magistrate's court today before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Thomas Thorne, inspector for the Humane Society, stated that when he visited the farm on April 25th the stock was in poor condition and the four cows and three calves were standing in filth.

He said there was no grain in the barn but admitted there was hay in the barn loft.

Under cross examination by Alan Speyglas, counsel for the accused, Mr. Thorne would not agree that cattle ordinarily were in a poorer condition when turned out in the spring than in the fall.

In dismissing the case Magistrate Wills stated he had no sympathy for the accused as the condition in which the animals were living had been disgraceful. However, he said the evidence did not warrant a conviction on a charge of malnutrition.

Several offenders under the Fish and Game Act were listed on the morning court docket, six accused having settled their cases out of court, and the alleged offenders asking for enlargement of their cases.

The charges included having pickerel out of season, fishing with spears, and grappling. Offenders paid from $12 fine and costs to $25, fine and costs, according to the seriousness of the offence.

A local Indian pleaded guilty to having native wine and under the Indian Act was assessed the minimum of $25 fine and $3.50 costs or a month in jail in default.

NOISE

The sounds of this noisy age of history, the noisiest of all time, draw the attention of the New York Times in an editorial, in which it points to the erosive effect of noise. The Acoustical Society of America has come to a consideration of sounds of subway trains, raucous horn-blowing motor trucks that roar through the streets, airplane propellers that assault the ear, pneumatic riveters which are tireless in the performance of their noisy function and so the writer remarks that "it is about time that science took notice of noise." Both Dr. L. O. Kundsen and Dr. Leo L. Beranek, all seemed in sigh of longing for the sound-insulating procedures adopted by England, Sweden, Denmark and Holland."

Sounds may be pleasant and unpleasant. Soundproofing has done something but there remains the greatest combination of sounds of any time, all wearing and tearing at the ears and nerves.

Science no doubt will get around to great improvements upon the present day blatant discords of streets with horns and the sounds even of the tires on the pavement. Medical science points to the disintegration of human nerve fibre by the relentless impact of noises upon the system.

How science is going to succeed will appeal to the world, even of many of those who help to make the distracting noises, and show itself in time.

VAUDEVILLE REVIVAL?

There is word that the old style vaudeville is coming back and the return will be of more than passing interest. Many today do not recall this style of entertainment which drew vast crowds. Fashions of entertainment have moved so swiftly that the old is rapidly superseded.

The old vaudeville star had a bagful of tricks. He was completely versatile and could charm every taste in the audience. He knew the endless line of appeal which never failed for he was the artist to his fingertips and he was in constant contact with his audience, that rare combination of audience and player being the great fort of the oldtime player.

Will the revival which is reported in the larger centres continue to make its way? That the future will tell for the vaudeville actor made a strong appeal to the audience of a few decades ago. The old time vaudeville too was a varied attraction. It had to be one to attract not only those that really appeal to the people hold their interest long. Vaudeville was one of those attractions. If it is returning the fact will soon be known says Hamilton Spectator.

Today the motion picture is the greatest attraction in entertainment, the world in fact goes to the movies. It must be that in no long time hence the movies will have found the farthest corner of the earth in which to make their appeal. They have profoundly influenced all forms of entertainment.

It was not so long ago that the vaudeville artist was on the sawngram with the movies.

Those who remember the oldtime vaudeville have become movie fans but still would relish these artists with their great variety of attraction on the vaudeville stage.

Many are now attending amusements who did not know the old time vaudeville. To them it might seem appealing than the modern wonder of the talking picture. But the old time frequenters of vaudeville houses remember them and might be attracted to them again. Whatever can be said of these purveyors of entertainment they had a wide appeal and were versatile in their range of character.

There has been some guessing whether vaudeville would regain much of its old time popularity but that is of course problematic. Only time can tell. The modern movies have the greatest assistance of all time in this age and they suit modern life with its speed and there is a range of appeal through the ear as well as through the eye. They have the ability to present a canvass of infinite measurements, they can bring in before the audience scenes no theatre of old could hold, they can picture battles on a scale which the stage and the vaudeville artists' possibilities could not reach.

The two powers which in my opinion constitute a wise man are those of bearing and forbearing.—Epictetus.

REWARDS FOR THE MANY

Fortune has money to offer and fame has rewards of a kind,
But few win the favors of fortune, and fame
to the few is blind,
Yet life can be good without either, and laughter and love and joy,
And the many can sit down contended as soon as the day's work is done.

'Twere a sad world, indeed, if to many the splendors of life were unhindered may claim,
And life can be lived to the fullest, without either
fortune or fame,

The thrill and the rapture and promise the children are sent here to bring;
The storms and the lakes for the dreamers; the song of the birds in the spring.

Leave fortune and fame to gifted. There's much for the humbler careers.
There are triumphs available the spirit when faith at its bravest appears.
There are numberless pleasures to choose from the many unhindered may claim,
And life can be lived to the fullest, without either
fortune or fame.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON EATING

There is no more important function that that of feeding the body of ours. We are very particular about the fuel we use in our car, or to heat our homes, but we abuse ourselves when it comes to selecting our food, how we eat it, where, and with whom. Epicurus said that a man should consider least what he ate than how he ate.

Eating with a delightful companion is half the meal. Food then digests better, tastes better, and is better. I never like eating alone and I like to eat in a beautiful place. It may be a simple and inexpensive place, but still very beautiful. I like a well conducted country Inn. It is a pleasant and there is good companionship there.

Nothing is so important to one's health and well being as eating regularly and happily — with no worries upon the mind and all troubles dismissed. It is a bad omen for one when he feels that he is too busy to spare the proper time and place for eating. This body of ours is a magnificent machine and should not be mistreated. The farmer of a great race horse doesn't mistreat that animal. The boy who lived simply and regularity of eating is of prime importance, but the man can respect himself better?

If Waiters in a public eating place can be a very real factor in the interest that others take in us at times that we are not making any monetary gain to them. There is no place where I take most of my lunches for no other reason than that everyone there is so pleasant. They make me feel welcomed, though the food, in addition, is very good.

Nearly everyone eats too much. Outside hard manual workers, the simpler the food the better it is for one, though a careful selection of food should be made so that a balanced diet is the rule. One's eating habits are a very good index to the sort of person to whom they belong. George Bernard Shaw is a good example of one who has lived simply to retain sensibly. Can you think of one who thinks more clearly, of who has gained more fun out of life at the age of 92?

Work of Govt. Still Goes on

Ottawa, May 12 (CP) Most of Canada's 20-man federal cabinet is on the road campaigning for the June 27 Federal election, but the work of the government still goes on.

No policy decisions can be made without a meeting of the cabinet, but administration of policy —previously agreed on by the government—is in the hands of Deputy Ministers during the absence of the ministers.

Orders-in-council, or other policy decisions, can be made by two cabinet ministers. There is no set quorum for a cabinet meeting.

Currently heading the government is Defence Minister Claxton, acting in the absence of Prime Minister St. Laurent.

It's considered likely that at least one cabinet will be in the capital throughout the election campaign.

Mackenzie's Column:

Spain Might be Vital Naval Base In Another War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

You would see that one following diplomacy's devious paths for more than a generation, both at home and abroad, one would become inclined to dig lomatic idiosyncrasies — but your reporter still encounters difficulties.

Take, for instance, the case of Spain, which is under a totalitarian dictatorship of the Fascist brand, headed by Generalissimo Franco. The story runs like this:

Just over two years ago the United Nations denounced this Spanish government and called on members of the peace organization to withdraw their diplomatic heads from Madrid.

The other day the political committee of the United Nations General Assembly adopted a resolution to lift the status of the black list. This is despite the fact that there has been no change in the Spanish regime.

That brings us up to May 3 when the United States State Department gave Spain permission to export $57,500,000 with its export-import bank for an American loan. The next day State Secretary Dean Acheson said the United States had no political objection to the Spanish government loan to Spain, but that the United States didn't think that Spain can qualify for such credits until it makes fundamental economic reforms.

Asked to Clear Way

Two days ago Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate he saw no reason why President Truman shouldn't send an ambassador to Spain. He added that there was "no evidence of Maine that "pressure of other nations" (Britain and France) had kept the State Department from recognizing the Franco regime.

Yesterday Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican member of the committee, joined Senator Connally in urging that Washington clear the way to exchanges ambassadors with Spain. He said the action of the American ambassador would in no sense be interpreted by the government to which he was accredited.

This was followed by a statement from State Secretary Acheson who told a press conference that Franco has had a long way towards restoring basic human liberties, and hope to be admitted into the family of the European nations.

He was asked why the United States and western European nations had abandoned the Soviet satellite capitals and in Moscow while maintaining them in Madrid. He said the explanation was that the U.N. in 1946 tried to use the pull of boycott to bring Spanish reforms, but failed.

Many persons of course condemn the Spanish dictatorship. They just as heatedly condemn the other totalitarian regimes — which are anything but new for between. Still we differentiate among these dictatorships.

Why? Are we to conclude that it's a matter of expediency rather than of principle? If expediency enters into it there are a lot of Red Spaniards recognize that does not only needs to resume foreign trade relations but would be a vital military base in event of another world war.

Howe is Ready To Answer Charge Of George Drew

Englehart, Ont., May 12 (CP) —Trade Minister Howe said Wednesday that he is ready to answer charges and accusations concerning North Star airplanes before any tribunal or investigating body the Progressive Conservative Leader chooses.

"We have yet to lose or injure a pilot or a passenger in the (North Star) plane," he told a meeting which chose Walter Little, member of parliament for Timiskaming for the last 14 years, as Liberal candidate in the riding.

Mr. Howe said the North Star plane had been developed toward the end of the war when the government thought it necessary to help establish an aircraft manufacturing industry.

Mr. Drew in parliament criticized the plane as costly and unsafe.

St. Laurent Meets Delegation From Seamen's Union

Saint John, N.B., May 12 (CP) Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent heard from the Canadian Seamen's Union strike again Wednesday in a 15-minute report.

A small delegation from the union saw him in his hotel room and pressed for federal government intervention in the strike that has tied up ships at home and abroad.

The meeting was arranged by Conservative Minister Gregg and Daniel Riley, Liberal candidate in this riding.

Mr. Riley said Mr. St. Laurent's staff said the Prime Minister told the delegation he was powerless to act in the dispute which would have to be considered first and voted to take up their petition with the cabinet.

There was no picketing of Mr. St. Laurent by the strikers here as there had been in Vancouver and Fort William during his recent western tour.

However, Gregg addressed to him and distributed by seamen a letter which said: "There are many more Canadians will have to be shot and wounded" before something is done about the strike.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

One of my friends has made a complete success of a small, neat business. Most of what this, one of the big industrial organizations that supplies him with much of his goods made him a very flattering offer.

They wanted him to become their sales representative in a certain territory. The salary was a whopper — the kind you dream about. You would live in those Homes and Gardens type of stone bungalows, amid roses.

The job offered him a great deal of authority, as well, with an expense account and no end of gilt. It was a position that stands for social standing in the community.

But my friend turned the offer down without a qualm of regret. He just didn't like the idea of over-exertion chasing money from any other cause."

Chasing street cars and other forms of over-exertion have their advantage in that at least they are in the open air. In chasing money, the exertion is often in an atmosphere that reeks smoke and smudge. You can't chase money for eight hours a day. In a twenty-four hour pursuit, with no days or holidays. In chasing street cars, you're bound, either catch them, or else content yourself that there will be another one along in a couple of minutes. But money is a moving, like a river. It keeps flowing and flowing; and the poor devil who thinks he can divert it is the lunatic trying to catch the St. Lawrence in a pail, or to bucketful of it, he wants a tub-full. Then he wants a puddle, and then he tries to divert the whole stream from its course, his life is driven by

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LETTERS AND ANSWERS

Has Never Had Many Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 years old and have only been out on dates a very few times in my life.

I have joined many clubs and gone to many dances, but can not seem to make any headway with the opposite sex. I am extremely lonely. In fact I am so lonely that it is affecting my health. I am not beautiful, and do not have a good figure, but I have been told I have a pleasing personality.

I do not believe in joining a Lonely Hearts Club on any such thing, but please tell me what to do, because I am so terribly lonely.

"Disgusted"

Dear "Disgusted":

If you're going to keep telling yourself that the only thing that will bring you happiness is to be noticed by "the opposite sex", it is going to make your whole problem just that much harder. If, however, you'll be content to concentrate on building up a busy program of interesting activities of various kinds, you'll not only make a lot of friends of both sexes, but you'll soon be living such a full and happy life that you'll forget to worry over a lack of attention by friends. And oddly enough, it very often happens that the girl who's obviously having fun, with or without boy friends, radiates such attractiveness that men and women alike eagerly seek her friendship.

Happiness and friendship are by-products of losing yourself in enjoyable occupations, and I'm afraid you've been putting the cart before the horse in your search for the former, and that's why you haven't had results from the clubs you've joined. I advise you to start all over again, get really interested and active in those organizations, and see if things don't improve.

Father Thinks She Goes Out Too Much

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 years old and engaged to be married soon.

My father thinks I go out too many nights a week, although I only go out three and sometimes four nights. I work 2 1-2 days a week and think that going out that many nights is no too much. But I have had quite a few misunderstandings about it with my father.

Some time ago he showed me an article you had written in answer to a letter, and I know he holds your opinion highly, so that I believe he would have confidence in what you say.

"Mr. E. B."

Dear "M.E.C.":

As a working girl nearly 20 years old, I would feel that you had a right to go out three or four nights a week provided you were careful to get sufficient sleep, and of course, were going only to such places and engaging in such activities as your parents would approve. You don't make it clear whether your father is always your companion when you go out, but I should think that he logically would be on most occasions, unless you were just going out with some of your girl friends. I take it for granted that you would not be accepting invitations from other men if you were engaged.

In other words, if your behavior is correct on all occasions, and you are not endangering your health by staying up to all hours constantly, and you show your father that you have good judgment on these points, I believe you should be on your own in regard to your activities.

GOOD MANNERS

Mother writes thank-you note for Baby's Gift

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you please give me some suggestions . . . a sample note, if you will . . . as to what to say in acknowledging baby gifts? (Also please tell me if the note should be signed with, just the mother's name, or with the names of both mother and father?)

J. J.

For these notes of thanks, it's a good idea to keep in mind the basic recipe for all thank-you notes-for-gifts: (1) thank first for the thoughts that prompted the sending of the gift; (2) then mention specifically the name of the gift (not vaguely, "your gift"); (3) comment enthusiastically about its attractive and/or useful features (somewhat like this):

Dear Margaret,

How kind you were, and how generous, to send such a beautiful gift to mark Tim's arrival! His sugar is a delight to her, snuggly comfort, and I'm sure she already knows how becoming it is to her, for she wears it with such pride. As I am writing to thank you, Dorothy is wearing the sugar you sent her and is waving her little hand to try to thank you too.

Bob and I do hope that you and Bill are coming this way soon, so that you can come to "make the acquaintance of" this new member of our family.

Dearest love and deepest thanks to you both from Bob and me . . . and from our new daughter.

Affectionately,
Josephine

The Marking of the Wedding Ring

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

What is the usual marking of the wedding ring . . . are the bride's initials or the groom's initials first?

Groom-to-be

The usual marking is: G.T.B. to S.M.C., with the wedding date, June 22, 1949, or the abbreviation 6-22-49. Or the bride's initials may come first if the initials are engraved without the "to": S.M.C.-G.T.B., June 22, 1949.

The Wedding Toasts

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. When at a wedding reception only a simple menu is served (sandwiches, tea and coffee, small cakes and the wedding cake) and there is no bride's table, when should the toasts be given, first or last? And when should the wedding cake be cut?

2. Should a formal reception invitation be sent to the officiating priest?

H.M.

1. When there is not to be a bridal table, the bride should make a definite plan as to when she wishes to have the most important toast proposed . . . that is, the toast proposed by the best man to "the bride and groom". In this circumstance this toast is very often proposed when the bride and groom cut the first piece of the bride's cake. Other toasts may follow at any moments convenient or "auspicious". When there is no seated service, the bridal cake may be cut whenever most convenient: either when all, or at least the majority, of the guests have arrived, or at some convenient time before the couple plan to depart.

2. Yes.

No Wrist Watch With Full Evening Dress

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

To settle a discussion, will you please answer this question: Is it correct or incorrect for a man to wear a wrist watch with full evening dress ("tails")?

Bill S.

Incorrect.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Eyebrows are themselves again

If you are still sweeping your tresses upward and your foreheads is naked and unashamed, do make the most of your eyebrows. Keep them in perfect form, and by monkey business. Goofy eyebrows are definitely out and, according to the viewpoint of this reporter, they should never have been in. They have been responsible for many brittle looking mugs that, otherwise, would have been soft, sweet and attractive.

A pretty girl may fancy that she can get away with any beauty madness, but she's all wrong. In nearly all cases Mama Nature knows best. Only a little neat trimming with the tweezers is necessary. The brows of one person would look horrible with the features of another. The brows are as definitely a part of the facial composition as any other feature, and must conform in shape, size and color to the general contour of the face. To enhance the one that nature gave us and, with perhaps a slight remodelling, reach a state of perfection.

To annihilate the poor things until they look like two whisps of black darning cotton is to deprive us the countenance of an interesting and expressive element. Hollywood make-up artists, catering to the lovelies of the screen, are quite conscious that eyebrows are back to normal, and you are not to argue about it.

We can cultivate the eyebrows Nature gave us

No doubt, when you attend a movie, you notice the change that has taken place. Pretty faces look more natural and human, less mask-like. Quirky, distorted lines not only make the countenance look unfeminine, but they make one look older. If too much make-up is used, with the pencilled eyebrows, a girl looks lithographic. Then she is not in step with the good-looks parade. The idea is to appear natural in line and coloring.

The present day pattern is neither wide nor narrow, conforms to the shape of the eyes. There should be a neat arch. The silky shafts should glitter like the raven's wing.

The practice of drawing down the far corners, extending them with the crayon into an area where the little fuzzers never grew, can create an expression that is almost as unpleasant and doleful as drooping lip-ends.

Wild hairs that have wandered from the fold must be plucked, of course. These wayward ones make the feminine face look untidy. Whether one weeds along the under or upper border depends upon the formation of the forehead. If the forehead is high, do your tweezing-teasing along the lower line. If it is low, lower the eyebrows a bit; then you'll be a bit more of a high brow.

The girl with sharp features would do well to have the eyebrows fairly well separated; this rule applies also to the girl whose eyes are set close together.

RAWDON

Scottish Letter Depicts Conditions In Stirling

Rawdon—Perhaps our Scotch friends in Rawdon would be interested to know that conditions in Stirling, Scotland, re the housing situation, is much the same as in Canada. Housing is a current are high and there is a big difference in rentals for various homes.

Stirling Observer 17,223 Copies

We received two copies of the Stirling Observer last week which is an eight page weekly newspaper published every Tuesday afternoon. The certified weekly sales is 17,223 copies. The prices quoted in the advertisements were all in the high brackets.

High Prices

A story in the column devoted to women's interests depicts the thrill of going to town for the first time since coupon went off. The big idea of being able to have a coat, a suit, new sheets, towels, handkerchiefs etc., and then the big disappointment when the shopper found everything so high priced that all she bought was some tea and a tube of toothpaste.

In the poetry sections are found many gems, one of which paid tribute to the "Men of Arnhem", who were the fighting cream of Britain, who sacrificed their very lives for freedom once again.

Housing Difficult

The editorial said in part "Evidence continues to accumulate of the very real difficulties that are confronting tenants of pre-war municipal houses as a result of the increases in rents. While we have gone fully into the facts and figures of these rent increases we feel it is our duty to ask the Town Council to reconsider the matter again. It is never too late to correct an error in judgment or to right a social wrong. Any such action taken by the Town Council can only enhance its prestige in the eyes of the community".

MELROSE

Miss Creyke Gives Talk on Personality, Dress

Melrose—(Special)—On Monday, the East Tyendinaga and Quinte Institutes met with the Melrose branch at Tyendinaga Township Hall, Melrose, where the district conference "Personality and Dress" was held.

The meeting opened at 10.30 a.m., with Miss Creyke, the guest speaker, being introduced by Mrs. Grant McLaren.

The meeting was adjourned at 12 o'clock and a pot luck dinner was served.

In the afternoon, Miss Creyke chose the following topics: "Conversational Ability", "Expressed Opinion": "Manner and Poise Assurance and Appearance". She explained that an attractive appearance may open for you innumerable doors that might forever have remained closed.

Miss Creyke also pointed out that grooming routines, carriage and posture, exercise routines, and pleasant expression are of great benefit, stating "that physical discomfort and mental discomfort cause people to frown", and she quoted the following prayer.

"God grant us courage to change the things we should change, strength to endure the things we cannot change and wisdom to know the one from the other."

She also stressed the importance of the selection of clothes, being suitable to your type as well as to your budget.

Excellent information for grooming could be obtained from the book "Better Than Beauty" which Miss Creyke suggested the Institutes should purchase.

The last topic of the day was the correct method of applying makeup, which was demonstrated.

The district president, Mrs. T. Leslie, moved a vote of thanks and thought the conference would be helpful to all.

The Quinte President, Mrs. Greenlaw, thanked Melrose Branch for their hospitality and Miss Creyke for her interesting information, who in turn thanked the ladies and hoped she would have the opportunity to come back again.

Chambray All Day

By PRUNELLA WOOD

A CLOSEFFUL of neat, pretty frocks like this two-tone striped chambray is the start of a pleasant and pretty summer. And a closetful of them would cost very little at that, while assuring their owner that everyday duties and relaxations could be very smart at the drop of a soap flake.

The stripes run horizontally on the skirt with its shallow pleats; also on the shirt tucked in which is tucked like a man's dress shirt. The rest of the blouse is made with vertical stripes, and the collar and cuffs are of white pique.

Women Practise Their Curtseys For Presentation

By JOAN CAPREOL

London, May 13 (Reuters) — A group of 125 excited young women from the Commonwealth, including 45 from Canada, are practising their curtseys here for the presentation parties to be held next week by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace.

The ten presentation parties—May 18 and 19 —take the place of the pre-war courts. They were originally to have been held last January before the departure of the King and Queen on their tour of Australia and New Zealand which was postponed owing to the King's illness.

Attendance counts as a court presentation, which is a top ambition for thousands of young women throughout the Commonwealth. In addition to the 45 girls from Canada, 60 from Australia and 20 from South Africa will be among the 5,000 presented during the two afternoon parties in the brilliant state rooms of the palace. These affairs are considered more important politically than the garden parties in July.

The guests will see Princess Elisabeth and Prince Philip and Queen Mother Mary, but Princess Margaret will still be on holiday in Italy.

Mrs. Dana Wilgress, tall, vivacious wife of the new Canadian high commission, will present the Canadians May 18. Most are wives of service men on duty in Britain. One of them will be her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Victor Wilgress.

Debutantes Joan Price and Mary Hanson, who have been at school in Switzerland, come from Montreal for the parties.

The wives of the three Canadian service chiefs will be presented. They are Mrs. Edward Plow (Army), Mrs. Owen Robertson (Navy) and Mrs. Hurley, wife of air commodore Hurley, RCAF. Others will be Mrs. Robert Ford and Mrs. Saul Rae, wives of the first secretaries at Canada House.

R. D. ARNOTT.

Pledge Full Support

John Wesse, former member of parliament for Prince Edward-Lennox, was also brief and to the point. "I have no desire to be the candidate, but I pledge my full support to whomever is nominated."

Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, of Belleville, told the delegates that her business and personal reasons he could not allow his name to stand for nomination. "Probably sometime in the future, when the going gets tough, I may come back. Right now I am gracefully retiring."

He urged the support of all for the successful nominee and warned them that the riding would not be won by standing idly by. "Let's get out and fight," he said.

Lots Name Stand

"My wife when approached on the subject of standing for nomination told me to do whatever my conscience dictated." Ex-Mayor R. D. Arnott, K.C. said. "And following those instructions I am letting my name stand."

"You will make no mistake in selecting one of the candidates present," he said. He recalled the fact that Conservative Leader George Drew was elected in 1937 "as was" Dr. Drew went to give the province good service for his party but for the province as well. "We owe much of George Drew."

The forthcoming election may be a complete turnover, one way or another, Mr. Arnott predicted. "We may have an overall majority. But we cannot win this riding unless we vote in the polling ballot box. I can assure you we cannot win this election without the co-operation and support of the worker. The worker deserves the more credit than does the successful candidate."

Promised Best Ability

"If I am elected, I pledge that I will give the best of my ability to not only the Progressive Conservative party but the Dominion of Canada as a whole."

Arthur L. Burke reviewed the party convention at Ottawa and also mentioned world conditions as they are today. He urged that all go well to their homes in the towns, villages and farms in the present will hear of the next leader George Drew, who will bring a new prosperity and success.

He had stood loyally by the party, provincially and federally and has never yet asked nor expected anything.

If there is any justice in the Progressive Conservative party, or a spirit of fairness or reward for faithful service, I feel it would be right to nominate me. I leave the matter in your hands. I feel you will do the right thing."

Chairman Clerk Erle Dempsey expressed his appreciation of the number of ladies present "because after all it is the Conservative government that gave the women their franchise." He also expressed his appreciation of the job done by George H. Stokes and by George Drew who won three elections in five years.

Claims Liberals Jittery

"No wonder the Liberal party is getting jittery," he said. "With Drew in action they're losing hope of winning the election and every thing else."

"I am no stranger in this riding," Mr. Denyes said. "I bear a would-be senator has promised Hastings South to the Liberals. Despite this boast I tell you that this riding will never be delivered to the Liberals."

Abbott and the Liberal government have given country nothing, he declared. "They decided to take less money in 1949 than in 1948, when they collected ten billions more than was necessary in order to bribe the people in the forthcoming election. But the people were not fooled."

Not Looking For Bigger Job

"Somebody said I had a good job," Mr. Denyes said. "I am not looking for another job, just a bigger majority for the Conservative party. That is all I am interested in." Mr. Denyes withdrew his name from the list of nominees with the statement that "whoever is nominated can count on Erie Denyes for 100 per cent support."

"Use your own judgment and pick a winner," George H. Stokes adjured the convention. "He was pleased with the large attendance," he said, "with the hope that those present had felt the pulse of other people in their various communities and had made up their mind as to whom would carry the Progressive Conservative banner."

He urged the convention to select the best "vote-getter" one who will follow the leader for "we are going into the most important campaign in forty years."

"George Drew," Mr. Stokes said, "stands head and shoulders above all previous leaders. Get behind him and let us have a better Canada in which to live."

Scrutineers Named

At the conclusion of the nominees addresses, President Graham appointed Messrs N. Tompkins, Stirling; Merv Harrison, Thurlow; Ross Bailey, Belleville and Borden Lee as scrutineers. Ballots were passed out to the delegates.

Some thirty minutes later, President Graham announced the nomination of Mr. Arnott.

TRADE

Other Countries Get Trade

"While Mr. Howe, now, before the election, boasts of having restored part only of our lost markets for salmon, fruit, pulp, apples, flour and lumber which he says amount to 25 millions in all we find that Russia, Poland, Denmark, Hungary and Turkey have increased their volume of trade, most of which was formerly supplied by Canada."

Mr. Howe charged that the present government is secretly "some extra sales of apples, salmon and lumber" as a small reparation for the markets lost under its regime.

Canadian markets in Britain in 1948 fell off by 67 million dollars while at the same time total British imports increased by over one billion dollars, he said.

Countries both within and without the "iron curtain" all increased their exports to the British market in 1948 over 1947 while Canada lost markets which she had been supplying in many cases below what was being paid to the above countries.

Urged Premier to Attend

"The Hon. George Drew and the Conservative party," the speaker said, "urge the Prime Minister to attend the Empire-Trade Agreement Conference himself.

"Instead of that, he sent over a junior member, Mr. Pearson, who has done nothing to bring our serious trade situation to the attention of the United Kingdom.

"Mr. Pearson as Canada's Prime Minister considered it important enough to attend some of these British Commonwealth conferences personally, in view of this socialistic trend toward bulk trading that has already threatened Empire trade relationships."

Criticizes Controls

Mr. Rowe charged that the dangerous trend toward bureaucratic control has been continued by the present government, in agricultural marketing, timber, steel, etc., the government tightens in peace time their wartime controls.

He said that the House of Commons has grown to be a glorified debating carnival of issues usually settled in advance by orders-in-council. From 1940 to March 1, 1949, 154,000 orders-in-council were passed, establishing laws and regulations independent of Parliament. Parliament for the rights of parliament must be

Mr. Arnott paid fine tribute to his wife for the support she had given him in his political past and "she will give it to me again."

"This will be a hard fight," he said. "But it will be a clean fight on my part and on the party's part."

New Community Playground For Children Opened Through Generosity of District Parents

Unique in the establishment of children's playgrounds in this city, if not in the entire district, a new community playground has been opened on Charles Street, and purely through the efforts of parents in the immediate area.

Weeks of toil and effort have gone into completing the playground and with all details at last arranged, Wednesday afternoon saw the fruits of labor realized as the new playground was officially opened.

Lending a festive air to the occasion was the presence of the local public schools band which marched up the street led by a very active and realistic clown. Then as the band played snappy tunes the clown romped with the well over-100 kiddies present. All tried the new slides, teeters, and swings, enjoyed free soft drinks and ice cream and generally had a whale of a time.

Community Effort

The new playground is purely a community effort; it was planned and completed by parents in the immediate district and mothers in the area will see that it is properly supervised. Age limit for children playing in the playground has been set at 12 years.

Lack of a city owned playground in the district, led to parents living on Charles Street in the area between Victoria Ave. and Pine Street to start the project.

Actively led by Dr. R. T. Potter, a committee of fathers investigated the possibility of utilizing a vacant lot on the street. Owner of the lot was approached, consent was readily given, and the committee then swung into action.

At first it seemed the parents had taken on a rather ambitious plan as it was considered all the new playground apparatus. Then the school band, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Cooper, and headed by the colorful clown, marched up the street and the playground was opened.

Refreshments Donated

Neighboring mothers brought sandwiches, the Coca Cola Company and Fred Irwin, supplied the soft drinks and Hordens Ltd. the ice cream. To make it complete there was the gift of a balloon or other plaything for each child. B. W. Brown donated the buns.

And so it was with full tummies and tired happiness that the children of Charles Street and district last night went to bed to dream of their new playground.

But just to assure that the new playground is properly maintained in the future a board of management has been set up.

This committee is comprised of Dr. R. T. Potter as chairman, H. B. Keller, secretary treasurer, Gordon Y. White and W. T. Meagher. In addition is the group of mothers who have arranged a schedule to make certain of adequate supervision.

$300,000 Suit Is Entered

Los Angeles, May 12 — (AP)— Amos 'N' Andy have been sued for $300,000 by the William Morris Talent Agency which claims it lost a weekly commission of $11,000 after negotiating a contract for the radio comedians with Lever Bros. Company. The suit alleges Amos 'N' Andy sold their program to the Columbia Broadcasting System for $2,000,000 last summer and tried to end commission payments to the agency, contending the Lever Bros. contract was terminated. Bill the suit claims. Lever Bros. continued as show sponsors.

SHANNONVILLE
New Anglican Church Will Be Erected

Shannonville. — A building of interest to the district will be erected early in the Fall, namely an Anglican Church on Orchard Park Drive, Homewood Heights, which will assume the beautiful name of "St. Margarets on the Hill". Rev. E. M. Caldwell, rector of Holy Trinity, Anglican Church, in Shannonville, has been appointed director of this construction program by the church' extension committee of the Diocese of Ontario. Rev. Mr. Caldwell has already had experience in designing and supervision of the "Archbishop Anderson Memorial Church" in the old Sea City of Cochrane, Ont.

The church will be erected on property owned by Mr. Bertram Docter and will be situated in the centre of the area of new homes in Homewood Heights. This church will form a new parish in Belleville to look after the new families moving into this area.

St. John's Mission Church on Herchimer Avenue, will be eventually sold and the congregation incorporated into this new parish. At the present time, St. John's Mission is attached to the parish of Point Anne and Shannonville with Rev. Mr. Caldwell as their rector. Some 60 families will now participate in the administration of this church on Herchimer Avenue, Belleville.

It is interesting to learn that Most Reverend Archbishop Lyons now of Kingston, was for some twenty years rector of St. Thomas' Church, in Belleville, and that he was instrumental in the beginning of the church on Herchimer Avenue, which is now St. John's Mission.

Plans are already in progress for a financial campaign to aid in the building of St. Margaret's on the Hill, which will undoubtedly cost some $35,000 to $40,000 to erect. Committees are now being appointed to look after this project in every detail. To Christ Church and St. Thomas will be added, St. Margaret's on the Hill. This should indeed be a beautiful edifice and add to the beauty and spiritual life of the city.

Flash Fire Destroys 5,000 Forestry Trees

Simcoe, Ont., May 12 — (CP) —The worst fire in history of the Provincial St. Williams Forestry Station in nearby South Walsingham township Wednesday wiped out more than 25,000 trees with a loss estimated at over $20,000.

The blaze raced through 65 acres of the 4,000-acre station before it was checked. More than 500 persons helped Superintendent Frank Newman and his staff of 130 men fight the fire, many farmers arriving at the scene with tractors and plows to cut fire-breaks.

The fire was brought under control about two and a half hours after the outbreak. Mr. Newman said he believed a carelessly-thrown match or cigaret was the cause.

Fern Windgrove of St. Williams and Mrs. Jack Bahus of Port Rowan, both owned the fire about three p.m. The flames at that time were seen on the 44th concession about two and a half miles northwest of the station headquarters.

Seattle, May 13 — (AP) — A loosened plexiglass canopy in a 600-mile-an-hour XB-47 stratojet bomber killed the pilot on a test flight at the nearby Moses Lake, Wash., air base yesterday. The canopy somehow shook loose and fatally injured pilot, Edward Osler, 30, of Bellevue, Wash., while he was checking the automatic pilot in making a descent. The co-pilot landed the plane.

Homes Demand Color Splash Experts Say

By DOROTHY ROE

New York — (AP) — Women in the United States at present are at the mercy of a lot of fuddy duddy decorators digging up the dead remains of the past and filling their homes with drab gadgets.

So says Elizabeth Banning, young woman from out of the west, who has been busily revitalizing industrial plants, offices, terminals, and even homes by splashing them with broad expanses of daring color.

Miss Banning first came into the national eye during the war, when she proved to industrialists that workers' efficiency increased in direct proportion to the amount of cheerful color used on war plant interiors.

Just back from a quick tour of Europe, Miss Banning reports as follows:

"London is hungry for modern architecture, modern furniture, modern color.

"Italy is the most vital place in Europe, with new and modern buildings going up all over the place, sleek cars that outdo anything seen in America, fashions more distinguished than those of Paris.

"France has gone back to tying pink bows on furniture. It's just pretty fun-loving and relaxed.

"And New York is borrowing all the old ideas of Europe and ignoring the new."

All the real news in modern design is coming out of California, says Miss Banning, who predicts:

"If there ever is a renaissance of art in this country, it's going to start in California. There people aren't overweighted down with tradition. They're not afraid to do things that are startling and new.

"After all, any new art form, however feeble, is better than an art that is dead."

Miss Banning attended the conference of the American Institute of Decorators in New York just before she took off for her flight tour of Europe.

"Frankly, I was disappointed," she said. "Being out in California most of the time, I felt that in New York I would find all the new and exciting things. What I saw at the conference was a lot of stuff out of the mouldy past. An example was an old breakfront smeared up with plaster to make it look 'arty.' It wasn't even real. Just a ferocious gadget."

Miss Banning's latest venture is a new system of color "chips" for the W. P. Fuller Company, paint manufacturers, which makes it possible for women to select colors for their homes by playing with cards, says she:

"The main thing women should learn is not to be afraid to admit what they like in the way of color or decoration, even if nobody has everdone anything like it before. They shouldn't strive to make their homes a carbon copy of great-grandmother's parlor."

Great Increase Of Girl Guides In German Zone

Berlin — (Reuters — Between 250 and 300 groups of girls are actively engaged today in the Girl Guide movement in the United States occupied zone of Germany.

Considering that up to January 1947, there were only about 20 groups and that the promotion work had been done, this growth of the Girl Guide organization is striking.

In a survey made for the group activities branch of United States military government's education and cultural relations divisions, Miss Gertrude Bruns, United States, visiting consultant from the International Council of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, finds that there are two sources of encouragement for the movement.

One is the support of the Catholic Church which organized its first group in Munich in March, 1947. The fact that a Guide structure was set up following a directive from the highest church authority created an organization of substance in its size in short time.

Today, there are more than 1,000 Girl Guides in groups affiliated to various Catholic churches throughout the zone.

The second is the summer-training scholarship to youth leadership sponsored by the military government. This was begun in 1947 when representatives of the world Girl Guide organizations came from Great Britain, Eire and Denmark to assist in the training of active leaders of German groups selected for their special interest and geographical location.

Big Program

In addition, local teachers gave lectures and helped to organize sports activities, games, singing, and studies in nature lore and psychology. This was a valuable object lesson for trainees to see the resources of the local community. Other activities such as camping skills, dramatics and folk dancing were interspersed with discussions on the patrol system, the world association, the history and aims of scouting and guiding, program planning, and tests for Brownies and seniors.

German girls returning from these training courses are eager to bring their groups into line with the international policies and practices of the world organization.

This pressure from the Germans themselves is proving far more effective than any amount of persuasion from non-German sources.

Because of the beneficial results of helping the Germans to help themselves, more German leaders should receive training, according to Miss Bruns. The activities of the Guides, when the leader is untrained are usually confined to hiking, singing and folk dancing, whereas typical Guide activities "are at character-building and international co-operation.

The most economic and fruitful training method, she suggests, would be to bring active trains from flourishing organizations in other countries to the United States zone more often. In addition, she believes that if German leaders were given the opportunity to observe the Guide movement in other countries, they would learn new ideas to put into practice on their return home.

Finally, Miss Bruns says that to build the German movement on a firm basis, help must be given not only to the as yet unorganized inter-denominational group but also to the denominational organizations.

Children of Mary Celebrate Mother's And Sodality Day

Mother's Day and World Sodality Day were aptly celebrated on Sunday last when the children of Mary held their annual mother and daughter Communion breakfast.

The Right Reverend Monsignor Nicholson, guest speaker, gave an inspiring talk on "Our Heavenly Mother, Our Earthly Mother."

A toast to the Mothers was given by Miss Joan McIntyre, to which Mrs. Fiskin, on behalf of the mothers, responded. The conveners for the breakfast were the Eucharistic and Catholic Truth Committee under the chairmanship of the Misses Joan Foley and Barbara Mascaro.

Entertainment was provided by the Apostolic Committee and capably handled by the Misses Catherine Meagher and Rita Chapelle as mistresses of ceremonies.

Miss Barbara Forbes rendered a very delightful vocal solo, accompanied by Mrs. Grant. Joan Foley gave a piano solo, after which the mothers and daughters took part in a sing-song led by Mrs. Dunlop.

Appreciation and thanks were extended to Mr. Royal and the Sqires for their excellent music.

Breaks Tradition, Joins Bank Board

New York — (CP) — You'd better look - out, men! They're climbing in the windows — of banks, that is.

It's been an uphill struggle but finally one woman was elected trustee of a New York commercial bank.

She is Mrs. Helen L. Buttenweiser and she was congratulated by Thomas Sosa, president of the Federation of Women Shareholders in American Business, at its spring meeting.

Mrs. Sosa called upon her to be "like Margaret Chase Smith — a delegate at large for women and the stockholders who have created an area of assent, which enables her to be seated and break the lock-out of women on bank boards."

Mrs. Sosa predicted that, by 1952, every major concern will have at least one woman director on its board.

ance Pecora of the New York State Supreme Court, decried the danger of being ostracized by men, lauds and abets women in their endeavors to climb up to director rating. He warned them of their responsibilities in developing an economic democracy as a bulwark against communism and socialism.

Mrs. Sosa remarked that the importance of Mrs. Buttenweiser's appointment lies mainly in whether it will inspire further consideration by bankers of qualified women to sit on boards of industry, transportation and utilities.

Although Mrs. Buttenweiser is the first woman to hold such position, there are many women bank officers, ranging from vice-president to assistant cashier.

Missing Alien Communist Found on Liner

New York, May 12 — (AP) — A stowaway Polish liner at sea has been identified tentatively as Gerhard Eisler, missing alien communist who was under $50,000 bail in the United States.

Eisler had fought for a long time to get out of the country.

The liner Batory, which sailed from New York six days ago, reported that a German stowaway who identified himself as Gerhardt Eisler had paid for first class passage after discovery and was bound for Gdynia, Poland.

The 53-year-old Eisler, who faced two possible jail sentences in the United States and who also was awaiting deportation proceedings, has admitted being a communist, but denied being the No. 1 red in this country — as alleged before the House committee on un-American activities. He even sought help from the United Nations in an effort to be allowed to leave the United States voluntarily and return to his native Germany.

The United States Court of Appeals at Washington refused recently to vacate Eisler's conviction on a charge of concealing communist connections in an application for a permit to leave the country. The conviction on that charge brought a sentence of one to three years.

For several months he has had an appeal pending before the U.S. Supreme Court from a sentence of one year and a $1,000 fine. The penalties were imposed on a conviction of contempt of Congress growing out of his refusal to be sworn as a witness before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Eisler acknowledged during his trial for passport fraud that the United States communist party paid for two trips he made from this country to Europe in the mid 1930s.

SAYS ITS A ZOO WHERE HE LIVES

Toronto, May 12 (CP)—J. D. Scotland, resident of suburban Long Branch, complained to the village council Wednesday night that he was living in a zoo. His left-handed neighbor has 18 chickens, he claimed, six more than a local by-law allows. The family on the right of him had an unspecified number of ducks. Scotland threatened to follow suit and get a cow. The council referred the political officer of health to investigate.

Contractors Are Salvaging Fortune In Red, White Pine

Mississagi, Ont., May 12 (CP) —Early results from what has been termed the greatest lumber salvage operation in eastern Canada in 50 years were announced Wednesday by Ontario lands and Forests officials.

In the charred wastes of Northern Ontario's Mississagi forest area, swept by fire last summer, government-assisted contractors are salvaging a fortune in white and red pine.

The operations, directed by Lands and Forests Department experts, are reported to have recovered in the last seven months more than 70,000,000 feet of usable lumber worth more than $12,000,000. Nine semi-portable and six portable sawmills are already being used and 21 permanent mills are either being built or planned for use in the next two years.

The cut is expected to reach 100,000,000 feet by July 1—an amount equal to the total annual lumber output of all of Eastern Canada.

The department aided in financing the operations when private interests refused to risk their capital. Critics claimed the job was hopeless, the price to the probability of widespread timber spoiling by pine borer, a type of beetle. They said the beetle's larva would ruin the wood before it could be cut.

Damage, however, has been slight, Department officials say they hope to cut well into July before any further borer damage becomes apparent. The beetles are dormant in the winter.

Altogether, officials reported, 20 contractors operating 54 camps and employing 2,000 men were added by the department. Loans to the contractors are said to be $2,000,000 to date with a total of $5,000,000 expected before the job is finished.

Contractors describe the salvaged lumber as "top grade stuff."

Debate Opens On Atlantic Pact In British House

London, May 12 — (CP)—Only scattered opposition from the communists and, so far, left-wing Labor members was expected today as debate opened in the House of Commons on ratification of the North Atlantic Security Treaty.

Leading the debate for the government will be Foreign Secretary Bevin, who played a major part in bringing Britain into the 12-country pact.

Winston Churchill will speak for the Conservatives.

If a division is forced, the vote will be overwhelming as both Labor and the Conservatives have welcomed the pact.

Two Labor members, R. Chamberlain and T. Braddock, and the communist member, Willis Gallagher and Phillip Piratin, both have tabled "amendments calling for rejection of the treaty. Both amendments attack the treaty as "aggressive" and aimed at the Soviet Union.

Wednesday night the government, in a white paper, denied that the pact was aggressive. The treaty's essential purpose is not to win but to prevent a future war, it said.

The pact sets out to make clear beyond all doubt that such a war would only end in disaster for an aggressor.

Any attack would be met with all the united strength of the signatories, which was so great that the final defeat of any aggressor was certain.

"The treaty does not supplant the United Nations, but supplements and strengthens it," the white paper added.

The white paper noted that Russia's misuse of the veto in the United Nations and intransigence of the Russian - bloc countries have so hampered the U. N. that "it can no longer" provide the security which the western countries "desperately require."

Red Forces Push Within 21 Miles Of Shanghai

Two Communist Blows Under Way Against Port

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, May 12 — (AP) — Red forces pushed to within 21 miles of Shanghai today.

Two separate communist attacks were under way. The nearest was at Taicheng, 21 miles to the northwest.

A force southwest of this great Asian city had reached Shihtang, a hamlet 25 miles southwest of Shanghai. Government troops there were reported holding firm.

The Shanghai garrison ordered all government departments out of Shanghai within two weeks.

The communique indicated the communists had made a substantial advance from their position 50 miles southwest of the city. This would put the southwest prong of the red forces and the northwest force about equal distance from Shanghai. The northwest front was described as flexible, ranging from 21 to 25 miles from the city.

The Taicheng action was described as fairly heavy. The reds threw two regiments against the Nationalists under artillery barrage.

Central News said the government sought to dislodge the reds from Santaochao, a village a few miles north of Hankow. The news agency said the communists withdrew to Nilkow, about 13 miles north of the Yangtze port of Hankow.

The Chinese air force, meantime, reported 200 communists were killed in the eastern suburbs of Kashan, southwest of Shanghai. That seems to indicate the reds, who attacked from the west, have swarmed through Kashan. But the garrison here has not announced fall of the city.

Cornet Damaged When Case Hit By Passing Car

A youthful public school bandsman musician is looking for the driver of a certain car today who yesterday damaged his cornet as he was riding on Dundas Street, and then drove away without stopping.

Thirteen-year-old Jack Hannan, 163 Burnham Street, was riding to school with his cornet case on the handlebar. A car came up behind and struck the case, knocking the handle off, and damaging the cornet. The car slowed down and then drove away without stopping.

In his excitement Jack failed to note the licence number of the car, but he did note the color of the vehicle and the licence letter which was related to police.

Jack is a member of the public school band and despite his damaged cornet took part in the opening ceremonies of the Charles Street playground on Wednesday afternoon.

ST. LAURENT DREW WARMING UP IN CAMPAIGN

Two Cabinet Ministers Nominated as Election Campaign Spreads

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Communism, health and aircraft headlined Canada's June 27 general election yesterday.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, moved into Newfoundland, the first political leader to enter the new province in the campaign, and told an audience at Corner Brook that a government under his leadership would pass laws to deal effectively with communists.

"We believe in freedom," he said, "but not in the type of freedom that allows communists to carry out their treacherous activity."

Prime Minister St. Laurent, opening a jaunt through the Maritimes with a visit to Saint John, N. B., that there are "no great outstanding issues" in the campaign and added, in an implied dig at opposition groups, that the Liberal party would make only those promises which it intended seriously to fulfill.

Two Ministers Nominated

As cabinet ministers began stepping into the campaign, two of them were nominated as candidates Wednesday night. Justice Minister Garson was nominated in the Manitoba seat of Marquette where he was elected to the Commons in a by-election this year, and Transport Minister Chevrier was nominated in Stormont. He has represented the Eastern Ontario seat since 1933.

Health Minister Martin, in a broadcast address from Windsor, said the Liberals have set their sights on a four - point program designed to stimulate prosperity and see that it is "fairly shared."

Outlines Program

The program included national action to keep income and employment high; standards of nutrition and housing adequate to ensure the health of the people; social insurance against privation from unemployment, disability, ill-health and old age, and policies of national development.

Trade Minister Howe told campaign meeting at Englehart, Ont., that he is ready to answer Mr. Drew's charges, made recently in the Commons, that North Star aircraft operated by Trans-Canada Air Lines are unsafe. The airline, said Mr. Howe, has yet to lose or injure a pilot or a passenger in a North Star.

In Simpson, Sask., Agriculture Minister Gardiner said there is no truth in opposition charges that the Liberal government is losing Canada's foreign markets. He said foreign markets "have taken all our surpluses at high returns. We could sell much more of most farm products if he had them in surplus supply."

Mr. Drew told another Newfoundland audience at Port Aux Basques that his party's stand on labor and social security issues is being misrepresented. He reviewed the Progressive Conservative party's platform of old-age pensions of $40 a month and family allowances regardless of the number of children.

There are 9,792 candidates. Of these, 3,904 are Labor and 3,251 Conservative. There are also 1,743 Independent candidates with Conservative support.

Other parties are represented as follows: Independents 743; Liberals 572; Communists 577; Union Movement 13.

There are 83 county boroughs, 309 municipal boroughs and 28 metropolitan (London) boroughs. Labor now controls 49 of the municipal boroughs, 56 count boroughs and 23 metropolitan boroughs.

Saturday Conservative headquarters issued a statement claiming that in voting so far they had claimed 121 seats, including 60 from Labor, with 11 losses. It put Labor gains at 19, Liberal gains at 115.

Morgan Phillips, Labor party leader, said the current series of local elections, including those in 33 Scottish county councils, had gained Labor 191 seats compared with a loss of 130.

In reply, the Conservatives said their figures were "authentic returns" based on 272 urban district elections Monday and Tuesday.

The last borough election took place in November, 1947. Labor, which had swept to power in the general election landslide in 1945, lost 660 seats then. The Conservatives are confident that the trend will be confirmed this time because many councillors who were elected in 1945 will be defending their seats for the first time.

COMMONS GIVES SECOND READING TO IRISH BILL

House Approves Act Recognizing the Republic of Ireland

London, May 12 — (CP) —The House of Commons Wednesday night gave second reading to the government's Ireland bill which recognizes the secession of the Republic of Ireland from the Commonwealth of Nations.

The bill received second reading without division after an amendment to reject it was defeated by a vote of 317 to 12.

The main points of the Ireland bill:

1. It makes the legislative adjustments necessary to give effect to the government's policy of not regarding the Irish republic as a foreign country, nor its citizens as foreigners.

2. It affirms that in no event will Northern Ireland cease to be part of the United Kingdom without the consent of the Northern Ireland parliament.

The bill is intended to clarify the status of the six Northern counties since the 26 southern counties became a "Republic of Ireland" Easter Monday when the last link with the Crown was cut.

The clause in the bill on Northern Ireland has aroused deep resentment in Dublin, capital of the Irish Republic, where government leaders have been planning a world-wide protest. Yesterday the Senate unanimously passed a motion identical to one approved by the Dail Tuesday protesting the Ireland bill.)

After Prime Minister Attlee and Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader, urged passage of the bill, Herbert Morrison wound up with the debate for the government.

Morrison, deputy prime minister, said it was not for the British government to take the initiative to diminish the territory of the United Kingdom.

Attlee said Britain's interest in leaving the Commonwealth would increase the difficulty of arriving at any agreement concerning partition. It was "quite impossible" that Northern Ireland should be excluded from the Commonwealth or the Commonwealth be against her will.

Eden said that if union between Northern and Southern Ireland is to come about, "it must not come by force nor by threats of force, but by agreement and by parliamentary and democratic means."

Sir Hugh O'Neill, Conservative member for Antrim, in giving the point of view of the Northern Ireland government, said:

"British control exists in Northern Ireland with the passionate support and the overwhelming desire of the immense majority of the population. The British we have always been and British we shall remain."

Say Plan Studied For Withdrawal Occupation Troops

U.S. Reported Discussing Question With U.K., France

New York, May 13 (AP)—The United States is reported studying a plan for the withdrawal of foreign occupation troops in Germany to three northern port cities, the New York Times says today.

In a dispatch from Washington by James Reston, the Times says the United States is discussing the plan with Great Britain and France.

It is reported it would provide for the restriction of British troops to the Hamburg area, United States troops to the Bremen area and Russian troops to Stettin on the west bank of the Oder.

France, which has a common frontier with Germany, would withdraw her troops to Stettin on the west bank of the Oder.

France, which has a common frontier with Germany, would withdraw her troops within her own territory.

The story says the western powers apparently have agreed to reject any Soviet proposal at the forthcoming foreign ministers' meeting for complete evacuation of troops.

Three Small Boys Still Missing

Toronto, May 12 (CP)— An all-night police search has failed to uncover any trace of three small Toronto boys, missing from their homes since yesterday.

Missing are William Tavenor, 10, Harold Dietrich, 11, and his eight year old brother George. Mrs. George Dietrich said she feared her two sons were playing in railway box cars in the Old Front area and trains moved before they could get off.

Foreign Office Rather Pleased By Ditty Sung in West Zone, 'We're the Citizens of Trizonia'

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 12 (CP)—Four years ago after Germany's surrender, the foreign office here is pleased rather than irked by a tuneful ditty that is hummed throughout the western zone.

"Wir Sind Die Einegeborenen Von Trizonesien" — "we're the citizens of Trizonia"—is a cocky lyric poking fun at occupation officials, their regulations and at co-operating local politicians.

While it may annoy officials sensitive of their dignity, it indicates that the foreign office's No. 1 problem child is responding to treatment and casting off the inertia of post-war years.

Foreign office spokesmen date the improvement from a year ago. Until then industry was idle, unemployment and communal living brought degeneracy. Personal ethics were sacrificed in the battle for food.

The Allies unable to agree on the sort of Germany they wanted to replace the Nazi Reich, disagreed not only on east-west but on western policy. Ten million refugees from east of the "iron curtain" further complicated the problem.

Introduction last summer of the western deutschemark marked a turning point in Russians and the Berlin blockade, cut it gave the Germans a valid currency and produced industrial and personal changes officials say are remarkable."

Today, says the foreign office, money means something to the German worker. His buying power still is limited but his rations are the best since early in the war. His country at last is taking shape as a political entity.

The Bonn constitution and the occupation statute under which it will operate until a peace treaty is reached with a responsible German government are expected to provide Germany by mid-summer with an elected government, to task under Allied supervision will be to guide Germany to self-respecting membership in the family of nations.

Shadow Cast by Britain's Liberals Seems a Bit Blurred

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 12 (CP)— The shadow cast by Britain's Liberal party still seems a bit blurred around the edges.

Whether it will loom large before the 1950 general election, or fade into political limbo, is not yet clear.

The party's three day annual conference at Hastings, Sussex, did not supply an answer. Amid the crowd and clamor —some 2,400 delegates attended —there were fighting speeches and scenes of high enthusiasm.

But it was difficult to determine whether the Liberals will be able to increase their tiny team of 11 members in the 640-seat House of Commons.

Clement Davies, 64-year-old parliamentary leader, was sure it can.

"Give us a straight fight with a tory and we could beat him easily," he said. "Give us a straight fight with a Socialist and we would win."

There were other portents of a revival of Liberal spirits. Frank Byers, hard-hitting chief whip, raised a £15,302 (?60,806) for his campaign fund at one session. Compared with the Conservative party's £1,000,000 "fighting fund," this was small but nevertheless encouraging.

Unity In Resolutions

The Liberals also showed considerable unity in resolutions on future policy —calling to the Conservatives who have been goaded for a precise statement of policy and have yet produced one.

In general, the Liberals recovery program calls for strong anti-monopoly measures, progressive reduction of good subsidies, close scrutiny of government expenditure, reform and control of the structure of nationalized industries and "co-ownership" in industry.

The last motion produced spirited debate. It would require firms with capital of more than £50,000 employing not fewer than 50 persons to submit schemes enabling employee partnership A resolution which would have provided taxation relief where such schemes were introduced was soundly defeated.

One thing emerged definitely —the Liberals will not make common cause with the Conservatives. Sir Andrew McFadyean, new president of the Liberal Assembly, said there is no foundation for such a hope.

Comment on the conference was divided. The Evening News, Conservative, noting signs of spring, cynically included the Liberals who, it said, "twitched twice, and held a conference."

The Independent Sunday Observer, on the other hand, said the conference left the impression that the Liberals are still "the party of ideas."

Little Mongrel Saves 'Master' From Big Dog

Gillespie, Pa., May 11 (AP)— A little mongrel dog was the toast of his neighborhood today for heroism in saving his master.

The dog, Chubby, jumped into the fray when he saw his four-year-old master, Jackie Strickler, being mauled by a larger dog. Chubby fought the dog until members of the family rescued the child.

Jackie is in fair condition at a hospital where doctors said one ear was torn off and a facial nerve paralyzed.

The boy's grandmother said the large dog suddenly attacked the boy while the two were playing in the yard.

SHARP-SIGHTED!

Edmonton — (CP) — Melvin Cory, who recently found a second hand from a wrist watch on the floor of a railway box car, must have mighty sharp eyesight. The hand was lost in Toronto, and a note on the car wall asked the finder to return it. Mr. Cory is an excellent marksman.

Prime Minister Has Unexpected Stop in Maine

Saint John, N.B., May 11 — (CP)—Prime Minster St. Laurent made an unscheduled three hour stop today at Long Pond, Me., when the C.P.R. train on which he and his party are coming to New Brunswick was halted by a defect in the locomotive.

Long Pond, Me., was described as a tiny place—no more than a railway siding.

Police Holding Brother-in-Law On Murder Count

Edmonton, May 11 — (CP) — Police today are holding Leo Francis Burke on a charge of murdering his brother - in - law, James W. Holmes, 48, Tuesday night with a pen knife in front of Holmes' wife and several members of the family.

Police said that following an argument at Holmes' house, where Burke lives, Burke stabbed the 48-year-old painting contractor in the throat. Burke walked into police headquarters about an hour later.

Holmes, blood gushing from the wound in his throat, was taken to hospital by one of his nine children, Billy, 17, and a friend, Tommy Wharton, 19. He was dead on arrival.

Members of the family said the argument between Burke and Holmes started on the landing of the two-story house. They said they heard Holmes shout "Take him away, take him away," and rushed to find out what the trouble was.

Wharton, Shirley Holmes, 20, and Billy Holmes separated the struggling men.

Celebrates Sixty Years Of Work With Newspaper

By A. E. GRATTON
Canadian Press Correspondent

Cornwall (CP)—Sixty years in the newspaper business and still going strong is the record of genial George Wilson, district editor of The Cornwall Daily Standard-Freeholder. And backing this unusual record is a varied career which for loyalty and efficiency as a small-town newspaper man has few parallels in Canadian journalism.

It was in the summer of 1889 that a red-haired youth started to work as a printer's devil at The Cornwall Standard, a weekly newspaper published by the late Col. N. R. (Big Rory) MacLennan, former Glengarry M.P.P. and star athlete whose feats of strength still are a legend in this district. Within a short time, young Wilson learned the compositor's trade and later became an operator of a monotype, predecessor to the present day linotype.

For some years Mr. Wilson was employed as a monotype operator and reporter. Shortly after The Standard was purchased by the late William Gibbens, he left the mechanical staff to become a full-time reporter, a position he held for more than 40 years before being appointed district editor in 1932. This appointment followed amalgamation of the two Cornwall weeklies—The Standard and The Freeholder.

Since then Mr. Wilson has been a valued member of The Standard-Freeholder's editorial staff and has become well known locally as conductor of his "Down The Lane" column, a weekly feature devoted to old-time city and district personalities and news happenings.

For more than 30 years, Mr. Wilson has been Cornwall correspondent of the Montreal Gazette. Other papers which he served as local correspondent included the Ottawa Journal and the Watertown, N.Y., Daily Times.

Some of the major stories he has covered for his own and out-of-town newspapers include the collapse of the New York-Ottawa railroad bridge span in 1898 in which 17 men were killed; the million-dollar Cornwall business district fire of 933; the Cornwall-Massena earthquake of 1944. For many years, he covered the lacrosse beat when Cornwall teams were prominent in Canada's national game.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Jimmy had a pal to help him move in, not John, not Henry, but a nice, shiny, well-scrubbed face topped with red hair. Pat Keenan would like a bearer establishing Jimmy and Henry in the sitting room. He couldn't have displayed more concern for the arrangement of the furniture if he had been going to live there himself.

When he was all finished moving the bureau an inch more that way, Jimmy's bed an inch more this way, Henry's bed over by the door, he had left a space approximately seven by four feet with absolutely nothing in it. He said wistfully that he was the only one of the gang left outside. Pat wasn't married, he didn't have any furniture, I felt safe and expansive when I said, "It's too bad we haven't another bed. You might just as well room here with the boys as not." Like a flushed cover of quail the three men took off. An hour later they carried a construction cot down the basement stairs and set it up in the space so providentially big enough to receive it.

"Now see here," I said emphatically, "this is absolutely all. Don't dare bring in another one or out you'll all go!" I was sublimely ignorant of O.P.A. regulations.

The boys had said they would make their beds, but I had neglected to stipulate in the bond who was to pick up their clothes. The first time I had occasion to go to the basement after they moved in, I found my progress impeded by mounds of soiled shirts, socks, handkerchiefs, underwear, slippers, shoes, and topcoats.

The only place that was free of towels was the towel rack. It was time they had fresh ones. I climbed two flights of stairs to the linen closet, loaded up with sheets, pillow cases, towels, and wash cloths. I made up four beds. The only difference between Jimmy and Ward's was that I didn't also have to bathe the occupants. I don't care how freckled a boy is or how redheaded, I hate pickled in the washer and electric mangle, set aside my idea of going uptown to lunch, and hunted out a washing that would have done honor to Wo Lee Wong.

While washing on Pat's construction cot, I noticed tiny blood specks on a rear row in the undersheet, a flat, dark bug scuttled out of sight. I thought no more of it until I got to the fighting suds stirred sometimes in the fall work-thirsty way up through the interstices of the mattress, floor, or the spiders which build their webs most industriously in the corners. However, I happened to meet Pat on his way down to his room and saw how bitten his cheek was, that his eyelid seemed swollen shut.

"Bed bugs! I screamed, and clapped my hands over my mouth for fear the neighbors might have heard me. "Pat," I said, "this is disgraceful. All my life I've known there was such a thing as bed bugs, but I never heard of anyone who actually had them. Quill now. And it has to be me!" Then, more relevantly, I asked, "How do you kill bed bugs?"

Pat didn't know.

"Well, you've got to find out," I said. "Pat, you talk to your foreman. I'll bet he knows a lot about things like this. Ask him what to do."

The foreman said there wasn't anything to do.

I telephoned my ex - cleaning woman, an unctite soul on all matters of housekeeping. I posed the question in the interest of an anonymous best friend. Mrs. Hicky said, "I'll tell you what. You make a quill and dip it in carbolic acid and go around all the seams of the mattress and into the tufts. Set it outside to sun; nobody'll know but what you're doing your house cleaning early," she explained, being sensitive, too, to public opinion. "Then you wash the whole bedstead with strong soap and water and carbolic acid. You got a box spring on that bed? Get it outdoors, too."

"No," I replied, and tossing all subterfuge out the window, I told her the facts.

"Hmmmm," she grunted, "too bad. I ain't got the time to come over and straighten you out. First thing you know you'll have 'em in all four beds down there. It's nothing more catching than bed bugs. If I was you," she advised, "I'd get me a sulphur candle and burn it. Just for luck."

We burned it, but the fumes refused to be dispelled after we opened up the room again and we had to tell Jimmy, Henry and John what was up.

Jim went out after kerosene John carried the mattress to the alley, saturated it well with oil, and touched it off. In a circle at the obsequies stood Rob, Jimmy, Henry, John, Pat and myself. It was dark as only a snowless winter night can be. A shaft of fire shot up into the air. The night became as day. We didn't attract as many spectators as a burning tenement, but we did have an enthusiastic audience of small children. They shouted triumphantly to their less fortunate buddies, racing down the alley too late for the fireworks, "Hey, fellow! Guess what? Roberts got bed bugs!"

The Roberts not only had bed bugs, they also had beer in the kitchen refrigerator, a case at a time, and all the time. Pat asked if they might keep their beer on ice since the temperature of the basement was too warm and that of the out-of-doors too cold. The bar refrigerator was full as there was no alternative except to give up one shelf in the kitchen icebox. I never opened its door after that, that I didn't grouch like a shortstop prepared to handle a grounder.

I sprinted Rob that he had been right; I glatly admitted it, thankfully even, I was sick of knocking myself out, and I said him it was going to be Roberts' House for Roberts' from now on. And I meant it.

I jumped out of the tub—this before I learned to take the receiver off the hook while I took a bath—and the phone cut me fifth ring.

"Miz Roberts," a soft voice said, "Ah'm Lieutenant Vickery. Ah'm from Alabama."

I said suspiciously, by this time leery of speaking to strange men.

"A very good friend of yours and mine tol' me you have more room than—"

"A very good friend of yours," I interrupted.

Lieutenant Vickery laughed softly, "Miz Roberts," he went on, "Ah'd like awfully much to come to see you." Now I've heard as much as the next one about Southern hospitality, and I didn't want to be caught short on Northern hospitality, so I said, in my most social and insincere manner, "I'd be delighted to have you call, Lieutenant Vickery, and Mr. Roberts would be delighted, too. Not a business call, you understand."

He asked again about a room.

I took another hitch at it. "Lieutenant Vickery," I began in my coolest, politest voice, "this is our house and we must be the ones to say when it is full. We—"

"You said you'd be delighted to have me call," Lieutenant Vickery interrupted. "Ah'll be right ovah."

As I opened the door to him, he turned both his dimples to their maximum candle power. "Well, you come in," I said, indicating the living room. He was already halfway up the stairs.

"Which way is your guest room?" he asked, flashing those dimples again.

He was young—not more than 22, I guessed—exuberant, broad-shouldered, handsome, and worn of all winsome charming. I followed him up the stairs.

"This is a lovely home you got here, Miz Roberts," he said. Like a bloodhound, he followed his nose to the guest room. "Now this is something like!" he exclaimed, as he entered the room. I was surprised he thought so, for our guest room is Early Girlie Dinzmore with ceiling fixture and bowl on lamp shades. "Sally Fluff'il love this!"

"Sally Fluff!"

"Mah bride, ma'am," he said proudly.

"Where are you living now?" I asked.

"At the Green Hotel."

"Ah, then you have a place to take Sally."

"Miz Roberta," he said earnestly, "have you ever lived at the Green Hotel?"

"No."

"Well, ma'am, it's all right for a pile of fellows, Ah guess, but you don know what yore saying if you say li'd be all right for Sally Fluff. She's pretty and she's young and she hasn't ever lived away from home befo'. She wouldn't know how to handle herself amongst all those men. They're wolves, that's what they are. Ah calc'l stand to think of them ogling her every time she goes out or comes in the doah. Ah can't be home all the time."

"I know how you feel," I said, "and it reflects the greatest credit on you, but this room has only a single bed."

"Ah'll move in an army cot for Sally."

"Not on your life! We tried that once. Even a cot can learn." Vickery looked startled by this offside remark, as though he thought I had learn leave of my senses. Whatever double he entertained of my sanity, he didn't allow them to stand in his way. "Then Ah'll just naturally sleep on the floor." He snapped on his dimples again. "Ah've got to have this room."

I was beaten, I knew that, but I at least wanted to help win the Peace. "I've never had another woman living in the house." I began. "I don't know how it'll work out. One thing I do know; I can't have her in my kitchen, or in the laundry. We have four men living in our basement." What I meant was I didn't want "things" eternally hung up to dry. "And I'll be very poor company. It'll go against the grain with me not to be more hospitable. And I'm afraid it will hurt Sally."

"No, it won't," Vickery interrupted eagerly. "Ah've got it figgered out. Sally likes to lie in bed mawnin's. Ah'll get us a thermos bottle and have it filled with coffee every night last evening. And we come home, and we'll keep fruit and doughnuts and cinnamon buns and stuff like that in our room and she'll make her breakfast off that. Ah get home 'round 4 o'clock. Then Ah'll take her ovah town and buy her a good lunch. We'll have our dinner late at the Officers' Club." He sifted his gun to a beguiling angle. "You wouldn't object if Sally Fluff rinsed out a few things in the bathroom, would you?"

I tried to regard him coldly. He flashed the dimples.

That night I located the toy ironing board, traveler's iron, clothes line, and washboard I took with me on trips. I fixed up a tray with Roger's effet, cups and dishes added a can opener and tea towels and a small electric grill which would boil, fry, broil, toast, and poach, and set the whole business up in Vickery's room. I made the supreme sacrifice by trading my beloved double bed for the guest room single.

Fish Mint Frosting: In top of double boiler, mix thoroughly 2 unbeaten egg whites, 1½ cups sugar, 2 tbsps. water, and 1½ tsp. white corn syrup. Marriage Bureau Business Booms In Modern World

By NORMAN CRISBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)— Although one in every nine marriages in Britain ends in divorce, London marriage bureau say they are enjoying a boom comparable to that which prevailed at the end of the war.

Heather Jenner, principal of one, said the reason might be that "in a world that is unsettled politically and economically, single people feel the need of a partner.

"It is probably a sign of the times, too, that women applicants nowadays are more insistent on the stability of a man's job.

Women of 25 to 30 form the largest age group and most of them "seek men of 40 and over who are well-established in business or professional life."

Other agencies report a marked increase in the number of women willing to go to Canada and Australia as brides.

Budgetary Influence

I think Sir Stafford Cripps' last budget may have had something to do with this," said the manager of a small West End bureau. "Many women tell me they are sick and tired of conditions in Britain and are unwilling to raise families here."

He said the average age of male applicants is about 30 years and six months. Almost without exception, men look for domestic-ted, home-loving women, six or eight years younger than themselves.

"There are rare exceptions," he added, "where we have actually introduced men to women two years older and matrimony has followed. But as a general rule we avoid doing this."

Many marriages arranged through bureaux end in divorce. When this happens bureau managers generally feel it is a reflection on the efficiency of their methods.

"It takes years of experience to discover what types of men and women are most likely to be suited," said Miss Jenner, who has been running her bureau for ten years.

"Since 1939 we have arranged about 3,000 marriages. I am particularly proud of the fact that only two of these are known to have ended in divorce."

Experts to Study African Problems At Rand Meeting

Johannesburg, (CP)—The first step in a pan-African scientific campaign to increase knowledge of the "dark continent"—will be taken at the University of the Witwatersrand here in October.

About 100 scientists, representing United Nations bodies, three major powers and more than 25 territories south of the Sahara, will meet as guests of the Union government to plan a co-ordinated science and research front to tackle diseases attacking men, beasts and plants in Africa.

The conference will be organized on an international scale, and experts see it as the start of an era of tremendous scientific advance in Africa. It will be sponsored by Prime Minister Malan on October 17.

The provisional agenda for the conference stresses the need for "special facilities for long-term research on African problems."

This includes the easy movement of research workers from one territory to another, exchange of information, regular consultations and specialist conferences and the setting-up of special regional research organizations with exchange of research workers between different countries.

The first plenary session will review Africa's existing facilities for research and scientific work. Committees will then study these subjects:

Broad Agenda

Physical environment, which will include the need for special surveys and maps; meteorology and weather forecasts; the aviation and agriculture study of climates in relation to land usage.

Soils and plants, including timber investigations, plant health and plant nutrition.

Zoology, including game control, animal husbandry, and marine and freshwater biology.

Health and social research, under which heading medical research, racial and ethnal studies of natives, intelligence and aptitudes of native populations and linguistic research will be included.

The emphasis will be on Africa's potentiality for supporting a much larger, healthier and more progressive population, and on the continent assisting on a grand scale to supply food and raw materials for the rest of the world.

Recommendations made in Johannesburg will, it is hoped, be embodied in a pan-African agreement, bringing into being a "science high command" to organize and co-ordinate research in British, Belgian, French and Portuguese colonies, the trusteeship territories, and in self-governing states such as the Union and South Rhodesia.

Early Politics Burning Matter Lawyer Recalls

Winnipeg (CP)—There was a time when the citizens of Winnipeg had the reputation of taking their politics as seriously as any other people in the country.

"Party allegiances were very strong when the city was younger," recalled J. G. Harvey, a lawyer who came here in 1875 from Ontario as a lad of eight years.

A week's trip by stern wheeler up the Assiniboine River from Moosejaw, Sask., brought Mr. Harvey and his parents to the little landing jetty that stood just outside the walls of the Hudson's Bay Company fort at the foot of Main Street, where a bridge now stands.

"Yes," said Mr. Harvey, "we had some burning political questions in those days and the people would make their feelings known in demonstrative ways.

"One method was to burn an unpopular politician in effigy. Political meeting were not the relatively staid affairs of the present day.

"People were much more strongly biased toward their own party and took the whole thing much more seriously."

Mr. Harvey recalled the fuss created by the "riots against the federal government's failure to extend Manitoba's eastern boundary to Kenora, Ont.

A Hot Question

"That was a hot, much-agitated question. Manitoba was called the postage-stamp province then, and everyone felt we should have a frontage on the Lake of the Woods. But Ontario got it."

At that time a no-nun's land existed between Ontario's western and Manitoba's eastern borders.

A little later came the controversy over the separate school question. This revolved around whether Roman Catholics would receive government grants if their taught religion in their schools.

Mr. Harvey attended Winnipeg's one school when he was nine years old. It was a one-room log affair, built on the site now occupied by Grance Church.

"One room, two teachers and a stove—that's about all there was to it," said Mr. Harvey.

The city had four churches, though. In the area bounded by Smith St., Main St. and Portage Ave.—now part of the business district—stood the Presbyterian, Anglican, Wesleyan Methodist and Episcopal Methodist churches.

"Even in the early days, Winnipeg was never a "fast" town. "Always very well-behaved, we were," said Mr. Harvey. "After all, there were four churches!"

Magician Joe Kuhel Still Pulling Rabbits Out of Hats With His Amazing Senators

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Joe Kuhel, the amateur magician who manages Washington Senators, has pulled a nice rabbit out of his hat.

Nine straight wins by any Washington club, especially the lack - lustre 1940 version, call for an explanation, unless of voodoo charms and black magic. Mr. Kuhel must be a pro.

There used to be days when Washington had a tough time hitting the ball out of the Infield. Not now. They walloped Detroit, 11-1, yesterday with a five - run first inning against Stubby Overmire.

Kuhel even used two pitchers. When Paul Calvert, pitching a one-hitter, developed a blister on his pitching hand in the fifth, he called on Dutch Wallgren to take over from the Montreal fireballer. Detroit got only two more hits.

Eddie Robinson led the attack with a home - run blast and two singles.

The world champion Cleveland Indians, battered at the Washington plague after losing three ball games, welcomed the league-leading New York Yankees. The Tribe won 8-2 before 16,743 chilled customers. It was the top night crowd of the year, second only to Cleveland's opening day.

Benton Stops Yanks

Bob Lemon tore a muscle in his side during his pre - game warmup and retired after walking the first man he faced. Al Benton, recently purchased from Sacramento, stepped in to stop the Yanks.

Boston Red Sox continued to find it tough going in the west as they were outsrapped by Chicago, 12-8. The White Sox, another surprise entry, tied an American League record by scoring in every inning with an assortment of 15 hits, five walks, a wild pitch, balk and four errors — three by Bobby Doerr.

Bill Wight, with relief help from Howie Judson, posted his third straight victory while Tex Hughson suffered his second loss. Ted Williams hit his seventh homer off Judson in the eighth.

Jack Graham bombarded Philadelphia's Bobby Shantz with two doubles and a single, driving in two runs and scoring five as Louis' 5-4 win over the A's. The little southpaw struck out nine. Brownies but couldn't stop Graham. Karl Drews was the winner, despite homers by Sam Chapman and Eddie Joost.

Warren Spahn, pitching back to his 1947 form, pitched his second shutout and fourth straight victory for Boston Braves with a three - hitter against the St. Louis Cardinals, 7-0.

Cincinnati Reds finally stopped New York Giants after seven straight wins. Howie Fox did the trick, 4-2. The Reds, normally no fence busters, shelled Monte Kennedy from the box in the sixth.

Pittsburgh's rookie lefthander, Bill Werle, survived a ninth-inning uprising to defeat the Chicago Cubs 5-3 decision.

Chicago Cubs ended Ken Heintzelman's four - straight win streak by coming from behind to clip the Phillies, 4-3. Emil Kush relieving Johnny Schmitz in the fifth. was the winner.

Toronto Leafs Tied for Fourth In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Henderson Edward Wright, a lanky hurler who broke into organized baseball 11 seasons ago, is well on his way toward redeeming himself after his first losing year.

Wright pitched 23 victories and lost 15 games in 244 seasons with Boston Braves. That last year he was sent back to the minors, to Milwaukee of the American Association. He won nine but lost 13 and ended up below .500 for the first time since he broke in with Jackson, Tenn., in 1938.

This spring found Wright with Toronto Maple Leafs and he has lost no time in getting the jump on the International League's hitters.

He posted his fourth victory without a loss last night as Toronto brushed aside Syracuse, 9-1. He struck out nine and walked only one as the Ist the Chiefs down on five hits. The only run scored off Wright's slants came in Ben Zientara of Syracuse doubled—the Chiefs' only extra-base blow — and scored when third-baseman Eddie Joost bobbled a drive past Sammy Meeks.

Baltimore loaded the bases with nobody out in the ninth inning at Rochester but couldn't do any damage against the relief pitching of Dick Bokelmann and so lost the game, 6-4.

Montreal crashed across the winning run in the last of the ninth to edge Buffalo, 7-6. Lou Wela's single produced the necessary tally.

Every City's game at Buffalo was postponed.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Several letters from readers indicate uncertainty as to how the backswing is made. Perhaps today's picture will make it clearer. For shots on the green, I incline back of the ball and carry my clubhead along the imaginary direction line to the green. Let your hip pivot get under way before your shoulder pivot follows.

The pivot carries the club inside of the direction as pictured. The clubhead continues upward in this plane. When the hands are head high the plane of the swing is about 45 degrees from the perpendicular. If the plane or the backswing is more than 45 degrees you're swinging flat. Notice that when the hands are reaching hip-high your left arm and clubshaft still form a straight line. Then, when the hands are hip high, the cocking action of the wrists begins. Your two hands do not reach the fully cocked position, however, as at the top of the backswing. At that point the left arm, the club shaft and your hands are directly above your right shoulder. When you're in that position your hips will have pivoted about 45 degrees and your shoulders will be addressing the ball and your shoulders will have pivoted about 90 degrees from their position at the start. CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE B. CARVER, Sports Editor

Ole Man Politics dons gat on down, biddies, so this column will be one of the "silly" kind. We'll give you some excerpts from other sheets.

According to this piece from the Kingston sheet, the Athletics baseball team of that village did not do too kindly the O.B.A. ruling that they would not be permitted to lure into senior baseball playdowns. Here it is, and the spanked boys, it says there, haughtily disdain the O.B.A. invitation to "play ball." No sirree, you can't do that to us chum, see they. Here's the call from the Wilf Stanford kind and sleepy:

"Rob Nesbitt's Athletics will not fill that Central Ontario Baseball League berth allotted to Kingston. That's definite, Sgt. Nesbitt told The Whig-Standard last night.

"The Athletics had applied for a bye into Ontario Baseball Association playdowns, on the understanding that the Loose would again represent the city in the C.O.B.L. Loose suddenly withdrew from the C.O.B.L last Thursday, and the O.B.A. informed Athletics that they would not be granted a bye. However, they could take over the Loose' berth in the C.O.B.L. This offer has been declined, and Athletics will perform in the city senior series only, with probably a side jaunt to the Congress tournament at Leonard.

"There is a strong conclusive that another Kingston team might take over the vacant Kingston spot in the C.O.B.L."

"Oshawa 'Merchants' Baseball Club executive held a confab last night and formed not a few wrinkles in Tom Ryan. There is getting good turnouts to his workouts but as yet it is no secret that additional battery strength is needed and that a third side under-hander, of course, a 400-hitter who can play outfield would also be welcomed. However, a couple of hurlers are on the list, Austin Jarrett of Toronto Aces and Artis Clemence of Bowmanville (working in a bank at Montreal at present) both strongly favor the city "Merchants", with their teammates okayed and Jarrett re-instated. The "Merchants" open their COBL schedule in Brockville with a doubleheader on Victoria Day, Monday the 23th. Next day we opens the Oshawa "home" schedule. Two and perhaps three U.S. amateur stickers will be brought to Oshawa and it is hoped they will round out the local lineup, to give Oshawa a contending team in the COBL competition. Other clubs Kingston, Peterborough, Smiths Falls and Brockville all sure starters and all stronger than last year, vis imporia."

Douglas informs us, is putting on the show, free gratis (nuttin' is youse guys and gals) and that one Sergeant Jack Varlean, RCAF, of Belleville, will be present in person. With the honorable sergeant will be none other than Belleville's own Tommy Fedder, and his pals who will assist in the entertainment. It should be a good show and everybody is welcome. No charge, kiddies. Just show up and eve the boys a boost.

Harry Thibeault informs us that his CNE Nationals will take up the challenge of Ed Haynes' cocky Cobourg softballers and will battle it out for a best of three series. Deadline set just for the fun of it. They tell me the Thibeault Nate gave the Houston "Lumber Kings" a neat lesson in baseballing last night. Not at deadline time we didn't learned the score. Powerful squad, these Nationals, they tell us.

Jack Williams, former Belleville COBL baseball star is in town just in case guys like Fenner Mills, Wicky Rose, Stan Hagerman, Al Meagher and others of that famous era are interested. Name Fred Steele Ontario Athletic Commissioner

(By The Canadian Press)

A. W. (Fred) Steel, unofficial chieftain of Ontario sports for 10 years, has finally achieved recognition with the announcement Wednesday of his appointment as Ontario Athletic Commissioner.

A former newspaper man and executive of provincial sporting organizations, he joined the Ontario Athletic Commission 11 years ago as organizing secretary of the schools' camp program. In 1943 he became commission secretary.

The Commission was formed in 1920 and was headed by five commissioners. As governing body of professional sports it has been largely responsible for such agreements as that between the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the National Hockey League covering relations between the two organizations.

Canada's great athlete, Lionel Conacher, resigned as chairman of the Commission in 1943. Steel remained in direct operations.

In 1947 the Commission was scrapped and replaced by a Commissioner. Syd Aspe, then playing captain of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the N. H. L., was Commissioner until his retirement in April last year.

At Ingersoll, Ont., in a gadget-cluttered room at the rear of a combined auto parts, washing machine and baby carriage factory, live Canada's hope of winning the world's speedboat championship.

Harold Wilson glows with pride when he shows off the one-time mass of machine steel which he believes will power his Miss Canada IV to victory in the Harmsworth Trophy races this summer. The name plate on the engine identifies it as a 12-cylinder Rolls Royce Griffon, the 2,500 horsepower 16-cylinder aero engine power plant used in carrier-based Seafire aircraft.

The fourth annual Canadian Secondary School Rowing Association Regatta will be held on the Royal Henley course at Port Dalhousie June 4. There will be 16 rowing races on the card. Entry forms have been sent to various United States schools, officials said.

Herb Yanchus of Guelph scored a three round decision over Jackie Cooper of Hamilton in a 115 pound match at an amateur boxing show at Hamilton Wednesday night.

Danny Saunders, 140 pounder of Hamilton, knocked out Ron Cressy of Guelph at 1:36 of the fourth rolled of a semi-final bout Eddie Nadalin of Guelph lost a three round decision to Roy Merlet of Hamilton, Ray Lent of Hamilton pounded out a three-round decision over Doug Brousseau of Guelph.

At Shawinigan Falls, Que., Spencer Busch and Roy Fisher of Toronto, N.Y. crossed the finish line two full laps ahead of Joseph Dempsey of Arabi, Que., and Bill Dulan of New Jersey in the wind-up of a six-day bicycle grind.

Kitchener-Waterloo Legion Panthers, local Intercounty Baseball League entry, scored Victoria Tigers 8-5 in an exhibition game at Kitchener Wednesday night. The Tigers came from behind a three-run lead piled up by the Panthers in the first inning. The game was called in the eighth because of darkness.

London Majors Strengthened For Intercounty Race

This is the sixth of a Canadian Press series on pre-season prospects of the Intercounty Senior Baseball clubs. Today's story is about London Majors. By JACK PARK.

Canadian Press Correspondent

London, May 15 (CP)— World Canadian Congress and Senior Intercounty baseball for last season, a strengthened London Majors team will start the 1940 Ontario Baseball campaign as favorites to retain at least their Canadian laurels of the past campaign.

Well stocked with experienced talent in every department, the Majors have few flaws and only one fear. That fear is that some of their veterans may not be able to equal their performances of last season. They start their first league test this season May 25 at home against Kitchener.

While the London club finished with a rush last season to sweep away this they contested, they were no better than third in the regular Intercounty League campaign. It was with that in mind that Manager Bill Farquharson and Coach Clare Van Horne decided to make changes. Most notable additions have been made to the pitching department, which rallied almost solely on Tommy White last year.

New Hurlers

New hurlers are lefties Joe Ledesmack of Fort Huron, Mich., Tim Burgess, a former Londoner who joined with Detroit in the Class "A" Western League last season; Louis Fisher of nearby Westerville who pitched ball at the Pittsburgh chain last year; Al Byrd, ineligible last year, and a righthander, Frank Deluca of Toronto.

Tommy White will again be back but some of the other hurlers of last season may have trouble making the squad.

The fine infield of last season remains intact with Joe Black at first, Gord McEachern at second, Don Cooper in the shortstop spot and Ken McFadden at third. Several newcomers are trying out for utility infield spot and Paddy Thomas, veteran basketball mentor and a former Niagara District star, looks like the most likely choice.

The catching will again be ably handled by Jack Fairs and Gil Robertson.

Fast Outfield

A powerful and fast outfield rounds out the squad. Leading hitter of last season, Russ Evon will again be in left field. Joe Beckett of Michigan State will soon join the plub as will Jack Parry, the great all-round athlete from Barrie. Burgess, while listed as both pitcher and outfielder, will probably do most of his playing in the garden for he is a slugger de luxe.

Many youngsters are working out with the club, but for the present Coach Van Horne will string along with the regulars of last season. The Majors will operate a Senior City League this season and use it as a feeder for the senior squad. Those of unknown quality right now will serve in this loop for the time being.

New York, May 13 (AP) — Baseball visitors who have dropped in here with the news teams this spring have been departing with their eyes bugged out over the "mutts" New York Giants have shown them . . . . Everybody makes a farce out of the National League race if they keep on hustling that way," exclaimed one Chicago scribe.

"They have the power and as for pitching — well, they haven't had to relieve very often." . . . .

Training Exercises

If you've wondered how Johnny Groth, Detroit's hitting sensation, became such a polished outfielder in a short time in the minors, take a look at his performance in Buffalo last season . . . . Groth played centre field between two veterans whose ages total about 70 years, Cooker Triplett and Chet Laabs . . . Every time a ball was hit to the outfield, those two would holler, "Take it Johnny" . . . and Groth did for a total of 404 putouts.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By STEWART NEBBS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Calgary, May 11 (CP)—Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior Hockey League are officially in the books as the 1946-49 holders of the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian senior hockey supremacy, but Tom (Calgary Athlan) Moore doesn't think much of the way they took the title.

Third year's final outright the Senators to gripe with the highly-regarded Regina Capitals of the Western Canada League and the easterners took the series in hackey fashion, four games to one.

Moore says it is difficult, at this distance, to understand how any city can be happy at winning a championship under the conditions attached to the recently-completed senior playoff.

The cards were stacked so strongly against the Caps, the western team hardly had the proverbial chance of a snowball in Bombay to survive long in the series, wrote Moore.

Caps not only did their playoffs on an odd-shaped, narrow rink in which their opponents were very much at home, but they did it at a time of the year when hockey should be a dim recollection among the fans.

"The Regina defeat made the Western Canada League look like about 'nuff cotton in comfy. convinced it is nowhere near as bad as it has been painted as a result of the N.H.L.-dominated C. A. H. A. weeping on the "poor" Ottawa playoffs," Moore wrote in his column.

Caps had been puttering around against not-so-strong opposition ever since getting out of their own league nearly two months earlier. They had several long layoffs.

Continued Moore:

"They had every reason to lose the sharp edge a team normally has to polish up for the finals.

"It is a situation that demands immediate action from the C. A. H. A. if it is to maintain interest in its greatest competition — the Allan Cup playoffs."

Saggrade Shorter Season

The season should be shortened so that playoffs are completed in hockey weather to be revelling-in heat.

And positive moves should be made to assure that western teams, when playing alternate years in the east, receive the same courtesies with regard to venue as the west has always been quick to accord clubs from eastern Canada."

Capol Likely To be Favored Over Ponder

Baltimore, May 13 (AP) — Don't be surprised if Capot is made the betting favorite over Ponder, the Kentucky Derby winner, in the $75,000-added Preakness Saturday at Pimlico.

That was what the wise birds were saying today in Baltimore.

The son of Menow set a track record for a mile and one-sixteenth last fall at Pimlico — a track he definitely goes for. Capot turned the route in a smiling 1:42 and 2/5 to be disqualified for bumping Slam Bang in the stretch drive.

A week later he won the Pimlico Futurity at the same distance and walloped Slam Bang by four lengths.

Two months ago at nearby Havre de Grace, Capot nosed out Slam Bang in the Chesapeake Stakes after a furious stretch duel. Capot showed he was still in that class, also a mile and one-sixteenth. The Preakness is a mile and three-sixteenths.

Then last week the Dixie Derby Capot finished along just off the hot pace of Olympia, killed him off and was out on the stretch run of a mile from home in the mile and one-quarter race. Olympia was leading at the Preakness distance, but Capot's final rush carried him from far back and had enough left to pass them all in the dash to the wire.

Brandon Expects To Win Contest And Tie Series

Brandon, Man., May 13 — (CP) — Scalpers will be in their glory again on tonight's game between Royals and Brandon Wheat Kings in their seventh game of their best-of-seven Memorial Cup final. Royals now lead three games to two, with one contest tied.

With another sell-out crowd of more than 4,800 ready for the battle, scalpers are asking $5 and getting in many cases — up to $3 for the $1.75 and $2 guests from the hockey-mad fans here.

After a day of relaxation yesterday, both clubs are expected to be at full strength for what will be the final game if Royals win or hold Wheat Kings to a tie.

If Brandon wins, the eighth game probably will be played here Saturday night. No decision has yet been made as to whether the seventh game, if played, will continue to a final verdict if the teams are tied at the end of regulation play, or whether a ninth contest will be held.

Facing elimination by a loss or a tie Tuesday night, Brandon Wheat Kings' stock soared when they eked out a 2-1 decision over Royals to force a seventh game.

Montreal's brilliant goalkeeper, Bobby Lane, turned in his best netminding opponent, Ray Frederenchuk by paying off coach Tex Plante of the Quebec Citadel Juniors in almost on a par with the Brandon goalie.

Anderson, S. C. — (AP)—Doyle Nunnally, Anderson's lefi-fielder in the Tri-State League, became a proud papa for the first time Tuesday night.

When he came to bet Wednesday night the loudspeaker blared: "To Doyle Nunnally: Daddy, hit me a home run tonight. Signed Doyle Jr."

The crowd cheered. Nunnally slammed one over the left field fence. It was his first homer this season.

Chicago — (AP) — Are you superstitious, or do you think superstition is a lot of bunk?

Well, the United States National Safety Council made a survey to find out how superstitious people are about Friday the 13th. It was the only day-by-day check ever made by the council on motor vehicle deaths.

Friday the 13th was 17 per cent safer than the two Fridays preceding and the two Fridays after that date.

Jackson, Mich. — (AP)—Farmer Jack R. Kelly watched anxiously Wednesday night as the mercury fell lower and lower.

Frost had been predicted for the area. His onion crop faced possible destruction.

Temperatures at earth level were dangerously low, but he found that — as sometimes happens — the reading above ground was six degrees higher.

Suddenly he got a brilliant idea: hire an airplane!

Within an hour a private pilot was buzzing back and forth over Kelly's field while headlights from 17 vehicles lit it up. The cold air was fanned and dissipated into the warmer air by the propeller's wash.

"It worked," said Kelly.

Niagara Senior Baseball Loop Will be Stronger

By T. N. MORRISON

Canadian Press Correspondent

Welland, May 13 (CP)—For the fifth consecutive season, the Niagara Senior Baseball League opens its 1940 campaign season Friday, May 13—will operate as an independent circuit with three Canadian and three United States clubs. The Canadian entries are Niagara Falls, St. Catharines and Welland. The U. S. teams are Niagara Falls, N. Y., Bugyys, North Tonawanda Dodgers and Olcott Kiltie.

The compact six-team loop will play a 30-game schedule, although the U.S. clubs are not permitted to qualify for Ontario Baseball Association playdowns, they take part in the league playoffs and compete for all the awards made by the league.

When league-playoffs have been settled, the two leading Canadian teams in the standing battle it out for the right to continue in the Ontario playdowns.

Whether the Niagara District will be represented in the O.B.A. playdowns this year is problematical. At the end of the last annual meeting rejected a Niagara League proposal that each junior club be permitted to use two commuting players who wouldn't be required to live up to O.B.A. residence rules, this concession is being used by one team with the consent of the League. Niagara clubs are in a mood to thinry their play-offs through to qualify one team for provincial elimination in uncertain of what will be a consequent gamble at the box office.

Stronger Than Ever

While only one Niagara District club has followed the example of Intercounty League teams in importing United States players by the train-load, it is reported that the four clubs who are holdovers from last season and the four clubs will go to the wire stronger than they were last year. The Niagara Falls, Ont., club which won the playoffs last season has added six commuters from Lewiston, N.Y., Eddie Johnston, hardhitting infielder and Dick Seidel, husky southpaw to its roster and also has the pick of the Niagara Falls Flyers team, which is not operating this season.

Welland Jackets, who breezed to the first-place berth in last year's schedule, play here picked up Stan Rogala, a righthanded hurler, and Bill Kowalski, a classy first baseman, from Niagara Falls, N.Y. These players were standouts on the Kimberly-Clark team for the past three seasons. Kimberly-Clark is not operating in the league this year.

Most effective new deal is being promoted by the St. Catharines entry, newly dubbed the "Black." Eight or nine players have been brought in from Pennsylvania and a new manager, the veteran southpaw Jack Fitzgerald Pirates, Charlie Johnston, has been named pilot. Reports have it that one of the two commuter players to be added to the Welland series will be Ken O'Dea, former catcher with the St. Louis Cardinals. O'Dea is reported ineligible at East Albion, N.Y.

Registered Kimberly-Clark as the Niagara Falls, N.Y., entry in the Bugay club, who operated in the Western New York semi-professional league last season. Bugays will use several players who were with Kimberly-Clark last season.

For the first time, the league has a Buffalo entry, the Kicks, operated by the proprietor of a sporting goods store in the American city. Kicks won the championship of the Western New York semi-professional league last season.

The third U.S. team, North Tonawanda Dodgers, has a starry collection of ball players and has helped produce a number of players who are performing in organized baseball, including Stan Rojek, shortstop for the

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In the boys' room could be heard repeatedly: "For once I don't have to play partners with the wife." The most popular saying in the powder room was: "Now I can get to play a hand once in a while."

This was at a recent championship match known as the Battle of the Sexes. It is an annual event conducted by divisions of the American Bridge League. It is a male versus female contest.

Women pales play against men twosomes. Total scores of all the men compare with the totals made by all the women. This is supposed to decide each year whether men are good as women players.

Play is in duplicate; that is, the same deals at all tables. Scoring is by match points; that is, each pair receives one match point from each table with a lower score; a half for tie.

These contests are usually shy and tack affairs. The gals cry their eyes out when they take a beating. Some years they beat the sox off the men and the brutes sneer at the luck.

One of the sparkling deals in their last match is the one you see here.

In most cases the contract was seven diamonds with south as the declarer. Where they got a club lead it was defeated. You can see how. East ruffs the first club lead and shifts to a trump.

In duplicate tournament play, a difference of even ten scoring points in a deal may be important. It may be enough to win a match point from each of the other tables in the contest.

So it is not surprising that some south players ended at seven no-trump instead of seven diamonds. A no-trump grand slam pays exactly 80 points more than does grand slam in diamonds.

Usually grand slam in suit is safer than no-trump. Not so in this case. The hottest result came at tables where south ended at seven no-trump. This was easily made with a squeeze. Some enjoyed it.

A lifelong Conservative, he was credited with persuading George Drew, Federal leader of the Progressive Conservative party, to enter politics 25 years ago.

TheMovieColumn

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 13 (AP)— H. L. Mencken, who has said harsh words about movies in his long career in American letters, has become a film fan. But he still dislikes 'em.

Recently Variety noted that the famed Baltimore writer sought movies as entertainment during his illness. I wrote him for details.

Mencken has seen about 40 films during his convalescence, enough to convince him that most movies are trash. He thinks that some of the minor movies are fairly well done, but concludes that Hollywood films are bad.

Poor Acting

The actresses are poor, he says; they all look alike and few have any talent whatsoever. On the whole, English films are better than American, he declares.

Here are some of the things he has enjoyed:

"So Dear to My Heart," "Pygmalion," Claudette Colbert in "Family Honeymoon," Olivia De Havilland in "The Snake Pit," Clifton Webb in "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College," "Little Women," Robert Ryan in "The Set-up" and Mickey Rooney in "Words and Music."

Mencken believes when he recovers he'll see an average of three films a year.

Musings

Those close to the family discount recent reports that Shirley Temple is worth from four to five million. She has probably given that much to Uncle Sam, but that much green stuff is hard to keep.

Reason not to hold films too long: Ann Sothern's short skirts draw smiles in the current "The Judge Steps Out." Twas made two years ago.

That's Hollywood: Bing Crosby's stand-in also wears toupee. In "The Lady Gambles," Stephen McNally plays a gambler who uses only his last name. He tells why: "My first name is Horace." And actor McNally has been more successful since changing his name from Horace to Stephen.

BELIEVE GENERAL SUICIDE

Canton, May 13 (AP) — A usually reliable source said Wed., that Nationalist Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, who surrendered Peiping to the Communists, committed suicide Tuesday in Peiping.

This source, with Peiping connections said Fu had been advised to do away with himself by Red leaders after an attempt to escape into Nationalist territory. Fu surrendered Peiping in January.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

I was looking at the overtizzements in the back of the Whole Family Magazine while I was getting ready to do my homework, saying, Hay, pop, G ma, here's a picture of a lady looking cool and diving in a bathing suit, and its a overtizzement for Guest House cigirs. What's she got to do with Guest House cigars? She's not even smoking one while she's diving, I said.

Well, the connection is a trifle swetchy, pop said, and ma said, Her bathing suit is the sketchiest part, judging from where I'm sitting.

The general idea is that even a stream line bathing bewty diping like a swallow into a cristal stream is not more smooth than Guest House cigars, pop said, and ma said, If you're going to be simbolic about it, the poor woman is probably diving bodily out of her living room window because she's being driven out of her own home by the gealy smell of those cigars. The idea of any such an illistration for any such a purpose. Really, William, I mean really, she said.

Art is wonderful, pop said, and I said, Here's another overtizzement, pop. It's for Gentry belts and garters and it's got another bewty looking girl kissing a guy and hanging on to him as if she never wanted him to get away. What's that got to do with suspenders and garters, pop? I said.

Oh, that one's even more appropriate and logical, pop said. The lady holds fast, and so do Gentry suspenders and garters, he said, and I said, What do you say, ma?

I say the sooner you get to work on your homework, the better I'll like it, ma said.

Being a sad sucer meening she thawt the subject had gone far enough.

India Ranks Fifth In Civil Aviation

Calcutta, India (CP) — India is in fifth place in the civil aviation network of the world and the regular services of civil and military and internal air services had been phenomenal, N. C. Clouth, former director-general of civil aviation, said recently.

Mr. Clouth said in the last two years every province in the dominion had been brought on the air map and early this year night air mail services from all important centres, concentrating at a central airport for exchange of mails, had been started. Shortly all first class mail was to be carried by air.

Illustrating the expansion of civil aviation in India, Mr. Clouth said that whereas in 1938 there was only 4,630 in the first quarter of 1946, had risen to 13,644 in the second quarter of 1948. The miles flown in respective quarters were 787,320 and 2,056,352 in 1948.

Two new training centres—one for radio communication at Saharanpur and another for pilots and ground officers at Allahabad were at work.

France Develops Five-Year Scheme To Lure Tourists

By ODETTE LAGUERRE

Paris (Reuters) — The April reopening of the famous Longchamp race course in the Bois de Boulogne marked the beginning of what is expected to be France's most brilliant season since the war.

Several hundred thousand holiday visitors started arriving around Easter, and the movement will get into full swing by June. The waiving of United States visas for France and the easing of currency restrictions for British visitors, are expected here to make this a boom year.

Last year 1,300,000 travellers came to France, including 100,000 from the United States and 300,000 from Britain, according to statistics issued by the tourist bureau.

This figure is expected to be greatly exceeded this year, under the Monnet 5-year plan, France hopes to increase her foreign tourists to 3,000,000 by 1953.

Both the Monnet plan and the Economic co-operation Administration authorities have given considerable thought to the development of tourism in France and other European countries. Both consider this to be one of the most important elements in the stabilization of the European commercial balance sheet.

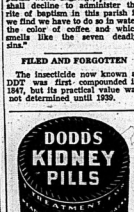
Theodore Pozzo, chief of the economic co-operation travel development section, forecast recently that between 250,000 and 300,000 visitors would come to Europe from America this year. He stressed that a number of new liners would be available for that 1949 traffic, including the French Line's Ile de France, the Cunard White Star Line's 34,000 Caronia and the Franconia, on the North Atlantic route; the Home Line's Italia and Atlantic, and the American Export Lines's La Guardia and Four Aces, in the Mediterranean.

In addition, an undetermined number of Boeing strato-cruisers are scheduled to go into service between France and America in the late summer or early fall.

Air Travel Grows

Air France is also gradually increasing its traffic between France and Britain. A new three-weekly service is already in operation between Paris and Manchester via Birmingham and another will be inaugurated this summer to link Paris and Belfast via Glasgow.

On the Paris-London line, passages are to be increased to five a day, increasing in frequency with the demand until at the peak travel period, French and British lines together will be running no less than 16 daily flights in each direction.



BAPTISMAL HONORS

Yelverton, Devonshire, England — (CP) — Rev. Richard Crookshank, commenting on the parish water shortage, said: "We shall decline to administer the rite of baptism in this parish if we find we have to do so in water the color of coffee and which smells like the seven deadly sins."

FILED AND FORGOTTEN

The insecticide now known as DDT was first compounded in 1847, but its practical value was not determined until 1939.

There's Nothing Orthodox About This Old Trader

Hugo, Oklahoma, (AP)—The sign on the outside of the store reads: "Everything to Sell from a Chigger to an Elephant."

The trader is 76-year-old Smith Lipscomb Luton, one of the best horse traders in the old Choctaw nation, which is now southeastern Oklahoma.

Luton's "Indian Territory Trading Post" is known for its assortment of odds and ends to end all odds and ends.

If you dusted off a random stack of articles, you could find a collar button, coffin, horse-collar, wooden demon, squeezer and embossed powder horn.

There are hundreds of such items piled in the store, but Luton finds there always is a buyer, no matter how useless a article may appear. Although his store is far from the nation's crossroads, there is a well beaten path to his door.

Luton doesn't want publicity. Another crude, homemade sign in his store reads: "I made a living when Hugo was in the Indian territory. If I didn't worry (the whether you bought or not. In fact, you wasn't here, I got along O.K. and am still doing fine."

It's getting so people dare Luton to buy things from them because of his reputation to turn everything into a profit. A well-dressed stranger appeared at the trading post and declared: "I have something here you won't buy!"

Luton took a look. Without even a grimace he plunked down 15 cents and bought a glass eye. It didn't gather dust long. Luton found a customer and sold it for $1.55.

Good Quilt Boxes

He once purchased some old-fashioned caskets from an out of state company. Folks here though he would get stuck for sure this time. But not old Luton. He sold them around the country as "nice for quilt boxes."

"It's nothing unusual for him to resell used false teeth. Only recently he received a letter from a Bartlesville, Okla., woman. She wrote:

"I got a set of dentures, which I have never had in my mouth. They are too large for the set, and I thought I'd write to see if you would buy them and what price you will pay."

Luton ignores all orthodox selling methods and practices. Everything is piled high in his one-storey brick building. One sign reads:

"Warning—don't get the dust off my merchandise. That's the reason it's cheap. Rub it off and I will have to go up 30 per cent."

He tells the world his philosophy in another sign:

"Stop, don't squabble with people. I run my business and don't let it run me. I don't mind getting down to work in the morning because it's play!"

And then there's this one:

"After all is said and done, what difference does it make if you are a king or a horse trader, as long as you are right?"

BURIED IN NORWAY

Oslo — (CP) — The body of Torger Tokle, twice United States ski-jumping champion, was returned to his native Norway for burial recently. Tokle was killed while serving with American forces in Italy. His 289-foot jump made at Iron Mountain, Mich., is still the United States' competitive skiing record.

Tells Of Great Benefits From Using Syntonu

Relieved Stomach Disorders, Gas, Indigestion, Bloating. Also Throbbing Headaches and Dizzy Spells. "Feel Better Than in Years," He Says.

Every person who suffers with stomach disorders, sour stomach, gas, bloating, heartburn and distress after eating will be interested in the following experience of Mr. William Lusk, Bear Line, Ontario, who tells of similar suffering and how he got surprising relief by taking a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound.

"My stomach has been in bad shape for a number of years," reports Mr. Lusk. "I had so much bloating and sour acid risings after my meals I was often afraid to eat. I would belch up hot, sour liquids, get dizzy spells and throbbing headaches. I was a victim of constipation, was always having to take harsh laxatives and had rheumatic pains in my limbs and joints.

"Having tried other things without benefit, I was about discouraged but decided to try Syntona. The very first few days I could see an improvement. As I kept on using this medicine, my digestion improved, the gas, bloating and sourness disappeared and I found I was entirely free of headaches, constipation and dizziness. I now enjoy all my meals and the pains in my limbs and joints are just about all cleared up.

"I am certainly very glad I found out about Syntona and I will highly recommend it to any other people suffering this same way."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

11-Pound Trout Not Exceptional Says Expert

Neversink, N.Y., May 12 (CP) —Edward Ringwood Hewitt, one of the greatest living trout fishermen, today said a speckled trout weighing 11 pounds, 13 ounces reported Tuesday to have been caught near Barry's Bay, Ont., is "nothing at all exceptional."

Although the world record, as reported by Field and Stream magazine, is 14 1-2 pounds, Hewitt said a speckled trout weighing 19 pounds was recorded in the Canadian geodetic survey of 1878. The 19-pound fish was landed from the Nipigon River at the head of Lake Superior.

"I have no doubt as to the authenticity of this catch," said Hewitt. "A friend of mine was along on the survey and saw the fish.

"I have landed several speckled trout weighing more than 14 pounds and once took three 12-pounders in one day. I have seen at the Nipigon, hundreds of trout that would go over 12 pounds — even with their heads chopped off."

Hewitt said the average speckled trout in the Nipigon runs between eight and 11 pounds.

Assembly Rejects Proposal on Italy's Former Colonies

Attempt to Give USSR Voice In Strategic Area Fails

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Lake Success, N.Y., May 13—A Russian proposal for collective trusteeship over Italy's three pre-war African colonies was rejected today in the political committee of the United Nations General Assembly.

The Russian plan was an attempt to give the Soviet Union a voice in the administration of the strategic Mediterranean area.

The Soviet proposal was defeated on a paragraph-by-paragraph vote in the 53-member committee which was close to reaching a decision on disposal of Mussolini's former empire in North Africa. No vote was taken on the Russian proposal as a whole.

The committee also defeated by vote of 22 to 20 an Iraqi proposal which would give immediate independence to Libya. There were eight abstainers.

Indian Proposal Loses

An Indian proposal which would set up a collective trusteeship over Libya and Italian Somaliland also was rejected. This vote called for a referendum among the people of Eritrea to decide whether Eritrea should be joined to Ethiopia.

Meanwhile Russia accused Britain and the United States of making a "deal" to keep control of Italy's former colonies.

The charge came from Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko as the United Nations Assembly's Political Committee neared a showdown vote on disposal of the colonies after two weeks of debate.

Gromyko said an anti-American riot in Tripoli was "in fact a protest by the natives against the plan backed by Britain and the United States to split up Libya under separate U.N. trusteeships.

The Soviet delegate directed most of his fire at a plan approved by a 15-nation subcommittee which would establish three separate U.N. trusteeships for 10 years. Under the plan Britain would administer Cyrenaica, France would administer the Fezzan and Italy would become administrator of Tripolitania in 1951 after a transition period run by Britain.

Russia favors a collective U.N. trusteeship over all three former colonies with the aim of helping give the Soviet Union a voice in administering the strategic Mediterranean area.

The proposed convention would extend almost complete independence of new passing international organization except in matters of security. It sets out a code guaranteeing foreign correspondents and news across state boundaries.

Bishop Lyons Enthroned as Metropolitan

Most Rev. G. F. Kingston, Archbishop of N. S., Preached the Sermon

Kingston, May 13 (CP)—Most Rev. John Lyons, 70, Anglican Archbishop of the Province of Ontario, was enthroned Thursday night as Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario amid ceremonies centuries old.

Most Rev. George F. Kingston, Archbishop of Nova Scotia and Primate of all Canada, preached the sermon, based on the charge to the clergy and laity of the province to work with the new Metropolitan.

As Metropolitan, Archbishop Lyons is President of the Provincial Synod and of the Provincial Council of Bishops. He also has the charge of the Consecration of Bishops in the Province.

The ceremony in huge, domed St. George's Cathedral opened with the stately procession of the primate, in white, red and black vestments, and his chaplains.

Archbishop Lyons made his entry to a triumphant fanfare of trumpets.

Rt. Rev. George A. Walls, assistant to the Bishop of Toronto, opened the enthronement ceremony, which followed the aboriginal evensong conducted by Very Rev. Harold Bowman, Dean of Ontario. The offering was presented by Rt. Rev. W. Wright of Sault Ste. Marie, Bishop of Algoma.

Certificate Read

After a short explanatory address and presentation of Bishop Wright, Secretary of the House of Bishops, read the certificate of the election of the Metropolitan. Rt. Rev. Robert Jefferson, Bishop of Ottawa, then explains the duties of a Metropolitan.

As the climax of the ceremony the senior cleric, Rt. Rev. A. H. L. Beverley, Bishop of Toronto, presented the Crozier to Archbishop Lyons. After formally accepting this symbol of office and emblem of the faith, the Metropolitan was conducted to his throne by Bishop Beverley, preceded by the Church and by Ven. Anderson of Stirling. There he was installed in his high office.

The new Metropolitan then addressed the congregation and the closing prayers. Then he and the visiting clergymen left the chancel to the strains of the recessional hymn.

Special music written for the occasion by Dr. Healy Willan of Toronto included the Introit, a setting of the 24th Psalm with Faux Bourdons and a setting of the Nunc Dimittis. The archbishop's choir was heard in the coronation setting of the Te Deum Laudamus by Sir Charles Stanford.

Windsor R. C. M. P. authorities were notified and investigation led to the arrest of Robinson. He made a voluntary statement admitting that he was the large quantity of contraband smokes.

Atlantic Pact Approved by UK by 333-6 Vote

Bevin and Churchill Give Stirring Speeches

London, May 13 — (CP) — The House of Commons Thursday night overwhelmingly approved the North Atlantic Security Treaty.

The vote was 333 to 6. It came after a motion of approval put by Foreign Secretary Bevin was passed.

Parliamentary observers said the near-unanimous approval of the motion was sufficient to effect ratification of the pact. Only said similar action was not required in the Senate of Canada.

Thus Britain would become the third of 12 western countries to ratify the Atlantic Treaty. Canada was the first country to ratify it and Belgium completed the final step for ratification yesterday when the Belgian Senate approved the pact 137 to 13.

Speaking during the Commons debate on the Alliance, Bevin and Churchill pulled few punches in their criticism of Soviet policy since the end of the war. Bevin's foreign secretary was more outspoken than Churchill.

He blamed Russia for forcing the Security Treaty on the west even more than the satellites. He need by saying that if the Soviet Union is not aggressive in its situation would have led to a third world war.

Bevin said he is "convinced" that the closer link between the Western democracies would be followed by a protest by the natives against the plan backed by Britain and the United States to split up Libya under separate U.N. trusteeships.

The Soviet delegate directed most of his fire at a plan approved by a 15-nation subcommittee which would establish three separate U.N. trusteeships for 10 years. Under the plan Britain would administer Cyrenaica, France would administer the Fezzan and Italy would become administrator of Tripolitania in 1951 after a transition period run by Britain.

'Case of Alien Train' First of Kind In Canada, U.S. Border Legal History

Rochester, N.Y, May 13 (CP)—A federal grand jury has adjourned until about May 26 after hearing what is believed to be the first case Canada-United States border legal history.

The jury will report in about two weeks on the case of the alien train case a Canadian National Railways train which allegedly carried 178 aliens illegally at Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 23.

The hearing resulted from a charge filed by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Bureau that the train, with 53 Canadian citizens, was passed at the border by railroad officials without being subjected to inspection by United States immigration officials.

Four representatives of the CNR are making voluntary appearances in connection with the case. They are A. Manders, a conductor; C. R. Waterman, inspector of investigations; George Brown, chief clerk of the investigations staff; and N. A. Waldford general superintendent of CNR's Ontario district southern division.

Also making a voluntary appearance is Ernest Bell, a lieutenant of the Canadian Customs service at Niagara Falls, Ont.

The case presents this knotty legal problem: Whom shall the grand jury indict? And who will answer the indictment if one is returned?

Some lawyers have suggested the case may even come to for consideration by the state department since the CNR is government-owned.

Is U.S. Moving too Fast In Shifting Its Policies On Germany and Japan?

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, May 13 — (AP) — The State Department appears headed for a new debate on whether it is moving too far and too fast in shifting United States policies on Germany and Japan. The shift is from post-war "toughness" to post-war reconstruction.

Officials are admittedly aware that every move they make to put the two former enemy countries back on a self-sustaining basis and give them increasing self-government is subject to criticism.

The latest of such moves came yesterday when the State Department announced that it approves removal of industrial equipment from Japan had been halted in the interest of building that country's peacetime economy.

139 Plants Struck from List

The announcement paralleled a joint move last month by Britain, the United States and France in a move which the United States initiated on March 29 which struck from the list of those earmarked for removal from Germany as reparations.

That action also was explained by the three members of the Western Powers, urged by the United States, to get the German economy on a paying basis again and enable it to contribute needed goods to European recovery under the Marshall Plan.

The action with respect to Japan was taken without prior consultation with the 10 other countries which make up the policy-forming Far Eastern commission. The commission members have thus far been unable to agree on a common Japanese reparations program.

The State Department said this disagreement made it necessary for the United States to act alone in this instance.

Attacks from some of the other countries on the commission are expected on the grounds that (1) the American decision shuts off reparations which those countries need for their own reconstruction and (2) the United States is speeding Japanese reconstruction too fast.

The German policies of the Western Powers will come up for review by the Council of Foreign Ministers in Paris, opening May 23rd.

Depending on whether or not there are early indications of real agreement between Russia and the West on Germany, the meeting could be largely concerned on both sides with winning support among the German people.

Diplomats agree that what the Germans themselves will do in the way of trade in the future will be a more important factor in their economy than it was in previous ministers' meetings, particularly if there is hope the Western Powers again fall out.

Project Proposed to Develop 400,000 to 500,000 H.P. To Solve Ontario Shortage

Toronto, May 13 — (CP) — Canada is seeking United States ratification of a treaty to permit the Ontario Hydro Commission to proceed with a $150,000,000 development on the Niagara River that will double the output of the Queenston generating station.

Hydro Chairman Robert Saunders said yesterday in Ottawa he has conferred with Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Cabinet Secretary Norman Robertson about the treaty which would authorize the project.

The project would require blasting a three-mile tunnel to divert more water for the greatest drop in the Niagara escarpment. It is estimated an additional 400,000 to 500,000 horsepower would be developed.

Saunders said he has no assurance of permanent peace in Europe while there is the case he is convinced of many ancient cities in Eastern Europe are left to the mercy of 13 men who form the oligarchy of the Kremlin."

In dealing with the Soviet Union, the western countries faced "indubitably unfavorable factors."

The Atlantic Pact, the five-power Brussels treaty and the organization of Council of Europe "are our surest guarantees of peace and welfare."

Churchill said the absence of Spain from the treaty is "a serious gap in the strategic arrangements for western Europe." He urged the appointment of a Spanish ambassador to Madrid. The only way to rectified is by keeping with the United Nations General Assembly resolution of 1946 and 1947 to withdraw ambassadors and ministers to Spain.

Grape Harvest Heavily Hit In Niagara Area

St. Catharines, May 13 (CP)—A number of Niagara district fruit farmers have reported considerable loss of crops as a result of the sudden cold snap early this week.

Autumn grape crops are the hardest hit, it was learned immediately surrounding St. Catharines in South Township.

One farmer, C. A. Burkstein, who has 20 acres of grapes west of St. Catharines airport, says that his entire crop has been wiped out. His neighbor expects only two tons in comparison with his usual yield of 40 tons, allowing territory terms to show the heaviest losses.

Peaches and strawberries also suffered considerable damage at this stage, while young asparagus tips were nipped in some cases and cutting will be suspended for two or three days.

St. Catharines agricultural representative, E.F. Neff stated that grape damage in the whole Niagara district will amount to about 10 percent of the expected total yield.

PROSPECTOR WALKS OUT OF HOSPITAL

Mattawa, Ont., May 13 (CP)—Joe Brisson, 70-year-old Toronto prospector, walked out of the hospital here and is now being sought by police two-day search for him.

Brisson, one of a party of prospectors that came to the Mattawa district, 40 miles east of North Bay, this week, following news of uranium discoveries was missing Wednesday when he left to return to their group's base camp and failed to arrive by nightfall.

He is reported to have suffered no ill effects from his two-day ordeal.

No Horses Entered For Racing At Dufferin Saturday

Toronto, May 13 — (CP) — Possibility of a shutdown of the Dufferin Park spring meeting loomed today as no horses had been entered for Saturday's races nearly two hours after the official entry deadline—10.30 a.m. EDT.

Entry boxes remained, open while track officials and members of the Ontario Jockey Club and Dufferin Racing Association met shortly before noon. A statement is expected later today.

The no entry development climaxed a long-standing controversy between the I.C.R.A. ruling body in Ontario racing, and the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association over a decision by the I.C.R.A. to refuse licenses to trainers of one-horse stables. Trainer Ernie Burgess, president of the H.B.P.A. said in an interview no entries had been received as other Toronto tracks —Long Branch, Thorncliffe and Kenilworth—had the "least money now is up to the I.C.R.A."

Burgess is a part-time one-horse trainer in Canada wishing to race in Ontario. Trainers must obtain an I.C.R.A. license before their entries may run on tracks under I.C.R.A. jurisdiction.

Halifax, May 13 — (CP) — John Richard Vercoe, 29-year-old member of the Canadian Seaman's Union (T.L.C.), today began serving a one-month jail sentence after conviction on an assault charge.

Baldwin was charged with assaulting Charlie Caddell of Montreal, an officer aboard the Canadian Transport Lake, last Saturday night.

Caddell was taken off the ship by a group of men and beaten up in an alleyway near the piers.

Two Red Prongs Creeping Closer To Chinese Port

Little Change Noticed In Life of Shanghai

With Communist troops closing in on Shanghai, Fred Hampson, Associated Press Chief of Bureau in the city is one of the few foreign correspondents remaining there. Here is his latest dispatch describing the approaching battle and life inside Shanghai.

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, May 13 (AP)— The roar of battle could be heard today at Woosung Harbor and Lunghwa airfield, Shanghai's remaining two links with the world.

Two Communist prongs crept closer to the city. Red Gen. Chen Yi was driving within 15 miles of Shanghai or close a siege ring around it.

One battle raged southwest of the city some 18 miles from Lunghwa airport, at the southwest edge of the city limits. The other was at the city.

Another developed around the village of Taisang, just north of the Shanghai-Nanking railroad. Red lines have been drawn to about 20 miles from Shanghai.

Longhua airport is one of Shanghai's air link. There are three other airfields but they are even more vulnerable to attack.

The Shanghai garrison commander said the Reds have struck on the northwest with three divisions. The Nationalists were reported holding their own in some places and falling back in others.

The drive from the southwest seemed to be concentrated in a single spearhead along the railroad to Hangchow.

The Nationalist there has been no great change in the last few days. Foreigners there went about their business. Traffic, thinned by the evacuation of hundreds of civilian and military vehicles, moves faster.

Fooling Cleared by Reds

Pootung, the dock and industrial area across from Shanghai's bund, has been cleared of small riverboats as a precautionary move against guerilla operations in that area.

Some oil docks over there still are operating.

The official News dispatch from Canton today said government troops withdrew from Nanking the Red capture of Nanking now were deploying against the Communists.

The Communist radio in Nanking said they wiped out or routed 12 government armies in the Shanghai-Hangchow triangle.

Central News quoted government spokesman Tang Wen-Yi as saying crack troops were being rushed from northern China "for defence" of the city. He predicted a long term war of resistance here.

Boy Who Set Fires Must Polish Brass At Fire Hall

Merriton, May 13 (CP)— A seven year old Merriton boy was ordered today to polish fire fires of moderately dangerous proportions in town, has been given but a sentence that should make him think twice before he sets another fire.

The youngster must report to Provincial Police every night at 7 p.m. and on Sunday he must report to the local fire hall, and polish brass. The sentence was handed out by Fire Chief Art Duckwell who stated that only the youngster's age saved him from getting a more severe sentence.

'Medically Dead' For 12 to 15 Min., Revived as Doctor Breaks Rib

Los Angeles, May 13 (AP)—Reid C. Lewis 46-year-old aircraft assembly inspector, was "medically dead" for 12 to 15 minutes a week ago, his doctor says, but he was revived by an unique emergency measure.

Lewis went to his doctor's office last Friday for minor surgery.

An anaesthetist injected the usual amount of cocaine, penicillin, a tranquilizing drug called Levallorphan-tic, and Lewis, the surgeon said, "died."

The doctor and his assistant injected cramarine directly into Lewis' heart and piped oxygen directly into his lungs. But nothing was of any avail.

Then the surgeon remembered that in some seemingly hopeless cases of drowning, resuscitation may be accomplished if a bone is broken. It provides shock.

He snapped Lewis' 10th left rib with his hands, and the patient revived. Yesterday the operation was performed, with a different surgeon. Lewis' heart beat, he hasn't told Lewis about his temporary "death." But he let Mrs. Lewis into the secret.

Russians Reported Giving up Demand To Control Exports

Allies Accused of Trying To "Torpedo" Agreement

Berlin, May 13 — (CP) — The Russians accused the Western Allies today of "torpedoing" the agreement to lift the Berlin blockade.

A western spokesman promptly labelled the accusation "a lot of nonsense."

The Soviet protest was voiced ironically, through the Soviet army newspaper in Germany, Tagliche Rundschau.

The Western Powers are evading the lifting of their restrictions under the agreement, it charged.

Some observers saw in those words an implied threat to reimpose the blockade, but such a step would be a matter of policy for higher authorities than the Russians in Germany to decide.

But the Rundschau statements did lend emphasis to the Russian need for getting supplies from the Western zones for her western bankrupt occupation zone.

Lawrence Wilkinson, economic adviser to the U. S. military government said that a Four-Power meeting in Berlin to discuss the Soviet zone's economic problems "would be a waste of time."

Wilkinson, briefing foreign correspondents, said the Russian representative on the four-power economic commission has refused to discuss without obtaining permits from the Soviet military or the Soviet Control Economic Commission.

However, early today West Berlin police quoted the officer commanding the Russian highway check point outside Berlin as saying such permits were need only in order from the West Berlin government.

Yesterday there was some whimsicle interpretation of the rule. Numerous empty trucks were forbidden to proceed from West Berlin to West Germany more against guerilla operations in that area.

Some oil docks over there still are operating.

The official News dispatch from Canton today said government troops withdrew from Nanking the Red capture of Nanking now were deploying against the Communists.

The Communist radio in Nanking said they wiped out or routed 12 government armies in the Shanghai-Hangchow triangle.

Boy Suffers Fracture In Street Accident

Kitchener, May 13 — (CP) — Struck by an automobile on the main street of the nearby village of Bloomingdale this afternoon, Freddie Kennedy McLeod, 10, suffered a fractured right leg, broken jaw, skull fracture and facial lacerations.

The boy allegedly ran in front of the vehicle driven by Harold Walter Bauman, 21.

This is the third traffic mishap involving children of this district, on May 3 Walter Foster, 9, was struck and killed by a truck at New Dundee, and on Tuesday of this week Janice Krauel, 4, was killed when struck when run over by a truck.

Police Guard Downing Street As Precaution

British Spokesman Denies That Life of Clement Attlee Threatened

London, May 13 (CP)— Armed police today patrolled Downing Street, official residence of Prime Minister Attlee and other cabinet ministers, as a precaution against possible terrorism. But the spokesman denied that Attlee had received threats.

Britain's fortieth feeling among Irishmen over the Labor government's new Ireland bill was believed to be the reason.

The Ireland bill, which received second reading in the House of Commons Wednesday night, would prevent the reunion of the Republic of Ireland with the six counties of Northern Ireland without approval of the Ulster parliament.

Some "patriots" claim that four of the six northern counties — Down, Tyrone, Fermanagh and Armagh—would if given the opportunity, join the Republic. But the Ulster party, headed by Prime Minister Sir Basil Brooke, will fight to the death to maintain Northern Ireland within the British crown.

The Ireland bill has brought bitter reaction from leaders of the government of the newly-born Republic. Many of the 26 southern counties of the Republic are reportedly dissatisfied at the segregated in the measure.

But since 1946 has there been any major wave of terrorism in Britain involving Irishmen and Englishmen. During the summer of 1939 members of the Irish Republican army launched a campaign of violence in Britain. One man was killed and 55 others were injured.

Considerable damage was done in London and elsewhere by the I.R.A. through the planting of small bombs. Such incidents continued early in 1940.

"During Wednesday's debate Churchill made a strong plea for labor supporter from West Belfast to back the bill," the spokesman said, and capital during the last election in a gas mask and battle bowler—carried an amendment to reject the bill. It was defeated by a vote of 317 to 12.

ENDS RULE OF JERSEY CITY'S HAGUE

John V. Kenny, newly elected mayor of Jersey City, N.J., is hoisted to shoulders of city commissioners he swept into office with him to end the 20-year scandal-ridden rule of Columbus Mayor Frank Eggers, nephew of Frank Hague, for whom defeat marks end of 32-year tenure in office as mayor, leader of the city and one of the few surviving old-style political bosses of the U.S. The Hague rule in Jersey City was often alleged to be the most corrupt and patronage-ridden in the U.S.—Central Press Canadian.

Moderation In Eating Clue To Long Life

London, Ont., May 13 (CP)— He does not diet or smoke himself, but Dr. John Dearness believes also that moderation in eating invites a long life as much as anything else.

The world-famous educationist and scientist may be considered something of an authority on cases he celebrates his 97th birthday today.

Dr. Dearness is internationally-known in the field of mycology (the study of plant fungi.).

On the art of living he said: "I avoid anything that I know may act against the healthy quality of the nervous system.

"Stop before you eat too much. Be satisfied, eat everything, but not much meat."

"Freedom from worry has helped me to live long and survive many calamities that never happened."

No Fear of Reds Or Nazi Fascism In Germany —Clay

Berlin, May 13 — (AP) Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today the forces of democracy in a unified Germany could beat down the Communists in free election.

The retiring United States military governor told a farewell press conference here he has no fear either of Communism winning over Germany or of a rebirth of Nazi Fascism.

Germany today has "every chance to succeed" as a peaceful member of the family of nations, he continued.

He left this advice:

"Any proposal to withdraw occupation forces fully at this time would be very very wrong. On the other hand a proposal for the gradual reduction of occupation forces would be good and worth considering."

Fort Erie, Ont., May 13 — (CP) —John Konstanty, 65, of Buffalo, father of Jim Konstanty, former Maple Leaf twirler now with the Philadelphia Phillies, was fatally injured Thursday night when he was struck by an automobile near the Peace Bridge. Konstanty died in hospital shortly after being admitted. He sustained a broken neck, internal hemmorhage and multiple fractures.

Compromise May Settle Dispute Between Parties

Hamilton, May 13 — A compromise may settle the dispute between the City of Hamilton and the Hamilton Street Railway Company over the latter's attempt to increase its fares, it was learned today.

Reason for the compromise arises from an obscure clause in the Ontario Railway Act that limits fares to five cents for the first three miles and two cents for each additional mile.

The clause was uncovered yesterday by lawyers of the City of Hamilton which opposed the increase in hearings before the Ontario Municipal Board.

It is suggested here that both sides are fearful of the board's interpretation of the clause. If it was ignored, the city could appeal on a point of law. But it is felt that any lengthy legal battle would be halted by amendment of the law by the Ontario Legislature.

Alderman Douglas B. Gordon said today he was willing to test the law by putting a five-cent piece in a trm's fare box.

'Hoot' Gibson's Son Injured

Toronto, May 13 (CP)— Hospital authorities said today seven year old George Gibson of Cobourg was still "seriously ill" and that his condition was "poor."

Son of Percy "Hoot" Gibson, well-known Central Ontario Baseball Association pitcher, the child was brought from Cobourg yesterday for treatment of fractured skull. He suffered the injuries when he fell from his bicycle into the path of an automobile.

Kingston, May 13 — (CP) — Friday the 13th is not looked upon as an unlucky date in the family of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Woodcock, Kingston. Three of their four sons were born on Friday which fell on the 13th.

They are celebrating with their youngest son, Thomas, who is 17 today. Their other sons, born on supposedly unlucky days, are Pte. Frank Woodcock, 23, whose birthday is August 13th., and William, 26, who was born on October 13th.

Clothing, Bedding For 15 Families, Fire Suffers

Edmonton, May 13 (CP)—The Rev. Cross reported today that a truckload of clothing and bedding is on the way to 15 families burned out by forest fires in the Kessel Slave Lake area of Northern Alberta.

An official said word of the families' plight came through the R.C.M.P. Thursday night and one truck was sent with clothes and bedding to Canyon Creek and Assineau.

About 150 men with three bulldozers are fighting the blaze south of Lesser Slave Lake which yesterday burned out a trestle bridge delaying railway service.

Assineau and Canyon Creek are on the Northern Alberta Railway line running between Edmonton and Grande Prairie. The fire is reported to cover a large area about 160 miles northwest of Edmonton.

FOOD SUPPLY TO BE STUDIED

Future of the world's food supply has been under study by public men and some have a dreary view of the situation that will develop in the somewhat distant future. That is the view that with the growing population of the earth means will have to be found to preserve the soil which makes food production possible. Much has been written of soil erosion and its disastrous effects on food production. Not so long ago at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Winston Churchill in an address referred to this problem as one that is under their study and in a phrase which will be remembered. He said that if such a time came when food was limited men were such that they would not agree to starve equally.

This coming summer the British Association for the Advancement of Science will at its conference deal in the main with world food and world population problems. Sir John Russell, head of the association and a leading authority on questions of agriculture will make this the subject of his presidential address. Lloyd Boyd Orr, past president of the F.A.O. and Lord Horder of the British Medical Association, together with representatives of F.A.O. and of UNESCO will deal with the same subject.

The event will have an international atmosphere as there will attend scientists from France, Sweden, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, United States, Finland and Germany.

It is no wonder that the matter is attracting so much attention while the possibilities forecast are far in the future, people like to believe. But it is no secret that many persons in various parts of the earth do not have quite enough to eat and this has always been so.

Hence the importance of the problem can be understood. It is a question which deserves international attention and should be a problem calling for a solution by the wisest men.

Countries which have no question of food shortage and which act as producers for lands which require heavy imports of foods are not so likely to feel keenly this issue but it is a favorable sign that scientific organizations should lend the light of their experience and knowledge and use their ability and meet the occasion with a remedy.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK

Maurice Maeterlinck, playwright and dramatist, who had created in his time a great number of matchless plays, poetic in their language and in their view of life, died the other day at the ripe age of 86.

He lived to see viewed like the world of mystery with uncanny skill and left a body of work in which the seer stands out prominently. His plays were populated with characters in harmony with the ethereal realm for which the poet created them. His "Pelleas and Melisande" was one of the most striking plays ever written, its characters and its atmosphere being those of that rare type that wins admiration for sheer beauty of conception and expression. In all this like any other great artist he was poet as well as playwright. It was natural enough that the play "Pelleas and Melisande" should be set to music to take its place in the great operas of the world. Many other plays of the spirit world were written by the master.

Maeterlinck brought to his work the poetic outlook on life which make his work unique and assured it of an immortality of fame. He was true to his calling. He listened to the heart of nature and life and interpreted it for the fellowmen. His originality in this was the proof of his devotion to his calling. He filled the world with wonder and mystery.

WORK ON THE LAWN

Lawn fanciers are advised not to be too anxious to clip the grass too short after they have spent goodly sums of money on fertilization of the soil, putting on top dressing and going to the labor of rolling the grass. Especially in summer the cutting should not be too short for cutting down close to the soil removes shelter from the roots making possible drying of the soil and opening the way to the inroads of pests.

A government bulletin advises that the cutting bar of the mower be not set lower than one and a half to two inches from the ground, except with creeping weed grasses which are seldom used on garden lawns. More frequent cutting leaving the clippings on the lawn is advised as these provide a good source of rich nutriment. If long grass is cut it has naturally to be raked off or the long clippings will smother the grass roots.

Water is valuable and a good soaking once a week is worth more than a light sprinkling ever other night, says a department report.

QUIET

Time was his shouting both-ered me,
I asked why little boys
Of eight or nine appear to be
So happy making noise.

I frowned upon disorder then,
But how can hope be near
When he comes racing in again
With mud upon his feet?

He'd toss his cap upon a chair,
His coat upon the floor,
I wonder when I'll find them there
To gather up once more?

Today the fever burns his brow,
I've put away his toys
And now I'm glad that, then, somehow,
But, oh, the quiet's harder now
To bear than was the noise!

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

JUST TO HAVE LIVED

It is the experience of us all, I believe, to come to the end of the day with the feeling that nothing has been accomplished, and that the day has been in vain. But isn't to have lived something? Isn't that enough to daring ever day of our lives are the experiences that we have accumulated.

Said Montaigne: "The great and glorious masterpiece of man is to live to the point. All other things — to reign, to heap, to build — are, at most, but inconsiderable props and appendages." The only substantial thing in life is what is character. All other gains wither and perish. Even what we have been loved than to have been known by the accident of money or other material gain, that might have earned.

We may have been born and reared in a free land should daily thank God for such a blessing. It is the privilege of us all, thus born, to consume our own lives as we may wish. And this is no small privilege. Even as we go, everything we do, takes on the influence of others, to a greater or lesser degree. We have to be loved of the entire human race within us.

"All the world's a stage," as Shakespeare has said. Everybody cannot be given "star" parts, but each of us can play our part — no matter how insignificant — as though a star had it as his own. The piccolo player in an orchestra doesn't look very important — but just let him get off key and the great conductor will instantly know — and so will the entire audience. Even though we have a minor part in life it's important if it's played the best we know.

Just to have lived and done the best in our power, with what abilities we have, is to have lived a successful life. Too many people fail in trying to outdo everyone else. We ought constantly to try and outdo ourselves. That alone will attract attention. And some unseen watcher's sure to give applause. And if that unseen watcher may not be around, there is that divine watcher within, self who will doubly applaud!

Mackenzie's Column: Collaboration Between Systems Most Desirable

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The Moscow radio — which of course speaks with the voice of the Kremlin — broadcasts that collaboration between the United States and the Russian economic systems is both possible and desirable.

That's a highly important statement, whether you regard it with suspicion or with hope.

The Soviet view with the theesis that American and Russian economic systems might collaborate, despite the ideological clash between the two countries. Communistic and democratic nations have similar economic needs. Briefly they should be able to exchange goods in operations to meet these requirements.

This fact in no way conflicts with the truism that democracy and communism cannot mix ideologically. They are oil and water.

A Proviso

However, when we say that these two differing economic systems might collaborate we must add a proviso. Such collaboration calls for a two-way street. And it calls for non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

This touches a difficulty which frequently has put a strain on Russo - American relations, since the establishment of the Soviet government. Washington refused to recognize the new Russian state until 1933 because of Moscow's persistent efforts to spread communism in the United States by means of propaganda and the employment of red agents.

Britain, who recognized the Soviet in 1924, encountered similar communistic activities and finally London broke off relations with Russia and didn't resume them again until 1929.

Activities of the comintern (Communist international or revolution) continued to cause so much heat in Russo-American affairs that in 1943 Russia "abolished" that body as a gesture towards her allies.

Spies, Active

Since the war the "cominform" has taken up the cudgels for communism, and the world revolution idea. Canada has uncovered her big spy ring and convicted a number of agents. The United States has had a constant discussion of investigations and prosecutions threatening at times.

Well now, it doesn't take much imagination to see that these harrowing experiences might be said to be altered before there could be any collaboration, economic or otherwise, between Russia and the United States.

Moreover, we are talking about foreign propaganda and foreign penetration whose business it is to organize trouble.

If Russia and the United States could in some way iron out the question of interference (and

THE PACKSACK

Sanitary reasons are the ones generally accepted for the absence of beards on men. That is probably due to the fact that the habit of shaving for sanitation is something new and wonderful to human nature and we are bewitched by it.

But the Romans had to cut off their whiskers had better reasons. It was a matter of safety. Ancient Greek soldiers were ordered to cut off their beards and trim their hair closely simply so that their enemies could not get hold of their whiskers in battle. The beardless Greeks defeated the whiskered Persians. But in later days of close combat, no matter how many spears were flung or how many arrows were shot, the fighting inevitably became hand to hand, and soldiers fought face to face. To grab hold of your opponent's beard was to give you a fatal advantage with your sword hand.

The Roman adopted the Greek principle. A Roman legionary could grow a beard. Shaved fancy curls on his beard during peace time. But when action loomed, daily routine orders demanded that every soldier in the Roman army, in ancient times, in beardless man was either a soldier of a gentleman looking for a fight.

How, then, did the bearded Greeks and beardless Romans defeat the shaven Romans? There have been complications and decadent and peewee Romans were too short to reach the whiskers of their bearded enemies from the north.

When powder was invented and fighting no longer was hand-to-hand, beards went back as the mark of the soldier. The Elizabethan rovers all wore large beards for battle. And the fighting today has become too complicated for beards. It would be no picnic to get your whiskers caught in the mechanism of an automatic weapon; what would happen to one who had his beard shoved into it could be imagined; and poison gas masks won't accommodate a sporran on a man's chin.

Beards not offer feeble sanitary excuses for our womanish faces.

Monetary System Must be Changed Says Solon Low

Edmonton, May 13 — (CP) — Solon Low, national leader of the Social Credit party, said claimed retention of the present financial system will mean "unemployment or war, or both."

Mr. Low reiterated the need for a change in Canada's monetary system in an address before a party nominating convention in Calgary Thursday night. His address Thursday night was made without use of a prepared text. Mr. Aberhart who was recreated in Calgary earlier for broadcast Thursday from Ottawa, said:

"The only way to avoid unemployment, or war or both, is through the adoption of the principles of Social Credit," Mr. Low said. "Social Credit is the only program before the Canadian people which can eliminate the causes of these two scourges of humanity."

Asked Social Credit leader said the Liberal party had shown that it was more concerned about power and position than they are about the welfare of the people.

The Liberal party had allowed him a free hand, Mr. Low said, over the CBC network during the whole election campaign. "But the Liberal party has left themselves seven hours of free time and seven minutes over," he said, just about 3 1-3 times as much as was granted the Social Credit organization."

Mr. Low said his party's time on the CBC was limited because "they (Liberals) are afraid of the Social Credit message and fully the issues of the election."

At the nomination meeting, C. N. Gardiner, 39, and Arthur Jamieson, 39, were named as Social Credit candidates for Calgary East and Calgary West constituencies, respectively in the June 26 election.

Mr. Low told the meeting that the Social Credit party was making steady progress in other parts of Canada, including rural and urban ridings of "staid Ontario."

DIVORCE TO WED

Hollywood, May 13 — (AP) — Betty Grable, Harry James, Birmingham, Ala., beauty formerly married to Jackie Cooper, announced today she and Buddy Baker, Hollywood musician, plan to be married soon. Miss Grable, actress and dancer, and Miss Rase, 22, met 18 months ago.

Russia claims to have her own diplomatic code. She might be able to implement the Moscow radio's suggestion that economic collaboration is both possible and desirable.

Strength for the Day

HAYDN'S JOYFUL HEART

Someone asked the great composer Haydn why his religious music was so full of joy. "I cannot," he said, "make it otherwise; there is something in my heart that I feel. When I think upon God, my heart is so full of joy that the notes dance and leap, as it were, from my pen. And since God has given me a cheerful heart, He will be pardoned me that I serve Him with a cheerful song."

And why should we not worship God with a cheerful spirit? The one continuous promise of the Old and New Testament alike, is that when God gets hold of men's hearts, He gives them joy. We distort our religion when we make it as gloomy and our voices solemn and our words lugubrious. We do not need morbidly sensitive consciences to make us believe that this part of thing is of God. The Bible insists that the man is of God is good cheer, joy, peace, a radiant spirit.

No wonder Haydn wrote so cheerfully when he thought upon God. A consciousness of God's presence will always result in a musical heart to sing. The note of joy runs through all religions, and he who has not religion has, with it, laid hold on joy immeasurable.

New Version of Geek

In the movie "Nightmare Alley" here's more on a character called a "geek." Drinking to such excess that the habit couldn't do without it, he became unemployable. So the unfortunate hired him as a "geek." During the performance they threw snakes etc. to the geek and he'd eat them because they kept him off liquor all afternoon and evening. After the show they gave him the liquor he wanted. ...so you were not too original in this matter, Mr. World. In today's column but don't like people to get too high-brow opinions of themselves. (Anonymous).

Answer — In the fourth edition of Mencken's The American Language '36, geek is defined as "an exhibitor for a snake-eater or other such freak. However, my unofficial dictionary of the day has based on my faulty hearing. I heard of one who heard a dyspeptic lecturer condemning an eccentric character as a geek. He naively said was gish. Webster says gink is slang for a stupid person. Now, Mencken, I care a hoot what a nonentity may think about me—it was only my friends that I feared. Some remarks that caught my eye as I was tossing around. Also today's chucker where unsigned communications go at once.

Veterinary Physician Seems Irked

If you wish to publish a booklet entitled "Why Not Consult About Rabies" I shall be glad to purchase a copy. Obviously in other words, I don't know much about rabies and prefer not to. I don't think you know much about rabies. I have never met a qualified veterinarian who has not questioned the existence of the so-called rabies (—— D, V. M.)

Answer—Your letter convinces me of my own ignorance. I don't know your business. I reminded you of a booklet and pamphlet on all discussions of rabies (notice I pronounced rabies with the short "a") with superstition, hesitancy and/or emotion, including my own. I have never intentionally questioned the existence of rabies. I have, in fact, had serious question the occurrence of rabies in man. Of course I don't know anything about rabies. Who does?

Saunders Wants Flow Ratified By Treaty

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Hobert Saunders, Ontario hydro-electric chairman, said Thursday that a treaty with the United States will be sought to ratify the diversion of water which the Ontario Hydro Commission is drawing at Niagara Falls.

At the same time, the United States will be asked to consider an early start on St. Lawrence River power development.

An Ottawa conference Thursday between Mr. Saunders, Trade Minister Howe and Cabinet Secretary Norman Robertson discussed a draft of a communication to be sent to Washington setting out these requests.

Under the present treaty, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission is allowed a flow at Niagara of 36,000 cubic feet a second. However, this has been increased by a further permit a second, with permission given by diplomatic note.

Mr. Saunders said that if the change can be ratified by treaty the Ontario Government will refuse to proceed with a Queenston development which would mean 400,000-500,000 horsepower.

Hydro officials are pressing for a decision soon on the St. Lawrence power project because, even after ratification of an agreement between Ontario and New York State, it will take many years and cost to prepare to generate and transmit power.

Parisians Asked Not to Stare At Princess Margaret on Visit To French Capital This Month

BY GODFREY ANDERSON

Paris, May 13 (AP)—Parisians are being asked in advance not to gather in crowds and stare at Britain's Princess Margaret when she pays her first visit to the French capital later this month.

While Paris newspapers have been printing in detail accounts of how the Princess was bothered by too persistent cameramen in Capri, the same newspapers are making a plea that she should not be noticed while here.

"The best way to let the Princess appreciate the true face of Paris will be not to bother her staring curiosity and to spare her the assaults of journalists and photographers which so spoiled her stay in Capri and Rome," commented the evening newspaper Paris-Presse.

Despite the current appeals there is little likelihood that Princess Margaret will be able to window-shop in the Rue De La Paix without being mobbed.

There are too many tourists here for that. Besides, a number of Paris newspapers did not hesitate to front page the very pictures whose taking they had criticized in Italy.

Most popular was the one showing the Princess in a bathing suit as she tripped down the beach to bathe with her shirttailed escort at Capri.

The morning newspaper Ce Matin, which said the picture had been taken "by an indiscreet photographer hidden among the rocks," declared on its front page it would cause a scandal in Britain.

The scandal, it went on to explain with gallic gallantry, would not be on account of the picture showing "the splendid figure of Princess Margaret," but because her escort (T. C. Harvey, the Queen's private secretary) was wearing a hat while leading the Princess, which, the paper commented, "was a little off hand."

The mass circulation France-Soir reproduced the same picture on page one, side by side with a Giles cartoon from the Daily Express.

Before announcement was made that Princess Margaret would include the Paris visit in her trip, several French newspapers claimed there had been some criticism that she had gone to Italy, a former enemy country, before paying her first visit to the French capital.

The Princess will stay as the guest of Sir Oliver Harvey, the British Ambassador. The exact date of her arrival in Paris is not known.

Trenton, N. J. — (AP) — It is better, the city of Newark learned, to give than to receive.

Newark received a lowtr Market Street building in 1944 as a gift from Louis Adler. The city took possession and began collecting rents.

In 1947, a fire gutted the building, turning it into an eyesore and a safety hazard. Newark officials, no longer happy with their gift, asked Adler to take it back and repair the damage.

Adler refused and was fined $50 by a Newark court for violating the city's building code. He appealed.

The appellate division of State Superior Court yesterday ruled in Adler's favor. Setting aside the fine, the court said, "the appellant (Adler) has had nothing to do with the building since 1944."

Alfred, N. Y. — (AP)—A fire here happened at the right time and place.

Thirty volunteer firemen rushed from a class one block away to apply lesson-handling techniques they had been studying. Their instructors were pleased.

And the blaze was in a pile of lumber from a razed building that was to have been destroyed the next day anyway.

Canada Rejects As Untrue Poland's Charge

Lake Success, N. Y., May 13 — (CP) — Canada Thursday night rejected as untrue Poland's charge in the United Nations that refugees in the Dominion are exploited.

Leon Mayrand presented Canada's case before the 59-member social committee of the General Assembly, answering an attack on the Dominion made earlier by Henry Altman of Poland.

Both delegates spoke in French during a committee discussion of the work of the International Refugee Organization.

Altman said displaced persons brought to Canada and other countries worked under worse conditions than they endured in German camps. He called for reorganization of I. R. O., which would allow immigrants to return to their native countries and would eliminate what he called exploitation.

Mayrand, head of the American and Far Eastern division of the External Affairs Department, noted that Russia and White Russia as well as Poland had made the same charges previously in the U. N. Authorities in the Dominion have denied these charges).

"I gather from those statements that they are attempting to show that refugees and displaced persons who came to Canada are being employed at lower rates than those paid locally - hired help for similar work, that their working conditions are unsatisfactory, and that, in general, they are being discriminated against and exploited by their Canadian employers," Mayrand said.

"Nothing, of course, could be further from the truth . . ," he added.

Remedial Action Taken

Mayrand said there had been complaints about conditions at a temporary refugee camp at Emerson, Man., but remedial action was taken soon after it came to the government's attention.

"Actually, investigation showed that the conditions which caused these complaints were due, in the main, to the carelessness of the workers in the camp themselves," he said.

Altman said an article in the Winnipeg Tribune of last Oct. 19 about working conditions of refugees in Manitoba, had provoked a scandal.

Altman described them as suffering from filthy, cramped living quarters and bad food. For a 10-hour working day, he said, they received $3.50 of which $1 was taken for lodging and 25 cents for food.

In his 38-day statement, Altman said when several displaced persons did wheat-harvesting work and wished to remain at that job instead of returning to sugar - beet farms, thi government ordered them to return. at their own expense under penalty of being shipped back to Europe.

Turning his attack on Ludger Dionne, Quebec spinning - mill owner and Member of Parliament, Altman said the Polish girls Dionne brought from Europe in 1947 could not endure the working conditions imposed at St. Georges De Beauce. He said that after one year only 16 of the original group of 100 girls remained in Dionne's employ.

DREW CARRIES CAMPAIGN INTO NEWFOUNDLAND

Prepared to Review Terms of Confederation If Elected

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Grand Falls, Nfld., May 13 — (CP) — George Drew carried the Newfoundland phase of his federal election campaign close to home yesterday.

The Progressive Conservative leader told an audience in this newsprint town a government under his leadership would be prepared to'adjust the terms under which the island entered Confederation.

A Progressive Conservative administration also would ensure frequent and continuing discussions between the federal and provincial governments, he said.

He took up the Confederation issue after provincial party leader Harry Mews said union terms were not satisfactory.

Today Mr. Drew concludes his island tour with an address in St. John's. He then returns to the mainland for a speech in Moncton, N. B.

In various addresses, he stressed these points:

1. A Progressive Conservative government would not abolish family allowances or old age pensions.

2. His party believes that organized labor would assist to the benefit of the community as a whole.

3. As leader of the Progressive Conservative government in Ontario he and his cabinet colleagues had made the 48-hour working week and collective bargaining compulsory.

He referred to statements that his party would do away with family allowances and old age pensions and said: "We believe in the widest possible measures of social security."

He added that the Progressive Conservative party believed in old age pensions but forbid anything the Liberals had done.

British Board Of Trade Pres. Starts Tour

Halifax, May 13 (CP)—President Harold Wilson of the British Board of Trade left here yesterday bilateral trade is not a permanent instrument of his country's policy but necessary for European recovery.

Starting a "pick-up" tour of Canada, he told the Halifax Board of Trade that Britain—like Canada—looks to establishment of a "planned economy" as the world trading system.

Mr. Wilson speaks tonight at Saint John, N.B.

The Dominion was not losing British markets nor was she being subordinated in the United Kingdom trade picture. Last year, Canada was "by far" Britain's largest supplier.

Mr. Wilson said increase, or even maintenance, of Britain's flow of imports from Canada depended on "a great expansion of our export capacity."

Britain faced a steady decline of Marshall aid dollars. Therefore, unless earnings of Canadian and United States dollars were correspondingly increased, United Kingdom imports from the Dominion would decline.

Britain would be put in balance only by the most extensive efforts on the part of the world dollar areas to increase their sales to Canada and the United States."

Bilateral arrangements, at the outset, were necessary for the restoration of intra-European trade, but "in turn was a essential part of the continent's recovery and "the underlying basis" of the European recovery program.

"... in addition to your economic objectives Britain has a responsibility, not only to the sterling area, but also to Europe" he said, "it is not too much to say that peace itself in Europe depends on successful recovery of the European nations."

Mr. Wilson considered re-establishment of world trade as "a challenge to our government and to our industry and trade." But equally, it was a challenge to Canada.

Complete Rout Of Communists In UK Election

London, May 13 (CP)—The Conservative Party, jubilant over sweeping gains in yesterday's borough council elections, was confident today the landslide back to the right foreshadowed their return to national government in 1950 general elections.

Socialist supporters, while subdued by their party's heavy reverses, were not prepared to accept this view.

They pointed out that their party has not lost in parliamentary by-elections a single seat gained or held in the 1945 general election.

Returns early today showed a steady stream of anti-labor victories in the 420 borough councils involving 9,792 candidates for 4,718 seats.

With final returns in all 392 municipal and county councils in the 28 London (Metropolitan) councils, the position was:

Conservatives 560 gains, 24 loses; Labor 77 gains, 530 loses; Liberals 19 gains, 3 loses; Communist no gains, two losses; Independent 32 gains, 19 loses.

The mounting Conservative gains throughout Britain were accompanied by a complete rout of Communists, who had put forward a record 1,000 London area candidates, none of whom had been elected to date.

Anti-Socialist forces were elated by their successful assault upon Labor's citadel—the group of 28 London Metropolitan boroughs.

Labor, which formerly controlled 18 of the 28 councils, today had been swept out of office in Holborn and Stoke Newington. Labor lost all but here in Conservatives had gained a net of 102 seats in London, raising their total in the London councils to 208. Labor, which lost 98 seats in the vote-by-counties last year, still held 342 seats.

At Manchester, the Conservatives replaced Socialists as the biggest single party in their strength on the new council equals the combined voting power of Socialists and Liberals.

Some political quarters considered the Labor government's recent "austerity budget" contributed to Socialist reverses by alienating, in part a proportion of the women's vote.

Polling, though not approaching the strength of a general election —where a "do-or-die" attitude of the electorate is commonwas in some cases exceptionally heavy.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Only two items necessary for Wedding Reception Refreshments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a clerk in an office and I have to pay all of the expenses of my wedding which will take place next month. After the simple church ceremony I would like to have some relatives and friends come to my home for the most informal of receptions. Will you please tell me how simple and inexpensive I can have the refreshments to be served at about four-thirty o'clock? —Wilma.

Two items are all you need. I hope you can have a bridal cake, even a very simple one, so that you may have the gala feature of cutting the first piece and sharing it with your bridegroom. Let then have the rest of the cake served to the guests. And there should be a beverage — you might have a fruit punch, or punch or a cocktail if you wish and can afford, so that your guests may drink to the health proposed to "the happiness of the bride and groom."

Do not sign any kind of letter with title before name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I sign a note to my child's teacher asking her to excuse an absence, should I sign "Mrs. William Jones" or "Jane Jones?" I have never met this teacher. —Mother.

Never, never, should you sign a letter of any kind, business or social, and to anyone (even if you do not know the person to whom you are writing) with your first name, "Mrs. William Jones." Your signature is your informal name, . . . Jane Smith Jones, or Jane S. Jones, or Jane Jones. You add your formal name (in parentheses, under and to the left of your signature), either for identification or for information. So, to the note to your child's teacher, your correct signature is . . . Jane Smith Jones (Mrs. William Jones)

A lady and her glove . . . when shaking hands

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it always necessary for a lady to take off her gloves when she shakes hands? Or if she does not take off her glove must one apologize? This is to settle a discussion between our office force. —S.L.

In all usual circumstances a lady does not take off her glove when she shakes hands — and does not apologize for not taking off her glove. An unusual circumstance — which also means either take off her glove or say "I'm sorry I can't shake hands — my glove is too soiled" is when the weather is extremely severe and that might soil the hand or glove of the person offering to shake hands.

For the Lingerie Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a lingerie shower for my sister-in-law and I would like to know if it would be proper to enclose with the invitation a small card with the notation of the sizes of the various items. —M. E.

Yes, I'm not sure that it would be a very good idea to enclose these informative cards with the invitations — unless you are positive that everyone you are inviting is going to attend. Otherwise I should think it would be more appropriate and practical to send these cards to those who accept the invitation.

Surprise Housewarming Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My cousin is being married very soon, and after they return from their honeymoon I would like to give them a surprise housewarming at their new home. How should the invitation be worded? Because of the greater convenience I would like to have the serving of the foods to be around six o'clock. Could you suggest the menu for the covered-dish foods that the guests are to bring, or should I leave the choice to each guest, or exactly what would you suggest?—S.

For such an intimate party, and particularly since it is to be a surprise party, I suggest that you issue the invitations by telephone. This will give you an opportunity (1) to explain about keeping the plans a secret; (2) to give the definite plans, as to day, date, hour of meeting, and most important for a surprise party, the place of meeting; and (3) to talk over a possible and practical menu (one you should more or less decide on beforehand so that there will be a pleasant variety) and decide definitely what each woman guest would prefer to bring as her contribution.

Women Prefer Hatted Males

Vancouver, (CP)—Women have definite ideas on what type of hat their men should wear.

"And it better be a snap brim 15, they want him to be in style", says A. J. Linforth veteran hatbrusher here.

Mr. Linforth, who is retiring shortly, has been in the hat business for 50 years. Hats don't make you bald, he says and has a thick grey thatch to prove it.

Hats are more popular with women than a bare head according to Mr. Linforth, with a wide snap brims—in any colors—leading the style parade.

BEAUTY

Naturally Curly Hair

The ladies with curly hair who must submit their heads to permanent wave operations every four months or so envy the girl whose tresses carry a natural undulation. It saves time and money, and can look as pretty when she gets up in the morning as when she goes to bed at night. No rag tags or bobbin tearing around her neck.

Curly Girl doesn't always realise how fortunate she is. She may envy a shine or neglect her thatch that the undulation weakens and disappears. Certain hair dressers tell every day about that create wave lines and ringlets. One must be careful, know what one is about.

To retain this blessing in its highest form, it is necessary to shampoo the growth frequently. The more hot water that is applied, the more wave-bound becomes the coil quality. The medium for the shampoo can be in the form of cream or liquid soap, but no matter what is used, every trace must be removed. If the slightest film is left on it will cause the curl to lift will not contract. It is the contraction that puckers the curl.

The shampoo should start with a vocalise rinse with a fine spray and a strong current of water to remove surface soil. If soap is used such as you purchase at the drugstore, it should be diluted in hot water. If too thick, it is bound to be gummy, difficult to remove.

Curly Girl doesn't always realise how fortunate she is.

Friction is well into the scalp. The more friction, the greater the stimulation of the blood streams upon which the silky shaft live and have their being.

The fact fancy you can have a thorough rinsing by holding the head over a washbowl and sloshing the water over your head, using the spray and a current of water strong enough to rattle your brains will make a satisfactory job of this good-looks rite.

If the hair is short, tree-shape inside the bowl will be followed by a rinsing—will suffice. Long hair should have hard brushing frictions, as many rinsings. Cream shampoos suffice like any soda but, even when they are used, there should be several applications.

The final rinsing should be as hot as flesh can comfortably bear. Follow along with a steam treatment. Run on the shower faucet in the tub, hold your head as close to the steam that pass through your glorious crown.

If it is necessary to strengthen the undulations by a finger wave, comb the hair away from the face until it is as straight as a string, then push it forward, and then back into a pattern. Pinch the edge of each wave line to make it strong and clean. Slip on a veiled net and go about your business.

If the ends do not form ringlets, an end permanent will fix up that lack.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Daughter Shuns Men

A mother who is distressed over her daughter's lack of interest in men friends writes me the following letter:

"I have a daughter 23 years of age who for the past nine years has refused to go any place where she would meet young men. Before that she had kept company for three years and when she and the young man broke up she had a nervous breakdown. She is in good spirits now, has a good job, is well educated and makes an excellent companion. Yet has recently occurred to me that she perhaps had an affair with that young man nine years ago and that might be the reason for her attitude toward men now. But I do not know how to bring up the subject with her of taking more interest in meeting men again."

My first advice to this mother would be that she shouldn't jump to conclusions. Unless she has more evidence to support her assumption about her daughter than mere guesswork, I would not give it too much thought. It could perfectly well be that her daughter suffered a serious emotional shock over the breakup of her romance, and that this was sufficient to cause her breakdown. Such a thing unfortunately, is not by any means uncommon.

It is certainly too bad, however, that the girl has been shunning male society ever since, and I agree with the mother that it would be a fine thing if she could be induced to take a more normal attitude toward men.

I am not sure, however, that the mother would be just the right one to try and persuade her. Sometimes a girl's emotions are left so sore by an experience of this kind that she doesn't want to discuss the matter even with her own mother.

Another thing the mother might do is to discuss the problem with the doctor who had the girl under his care during her nervous breakdown. He should be able to make suggestions about what could be done to help bring about a more healthy attitude on the girl's part.

The Experts Say . . .

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, (CP)— A crisp green salad is just the thing to help stave away hot weather blues.

Garden crisp green lettuce leaves, plainly dressed, make the perfect salad. But other places must be completely cooled or flirted with a tart spicy dressing.

Home economists of the consumer section, Department of agriculture, recommend the following salad dressing for the plain lettuce salad.

Honey Celery Seed Dressing

Ingredients: one-half teaspoon celery seed; one tablespoon water; one-third cup of sugar; one-half teaspoon dry mustard; one-half teaspoon paprika; pinch of salt; one-third cup vinegar; one-half tablespoon grated onion.

Soak celery seed in water for two hours. Mix sugar, mustard, paprika and salt. Add celery seed and water. Add other ingredients, beating constantly with rotary beater. Yield: one cup.

The housewife seeking a novelty dish for a special luncheon might try a Butterfly Salad. It is made as follows: The body—a small banana, the wings— one slice of pineapple cut in two, antennae—narrow strips of pimentos, eyes—two slices of stuffed olives. Cover body with mayonnaise.

Rainbow Salad

Ingredients: one cup canned red kidney beans; one cup canned peas; one-half cup yellow cheese cut in one-half inch cubes; one cup chopped celery; one tablespoon chopped sour pickle, one tablespoon bean and peas, mix and add other ingredients. Add a cooked salad dressing if desired.

Cooked Dressing

Ingredients: one egg; two tablespoons sugar; one tablespoon mustard; one teaspoon salt; one-half teaspoon pepper; one tablespoon salt; 1 1-2 tablespoons flour; one small cup vinegar.

Beat egg and add dry ingredients. Add vinegar a little at a time. Mix and cook until it thickens. Add a lump of butter just before removing from heat. Keep in refrigerator.

With picnic-time just around the corner, mother should have a few ideas on hand for sandwiches.

The home economists recommend cheese Sandwich Spread. Ingredients one pound grated cheese (four cups); four tablespoons minced onion; one-half teaspoon salt; dash of cayenne pepper; two hard-cooked eggs (chopped); two tablespoons butter; two tablespoons milk; two tablespoons flour; one-quarter cup vinegar; one cup hot milk.

Add grated cheese, onion, salt, and cayenne pepper to hard-boiled egg. Melt butter in double boiler, add flour, vinegar, milk, stirring well. Add vinegar and milk, while stirring and cook over hot water until thickened. Combine with cheese mixture and store in a cool place. Yield: three cups.

HUGE PEST DAMAGE

Canadian agricultural chemists estimate that pests destroy $35,000,000 worth of farm produce each year, or 17 per cent of the national crop.

"GOT A LUCIFER?"

The "Lucifer" an early match tipped with chlorate of potash and sulphide was ignited by scratching on sandpaper.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Life is Like A Chain

By ROY L. SMITH

There are no isolated events in life; everything that happens to us is a part of something else that has happened.

There was a time, perhaps in our father's generation, when the preachers were accustomed to hold up terrifying pictures of the final judgment day when the wicked would suffer indescribable torments and the righteous would enter into unalloyed bliss.

In recent years we have not heard so much about the judgment day. Perhaps the preachers are wrong in not giving the subject more attention. But they are at least right in saying that every day is a judgment day, the product of our yesterdays.

Jesus and The Judgment

No one can be a true religious teacher who ignores the question of the Judgment, for it is a part of life. Each of us comes under some kind of judgment every day.

Jesus seems to have gone to great pains to make it plain that no man could possibly know the exact time when he would be subject to judgment. All the fantastic theories as to the precise date for the end of the world are in contradiction to Jesus' own attitude at this point. If the Hebrew Prophet of Galilee were alive today He would undoubtedly use the same thing to modern men that He said to his ancient followers: "Don't try to figure out when the end of the world is coming; live every day in such a way that it will make no difference if it comes before nightfall."

Be Ye Also Ready

John Wesley, the founder of The Methodist Church, was accosted one day by a girlfriend who said, "What would you do today if you knew the end of the world were coming tomorrow?" To this the great evangelist replied, "I would preach this morning at the appointed place, then attend to the town that has announced me, and this evening to the congregation that is expecting me." The surprised questioner asked, "Would you make any change in your schedule?" Mr. Wesley replied, "Not in the least. I would up every day so as to please God according to the best of my ability. If I knew that tomorrow were to be my last day, I could not live today any differently than I have planned it."

You Have Been Warned

Along the edges of the famous Express Highway in the city of St. Louis there stand at frequent intervals signs bearing the slogan, "You have been warned." They are reminders to drivers that the highway is covered by a series of laws and ordinances and that anyone who drives in an illegal manner will have no defense.

The Sunday School lesson for May 15: "Jesus' Teachings on the Judgment," Mark 13; 14-3.

Life is like that. Illness never strikes without giving us some kind of advance warning. It happens again and again that we ignore the symptoms that our bodies throw out as warning notices. We run past the red flags and lanterns. Nature has been kind to us; we travel a way that is lined with cautions.

Everyday Warnings

Life's highway is skirted with hundreds of warnings which wise men can read if they will.

No man ever becomes enslaved to the liquor habit without being warned, for alcoholics are all about us, and their pitiful career is a matter of common knowledge.

No community can allow any large segment of its population to live in ignorance without all the community having to pay the bill. . . . Illiteracy is primarily a community liability. To deny educational privileges to children, the same with lack, is to ensure that they will have to be supported later on by the educators, the divorce courts, public school officials, the P.B.I. and a long list of other agencies. Most public authorities are agreed that the failure of modern society to provide religious education for the young is responsible for a large part of the juvenile delinquency with which we are confronted. The churches, the Sunday schools and the Sunday schools is to expend the problem of tomorrow.

Modern society is now entering upon the judgment day, with an army of alcoholics demanding attention, with juvenile courts packed with adolescent offenders, and with the moral character of all our society seriously undermined.

The judgment day does not repeat a capricious revenge heaped upon us by an angry God, but the natural and inevitable outworking of a civilization that is strictly obedient to law.

(Copyright 1949 by the International Council of Religious Education on behalf of 40 Protestant denominations.)

NUMERICAL GENDER

The ancients considered even numbers as female, odd numbers as male.

NATIONAL UNITY THEME OF TALK BY ST. LAURENT

Prime Minister Carries Election Campaign Into Acadia Land

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Yarmouth, N.S., May 13 (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent, going to the people in his own way, carried the gospel of national unity and handling segment of Canada yesterday, into Nova Scotia's stronghold, Acadia land.

Moving by car along a 65-mile circle of coastline between Digby and Yarmouth, he spoke again the message he has been proclaiming in the west, in Ontario and in his own native Quebec.

In its core is simple. It is great, he says, to be a Canadian.

More and more Canadians are realizing because they have a growing consciousness from coast to coast of national unity, of the value of rearing a national edifice bulwarked by the distinctive characteristics of the great races. All Canadians are blessed with an unmatched land and they themselves are a superb and unified race.

Of the descendants of the original French settlers of Canada, he singled out the French-speaking Canadians he spoke to in English.

He was heard this time in Yarmouth and Digby and at the Roman Catholic College of St. Ann at Church Point.

In Yarmouth, while dignitaries waited, he signed his name for children. On hand for talking him from Saint John, N.B., to Digby he said "hello" to a little girl and she said "hi."

At Church Point and at Digby's smart new rural high school, he won cheers when he proposed a school holiday to celebrate the visit of a Prime Minister.

Capacity Audience

At the French college, before a capacity audience gathered from the area, he said Canada was blessed with good relations between church and state and was obviously grateful when the Father Superior, Rev. Wilfred Hachey, strongly supported the Atlantic pact and described him as its "inspiration."

In Yarmouth Thursday night, he placed the record of his government on family allowances, old age pensions, unemployment insurance, farm and fish floor prices and other things before an audience packing a resort hotel and said it should invite re-election June 27.

His big point for this region was his statement that although fish sales have vaulted greatly in recent years there are still strong possibilities of being able to create a much more important home market for fish in Canada.

Mr. St. Laurent left to Reconstruction Minister Winters the job of political assault. The 35-year-old Nova Scotian promptly tied into George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, for "bloc-killing" and "never adequately explaining why" a Dominion-provincial agreement which would have brought social security benefits offered by the Ottawa government to all Canadians.

The alliances were bringing $14,500,000 a year into Nova Scotia, more than either the fishing or lumber industries made in any depression year.

This assured that Nova Scotia never again would experience the depths of the depression of the '30s.

CAMPAIGN WARMS WITH BUT 45 DAYS BEFORE ELECTION

Fresh Flurry of Vote-Meaning Speech-Making Developing Across Dominion

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

The campaign for Canada's June 27 general election picked up speed yesterday with a fresh flurry of vote-wooing speech-making developing across the country.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, now deep in his Maritimes campaign made a 65-mile sweep from Digby to Yarmouth, N.S., delivering addresses en route. George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, carried his vote-getting appeal to the big Newfoundland newsprint town of Grand Falls.

In the west, Solon Low, Social Credit leader, broadcast to the voters on a national CBC network. At least five cabinet ministers, Defence Minister Claxton and Reconstruction Minister Winters also moved into the campaign.

Mr. St. Laurent climaxed a day along Nova Scotia's western coast, home of a large-scale fishing industry, with an address at Yarmouth in which he stressed the possibilities of developing a ready-at-home market for Maritime fish.

Mr. Drew made labor one of the major items in the labor-conscious province of Ontario and said a government under his leadership would make compulsory collective bargaining and the 48-hour week. Wants System Changed

Mr. Low said the fundamental election issue is the retention of the present financial system or "a change to a system that means adequate purchasing power in the hands of the people."

"The only way to avoid unemployment, or war, or both, is through application of the principles of Social Credit," he said.

Mr. Winters, speaking at Yarmouth from the same platform as Mr. St. Laurent, defended the government's foreign trade policies and said the Liberals had the best program the country had known for keeping trade at its present record peak.

Mr. Claxton, in an address broadcast at Montreal, said Mr. Drew was becoming "mired in the mud he threws."

Addressing constituents of his St. Lawrence-St. George riding, he said:

"I believe that you resent the way I do Mr. Drew's screaming parade of such matters as Hong Kong, North Star aircraft, charges of Communism in the armed forces and Marxism in the public service. Though repeatedly challenged, he has failed to substantiate any of his claims.

"The only reason he does this is because he has nothing constructive to offer."

ALLIES APPROVE CONSTITUTION OF GERMAN REPUBLIC

Give Themselves High Trump for Use in May 23rd Peace Talks

Frankfurt, Germany, May 13 —(AP)—The western Allies approved with reservations Thursday night the new west German federal republic draft constitution.

Thus they gave themselves a high trump card for use in the May 23 Paris peace talks with Russia seeking a solution to the entire German problem. They are shooting for an ultimate agreement uniting the Soviet zone of Germany with the Republic.

Britain, the United States and France also agreed an "occupation statute" or interim peace treaty for the western occupation zones' 45,000,000 Germans, to come into force the day the west German government takes office.

The draft constitution now goes to the 11 state parliaments in western Germany for ratification which may be completed before the end of July.

The military governors signed with reservations. Included is a make sure that no "jokers" in the constitution's wording would permit the Germans to do these things:

1. Violate the occupation statute which limits German government activity in the fields of armament, the industrial Ruhr Valley, foreign relations and trade.

2. Form a strong central police force under any pretext without the occupation authorities' consent.

3. Give west Berlin representatives at this time voting-rights in a future government. West Berlin is excluded from the proposed republic.

4. Change state borders "until the peace treaty."

5. Use any device to achieve "excessive concentration of authority" in the central government.

An article in the constitution says specifically that "weapons designed for warfare may be manufactured, transported or marketed only with permission of the federal government."

General Lucius Clay said the provision is intended to put weapons manufacture under government control, instead of in private hands, and that he considers it a "good thing."

Cocky-looking bloke, isn't he? Not exactly the kind of gent you would care to tangle with in a dark alley. And Patrick Flanagan, pride of the Lawsonian School of Tonsil Juggling, Arm Twisting and Modified Mayhem may discover that the tough looking hombre pictured above won't be a cuddly little armful when they meet in the semi final in tonight's rassle-card at Memorial Arena. For the muscular mastodon is none other than Hi Lee, towering buckaroo from Arkansas, who doesn't fiddle when he's in action. In the main bout Dangerous Dan O'Connor mixes matters with "Vlody" Talun, the Iron Pole, with Irish Tom Collins tangling with Big Ben Morgan in the opener.

Coach of McGill Says Drastic Changes Needed

Windsor, Ont., May 13. (CP) —Vic Obeck, coach of the McGill Redmen of Montreal, predicted Thursday night that the university will soon be out of the Intercollegiate Ruby Football Union unless drastic changes are made in Quebec's present setup.

McGill is on the threshold of either getting out of Intercollegiate football or changing the general Ruby setup in Quebec," he said.

Obeck was in the city to address the local branch of the McGill Graduates' Society.

He criticized the High School football setup in Quebec and said it did not produce enough good recruits to make McGill a serious contender in the Intercollegiate race.

A "new setup" would include more secondary school teams which were well versed in the Canadian game, he said. McGill draws no players from Ontario, he added.

He predicted University of Toronto Blues will win the title this year "although it will be dog-eat-dog between Blues and the University of Western Ontario Mustangs". He said Queens will have a vastly improved team but that "Toronto passing should make the difference."

McGill finished fourth in the four-team loop last season and was tied for third two years ago.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Dangerous Dan—(oops! we almost said McGraw)—O'Connor meets that other peculiarly named wrestler Whatzisface "Iron" Talun in the main bout in the Arena on Friday night. While sporting those special monikers, it is obvious to anyone who remembers either Daniel or "Vlady" that there are good reasons for the nick-names. O'Connor is the big Irishman by way of Kansas City, U.S.A., who created so much trouble and beat here last season in his bouts with Strangler Bob Wagner and Fred Atkins. Danny-boy gets the dubbing "Dangerous" because in addition to a very complete assortment of modified mayhem which he practises on all opponents the brush-it-a-hboy also always carries a bit of leather shoestring with which he tries industriously to garrote the opposition.

Several wrestlers turned down the "honor" of meeting Dangerous Danny here this week. One of them was Ray Villmer staled "I'd rather wrestle two guys on the same night than risk my neck and my circulation with that crazy Irishman." However there was no hesitation on the part of "Iron" Talun. The Polish Giant who stands a mere six feet eight inches and weighs over three hundred pounds claims to fear neither man nor beast nor fish nor feathered creature. "I take all man and cr-r-r-ush him" says the Warsaw Wrecker. Talun got the name "Iron" from a tournament in Poland in which he defeated seven men in one afternoon and evening. Here's hoping it won't take him that long in his battle with O'Connor. While it lasts it looks to be one of the wildest lumberees of this season.

Pat Flanagan who is rapidly reaching the stage of main bouts, gets his big shot in the ring at this season when he tackles Hi Lee. In the opener Irish Tom Collins will try to subdue Big Ben Morgan, the human walking mountain from Tennessee. With Morgan, Hi Lee and Talun on the card there will be the three biggest men in wrestling each with a first-class opponent.

Dan Cowley, who used to throw a mean body check in centre ice, or anywhere for that matter in a Trenton Flyer hockey uniform, is the chairman of the entertainment committee of the Quinte Tennis Club. Dan comes to bat with the statement that the club is holding a tennis round robin tournament and invites courts on May 24 which will be open to local and district players. Games get underway at 9.30 a.m.

Entries should be forwarded to Miss Margaret Williams, 226 Dufferin Avenue not later than May 21st. Although post entries will be accepted up till 10 a.m. May 24th, Rems handsome prizes will be available for the winners. Lunch will be served during the day in the club house. Spectators will be welcome, and a large crowd is expected. Events include ladies' doubles; men's doubles and mixed doubles.

Six teams will again constitute the South Hastings Baseball League this year with Rednersville, Latta, Shannonville, Canniton, Corbyville and Melrose making up the roster. The boys expect to inaugurate the season on May 24 with all teams in action. Rednersville takes on Shannonville, Latta will be at Canniton while Corbyville will be the guests of Melrose. The schedule will appear in this newspaper shortly.

NO CAPTAIN?

The New York Yankee baseball team never has a captain. Know why? The spirit of Lou Gehrig holds the captaincy. He was captain when what proved to be his fatal illness removed him from the line-up. Ed Barrow, when general manager, and Joe McCarthy, team manager, said there would never be another captain. Their successors have respected the idea.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

The correct golf grip is unlike any other grip in sports. The idea in the golf grip is to so position the hands that they automatically themselves to the demands of a golf swing. To accomplish this the hands are so overlapped or interlocked that the two hands operate as a single tool. The left hand grips the handle as pictured at the top. The handle, as you see, has passed diagonally across the palm of the hand from the hook of the left forefinger. Then the right hand is positioned over the left with the little finger of the right hand overlapping the forefinger of the left hand. As in the left hand, the club handle passes diagonally across the right hand to the hook formed by the right forefinger. The tip of the right forefinger touches the inside of the tip of the right thumb. The "V's" formed by the junctura of the thumbs and forefinger point over the right shoulder when you're addressing the ball. Master this grip and you possess one of the fundamentals of a good golf swing.—Copyright 1949, John F. Dille Co.)

Mel Parnell's Pitching Only Bright Spot in the Dreary Showing of Boston Red Sox

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Mel Parnell's pitching is the only bright spot in the dreary Spring showing of Boston Red Sox.

Down south the wise guys said "Boston can't possibly get off as slowly as last year." They were wrong.

Jack Kramer, who copped 11 straight last Summer, still is looking for No. 1. So is Joe Dobson, the vet who was thirty only consistent winner last Spring.

Manager Joe McCarthy's only steady workman.

Parnell struck out 11 Chicago White Sox hitters Thursday but needed an 11th inning homer by Vern Stephens to get off the hook 3-2. It was his fourth victory.

Washington's nine-game winning streak finally was snapped by Detroit's Virgil Trucks, 2-1. Don Kolloway, who joined the Tigers Sunday in a trade with Chicago, blasted two doubles and a triple off Walt Masterson. Truck's five-hitter was his fifth triumph of the season.

Browns Rout Bristle

The St. Louis Browns bisected three home runs to rout Leo Bristle and the Philadelphia A's, 9-3, for their third straight following a 10-game losing string.

Dick Kokos, Don Dillinger and Ed Pellagrini hit Bristle's home run ball out of the park. Cliff Fannin was the winner.

New York Yankees and Cleveland were not scheduled.

Cincinnati, which stopped the New York Giants' win surge after seven in a row, made it two straight on a 3-0 shutout by Ken Raffensberger. He held the powerhitting Giants to four singles dropping them into a first place tie with the Boston Braves whose scheduled game with St. Louis was postponed because of wet grounds.

Clint Hartung, who had won his first four was clipped for eight hits and all the Cincinnati runs in his eight-inning stretch.

Ralph Branca became the National League's first five-game winner with an 11-6 verdict over Pittsburgh. The unbeaten Brooklyn ace was hit freely throughout the game but outlasted Hal Gregg and four successors. Roy Campanella hit his fifth homer off Gregg.

Hank Borowy, traded to Philadelphia Phillies by Chicago last Winter, whipped his old club mates the first time he faced them, 4-3. Bob Rush gave up only six hits but was short by Hal Jeffcoat's costly error on Del Ennis' fly that set up the winning score in the sixth.

Tom Poholsky Posts Fifth Win Without Defeat

(By The Associated Press)

Tom Poholsky, hefty Rochester pitcher, is the Red Wings' "win-ner book" entry for the International League's rookie-of-the-year honor.

The 200-pound, 19-year-old right-hander from Detroit posted his fifth victory in as many outings Thursday night in beating the Syracuse Chiefs, 15-1. Poholsky yielded ten hits but as usual he was tough with men on base.

Russ Derry featured the attack against Johnny Hetki and Mike Schultz with his seventh homer, a grand slam drive in the fourth inning that keynoted a six run rally. Catcher Jim Bucha also homered for Rochester.

The victory enabled the Wings to move from fourth to second place with the Buffalo Bisons, erstwhile runner-up, dropping to fourth.

Buffalo dropped a 3-2 decision to the last place Newark Bears, getting only two hits off right-hander Joe Valenzuela.

The Bears jumped on Ernie Koy for three runs in the second inning when Bud Heslet tracked a two run homer. They pushed across the winning run in the fourth on Ed Miller's single and errors by Gene Markland and Billy Demars.

Baltimore Orioles smashed Toronto Maple Leafs 9-3. Bryan Stephens scattered the safeties in posting his second triumph.

Al Porto, who hurled a seven-inning no-hitter Saturday, started for the Leafs and after yielding two runs in the first inning departed in the fourth during a four run Baltimore rally.

The scheduled game between the pace-setting Jersey City Giants and the third place Montreal Royals was postponed because of rain.

Palmer Heads 15 Professionals In Round Robin

(By The Canadian Press)

At New Rochelle, N.Y., Johnny Palmer of West Baden, N.C., shot a two-under-par 70 over the Wykagyl Country Club course Thursday to port a point total of plus 14 and take the first over 15 fellow professionals after the first round of the Goodall Round Robin Tournament.

Skip Alexander of Lexington, N.C., and Jim Turnesa of Briarcliff, N.Y., each posted a 71 to tie for second in the standings with plus 11 each.

Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Texas, and Cary Middlecoff of Memphis shot the day's two best scores, a pair of sparkling 69s, yet could do no better than tie in the next notch, each with plus 9. They ran into tougher opposition than the leaders.

Play was in foursomes, with each player in a group matching his total score against that of his three opponents for the round. Five such rounds will be played, the last scheduled on Sunday.

Nattily attired in their blue blazers, 16 players and five officials of the Newcastle United soccer team left London Thursday for their tour of Canada and the United States. Catching the boat train for the liner Queen Mary, which sails from Southampton today, the players said they are looking forward to their trans-Dominion visit "where we hear they play a pretty stiff game."

The club, which finished fourth in the first division of the English League, will play its first game of the Canadian tour in Montreal May 19.

Boston Braves Thursday night cut their roster to the 25-player limit, six days ahead of the May 18 deadline. Pitcher Johnny Beazley was sent to the St. Petersburg club of the Florida International League on 24-hour recall, and Jeff Heath, a starting outfielder, was placed on the disabled list. Heath suffered a broken ankle last year. The Braves announced he would visit farm clubs and instruct younger players in batting.

Bob Lemon, star Cleveland Indian right-hander, suffered a torn rib cartilage and probably will not pitch for 10 days, Dr. Edward B. Castle Tribe physician, reported Thursday at Cleveland. Castle said the injury which forced Lemon out of Wednesday night's game after he had pitched to only one batter was the tearing loose of cartilage supporting the 12th or "floating" rib.

Vince Foster, hailed as the hottest thing since Rocky Graziano rocketed to fame, returns to Madison Square Garden tonight to face Charlie Fusari in a 10-round welterweight bout.

Fusari, a stand-up blond boxer from Irvington, N.J., probably will be a slight 5-6 favorite by ring time over the stiff punching newcomer from Omaha, Neb. It has been four months since Foster came out of the west to knock out favored Tony Pellone in a dazzling upset, Jan. 14, but the fans have not forgotten his deadly punching power.

Horsemen Fight Ruling Against Singles Trainers

Toronto, May 13 — (CP)—Canadian and United States horsemen were faced today with an order instructing them not to enter their horses in Saturday racing at Toronto's Dufferin Park.

The instructions came early today from George Hardy, representing the Horsemens' Benevolent and Protective Association.

Hardy said he had been instructed by Dan Chappell, president of the H. B. P. A. in the United States, to "fight to the finish" a ruling by the Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations which would deny licenses to trainers handling only one horse.

Hardy added: "Any American horseman who enters for Saturday's races is warned that he is acting in contravention of the expressed instructions of the H. B. P. A. parent body in the United States."

The controversy, which threatens to affect the Ontario racing season this year, was started with a unanimous decision Wednesday by the Canadian branch of the H. B. P. A. to strike against the ruling of the I. C. R. A.

Willie Morrissey of Toronto, Canadian president of the horsemens' group, said that if the ruling isn't changed "there will be no racing at Dufferin Park Saturday."

Sticking up for the one - horse trainers, Morrissey declared the I. C. R. A. "foolishly put in a law which will put men out of work . . . the small men are the backbone of racing."

James Heffering, chairman of the I. C. R. A. which controls racetracks in Ontario, countered with: "There will be no change in the ruling as long as I sit here." Dufferin May Close Heffering said entries will be taken today at Dufferin for Saturday "and if no entries are received, we'll close . . . this goes for all I. C. R. A. tracks." That would include Dufferin, Thorncliffe, Woodbine and Long Branch in Toronto, Hamilton, Fort Erie and Stamford Park in Niagara Falls.

Hardy's ban on all entries for Dufferin Saturday came hard on the heels of a statement to the press by Heffering last night.

The I. C. R. A. chairman said American trainers in Toronto had been told by Bob Reid, telephoning from Columbus, Ohio, that they could enter their horses at Dufferin Saturday "with the backing of our organization." Reid is legal representative of the H. B. P. A. in the United States.

Hardy declared his order countermanded any such telephoned instructions to American horsemen at Dufferin.

Newcomers Spark Soccer Interest In Dominion

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Soccer in Canada is booming, thanks partly to newcomers to the Dominion.

Soccer followers say the reason for the sport's increasing drawing capacity at the turnstiles stems from the arrival in Canada since the war of many persons whose national sport is soccer. To increase further its popularity, top international teams will be imported this summer to tour Canada.

Sponsors of the tours hope extra bleachers at the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand in Toronto will help handle an estimated crowd of 30,000 for a June 15 game between Sweden and Newcastle United.

If such a crowd materializes, it will set a Canadian record for sports spectacles other than race tracks.

This match has been recognized as an international tilt by English and Swedish football associations and approved by the governing body of world soccer.

Among the teams that are coming or are here now are Belfast Celtic, runner-up in the Irish Senior League this year; Newcastle United, which finished third this year in the English League, first division; Sweden, five of whose players were on the team that won the Olympic last year; and the Scottish International team, an squad estimated to have $1,237,000 worth of players.

Not only have immigrants led to an upsurge in popularity for the game, they have also improved its calibre.

But the stars are not all foreign-born. Four members of the all-star Ontario team meeting Newcastle United in Toronto May 24 are Canadian-born.

Senators Given Welcome Home After Great Trip

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The baseballing Washington Senators crept out of town 13 days ago as unnoticed as so many government clerks.

They come back today to a rousing welcome, despite a 3-1 defeat by Detroit Thursday which snapped a sizzling nine-game winning streak.

On their schedule:

A parade down Pennsylvania Avenue (the same street used by President Truman, another underdog who showed surprising strength.

They were to be given the keys to the city, and a real Senator, Millard Tydings (Dem. Md.) was to greet them.

Washington fans are asking:

Are the Senators really a much better ball club than the seventh place usually reserved for them? Or are they a flower that blooms in the spring—and wilts before the solid hits of July and August?

Don Dimaggio Pounding Pill At .365 Clip

Chicago, May 13 — (AP) — In a way, it's kind of embarrassing for Dominic DiMaggio to be hitting .365.

"The fans read the sports pages," said the Boston Red Sox centerfielder, "and probably say to themselves: 'Well, I see where Ol' Joe DiMaggio's still up there — wonder when he was traded to Boston.'

Dandy Dom, the only DiMag still making big league headlines now that Joltin' Joe is convalescing, admits "It's nice to be on top" for a change, instead of just being Joe's brother.

The Boston leadoff man hasn't changed his bat, his stance or his style.

"I hit a lot of balls hard last year, but they were caught," he explained. "Now, I'm getting a few breaks. You gotta be lucky. After all, the difference between a .290 hitter and a .350 hitter often is where a few balls fall out of reach."

DiMaggio batted .301 in his first Red Sox season, 1940, and had a .316 average in 1946, Boston's most recent pennant season.

The rumor that our ancestors were more rugged is nothing but a lot of sentimental gargle. Anybody with an ounce of sense knows they did not even have contract bridge in those days.

They talk about the covered wagon, as if it were more courageous than driving the highways in an auto. Why, is some bridge clubs a woman will not have a baby until she is dummy.

Look back not more than 15 years or so. Remember the fuss some ancient used to make over bidding a grand slam? Nowadays nights it is not even worth a mention unless some unexpected play is involved.

In the recent Battle of the Sexes match came this deal:

NORTH
♠K 5 3
♥A 10 6 4
♦A K 10 7 6 4
WEST	EAST
♠7 6 4	♠Q J 10 9
♥Q 7	♥8 5
♦None	♦9 8 6 3 2
♣Q J 9 8	♣5 3
7 6 4	None
♥K J
♦Q J 9 5
♣A K 10 3 2

The bids go like this:

South	North
4 ♠	3 D
4 NT	6 H
7 D or 7 NT

The immediate one jump assist in diamonds guarantees no less than six tricks with two sure among them. This promptly tells the south hand they have enough tricks to look for slam.

South has a rebiddable club suit that was now too inconvenient to show. It was more necessary for him to learn about aces and kings. Four no-trump is the signal for asking such information.

In answer to four no-trump, six hearts is Kibitzer convention signal showing two aces and two kings. This tells south they have all the aces and kings. Grand slam is the natural result.

Seven diamonds is defeated with a club lead that east ruffs. The bid of seven no-trump, however, is a cinch with the correct play. It is made with an inverted squeeze.

Have west lead a club and apply the pressure.

Hollywood, May 13 (AP) — Dick Powell and June Allyson may join Mr. and Mrs. teams on the screen.

Powell wasn't able to obtain his wife's services for his own film, "Mrs. Mike." But he reports that her studio has sent him scripts with the idea of a teaming with his wife.

The Powells made one film appearance together, a few years before they were married. It was an army wartime musical called "Meet the People."

Odd Notes

Walt Disney leaves next month for Britain, where he'll film "Treasure Island." It will be his first picture with no cartooning. Bobby Driscoll will star, backed with an all-British cast . . .

Strange guy, that Crosby. Bing remained 2 1-2 hours at a reception for the San Francisco press during "Riding High" locations. But he continues to give the brush off to the Hollywood press.

Other Bits

"I was a Male War Bride" is a strong contender for long-run honors. It started last September and still has three or four weeks to go.

Lex Barker's wife, Arlene Dahl, is another reason why United States companies are souring on production abroad.

William Powell's son is working in the financial department at a studio. I asked Powell on the "Sandwagon" set how he last night. "Oh, he's become an actor."

"I guess the same way that a drunkard's son usually doesn't turn out to be a drunkard," he answered.

AT THE CAPITOL — Eleven-year-old Dean Stockwell, widely acclaimed for his portrayals in "The Green Years" and "Gentleman's Agreement," is shown above with Jean Stockwell, who is starring in "Down to the Sea in Ships," new 20th.-Century-Fox adventure film, now showing at the Capitol Theatre, today and Saturday. On the same program a new Three Stooges comedy. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00.

DIES OF BURNS

London, Ont., May 13 — (CP) Mrs. Adella Smyth, 60, died in hospital today from burns suffered late Thursday in a flash fire in the dining room of her home. The fire was believed to have been caused by a cleaning fluid igniting through contact with an electric socket.

Authorities said the woman was cleaning the floor with a solvent mixture, and apparently pulled a radio plug from a floor socket.

Ma sighed a big sigh to herself, saying to pop, My, of all the slow days, this has been the slowest.

Do you mean the house didn't catch on fire even once? pop said, and ma said, I mean not a single think happened to break the same old routine like a puppet on a treadmill, and if you possess a spark of fellow feeling you'll take me to the movie where I'll see a little human intrist even if I dont experience it in my own life and person.

But my dear, life is full of little items of human intrist, pop said. All you have to do is sit down comfortably and read about here about a man that was attacked by a dead deer. I'll read it to you, he said.

Which he did, being "Sol Perkett of Cornerville shot a deer last season and had the head mounted, and yesterday the critter took a strange revenge by falling off the wall and running an auto through the fleshy part of Perkett's rite leg." Now I'll find one for you to reed me, pop said.

Never mind, ma said; I haven't the slightest intrist in unknown deer hunters that I never heard of before, and id still be uninterested even if they shot a prehistoric dinnosorriss, she said, and pop said, But for Peet sake, you never heard of the caracters in a movie before, either.

How can you make such a ridiculus statement? ma said, I have seen them in dozzens of pictures and I'm always reading of their private affairs in the papers and movie magazines, she said, and pop said, You win, my dear, let's go and see what your friends are up to this evening.

And he changed his slippers to his shoes and they went to the movies.

TIPPIE AND "CAP" STUBBS — By Arthur Forwell—Ellison Hoover

Banner Lacrosse Year Forecast By OLA Officials

Toronto, May 13 (CP)— What has been forecast as a record season for the Ontario Lacrosse Association will get under way May 17 at Owen Sound with Brampton Excelsiors pitted against Owen Sound Crescents.

Rosla officials base their prediction of a banner year on steadily increasing interest in the sport, the new arenas built in several centres and the unprecedented promotion of minor groups in junior, juvenile, midget and peewee divisions.

Senior clubs have been preparing for weeks for the opening of their 36-game schedule and several will be bolstered by new stars this year.

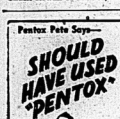
Hamilton Tigers, Mann Cup winners last year, will be without the services of coach Joe Cheevers who has retired, but hope to get Red Gordon of Orillia and Barney Welch back from St. Catharines.

Owen Sound will have Don Ashley with Weston last summer, Curly Mason of Fergus, Arnold (Onion) Smith and Mosher Grant from Hamilton; Tony Capola of the Tigers, and Bob Thorpe, St. Catharines star two years ago, are on the negotiation list. Archie Wood, recently New Westminster Adanacs star will be donning Brampton livery.

The league again this year will be composed of seven teams, with Peterborough entering for the first last year —moving into the spot vacated by Niagara Falls who dropped back to intermediate. None in Senior "B"

Chuck Stowan of Minico, O.L.A. secretary treasurer, says no clubs have yet entered the senior B division, but half a dozen intermediate circuits are expected to operate.

Toledo, O., Detroit, Mich., Windsor, Sarnia, Wallaceburg, and possibly Chatham, will make up a border cities loop. A southern Ontario group will include Brantford, Ohsweken, Port Dover, Dundas and Norval, while Hespeler, Fergus, Orangeville and North Peel are likely starters in a central circuit.



Queries have been received from other points such as Stratford, Midland, Huntsville, Port Hope, Brooklin, Havelock, Peterborough and Campbellford, and O.L.A. officials are confident of forming leagues there in the near future.

Owen Sound, Brampton, St. Catharines, Weston, Minico and Hamilton will again make up a junior circuit and about 100 minor teams are expected in other divisions.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

He said yesterday that there was no criminal negligence in the deaths of business men Harry G. Barenbrugge, 37, of Elmira, and Stuart M. Johnson, 41, of Mansfield, Pa. Their light plane crashed en route from Buffalo to Montreal March 15.

TENSE MOMENT

A tense moment in the sixth game of the Brandon Wheat Kings – Montreal Royals series for the Memorial Cup at Brandon came in the second period when a Brandon fan became embroiled with a number of the Royals. The spectator, who was ousted from the rink, sought a fight with Montreal's Gordie Knutson (10),who was in the penalty box with Brandon's Bob Crystal. Other Royals came to the rescue of their teammate and are shown in this photo as the trouble started; Gord Armstrong (5), Matt Benoit (7), Lou Appleby (3) and Neil Langille (9). Sole Brandon player visible is Glen Son.

Trainer Hopes To Saddle Winner On First Try

Baltimore, May 13 (AP)— Trainer Tom Rodrock is hoping to have "beginner's luck" in the Preakness tomorrow.

Tom has been training horses since 1912, but stables such as Rodford, Midland, Huntsville, Port Hope, Brooklin, Havelock, Peterborough and Campbellford, and O.L.A. officials are confident of forming leagues there in the near future.

Owen Sound, Brampton, St. Catharines, Weston, Minico and Hamilton will again make up a junior circuit and about 100 minor teams are expected in other divisions.

Sun Bahram is "going to have to run" against the three Preakness field but Rodrock feels the colt is ready for it. Sun Bahram got a taste of two of tomorrow's probable starters at Havre De Grace.

Sun Bahram was beaten a nose by the Pincher in the Chesapeake trial in which Noble Impulse, one of the likely Preakness starters, was fifth. In the Chesapeake Stakes(won by Capot, a probably favorite tomorrow, Sun Bahram wound up fifth but Rodrock blames himself and not the colt for that.

"I took the blinkers off him for the first time and he ran bad," Tom said. "The next race, last week at Havre De Grace, I put 'em back on and he won by two lengths."

Sun Bahram, owned by Mrs. Eban H. Ellison, Jr., is a son of Bahram and Sunlico. He won in the port 12 times this year, being out of the money only twice are winning 12 times. He started three times as a 2-year-old, winning twice.

Sun Bahram, Noble Impulse, Ponder, winner of the Kentucky Derby, and Capot are among nine entries expected to be made today.

The others set to make the journey to the post at 5:15 p.m. EDT are King Ranch's Curandero, Elsbet's Palestinian, Clifford Moore's' Old Rockport and Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Model Cadet.

Eight starters will make the gross value of the Preakness $100,970.

Ace RCAF Pilot 1948 Winner Of McKee Trophy

Ottawa, May 13 (CP)—An ace R.C.A.F. pilot with more than 2,000 hours flying on east-coast rescue trips is the 1948 winner of the McKee Trophy, awarded annually for "outstanding service in advancement of aviation in Canada."

He is FO. R. B. West of Canning, N.S. He also holds the Distinguished Flying Cross for wartime operations on the east coast and the Air Force Cross for two hazardous rescue flights to isolated Quebec outposts last year.

The big silver-and-marble trophy has been given annually since 1927 by Dalzell McKee of Pittsburgh, Pa., a wealthy aviator who in 1928 made the first seaplane flight across Canada.

McKee is the third R.C.A.F. winner of the award. Others were Group Capt. C. L. Leigh, now commander of the R C A F.'s Vancouver headquarters, and Group Capt. E. G. Fullerton, now retired. Capt. B. A. Rawson of Trans-Canada Air Lines was 1947 winner.

In January 1948 he flew from Halifax to Harrington Harbor, on the lonely north shore of the St. Lawrence River, to evacuate a seriously-ill woman and flew her to Goose Bay, Labrador, despite snow, fog, and heavy icing. From Goose Bay he flew to Mutton Bay, Labrador, to evacuate another sick woman.

FO. West, now on recruiting duties at Rivers, Man., flew special mission into Canada's far north in 1948 and flew emergency food equipment to British Columbia during the serious spring floods that year. In June, 1948, he carried out special "rain-making" flights north of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., which brought rain to drought-stricken areas there.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 13 (AP) — Story out of Jersey City is that the end of the Frank Hague political regime also means the end of the Little Giants . . . seems the ball club has been avoiding red ink by means of a remarkably low rent for Roosevelt Stadium and an amazingly high opening-day ticket sale . . . if that deal is called off, the parent New York Giants are said to be ready to give up... Over in Newark the Bears are ready to give up, period. They just can't attract enough cash customers.

A strange thing about the situation, one International League, points out is that the New York clubs which own these teams make tremendous efforts to attract New Jersey customers . . . "It's much the same in Columbus, Ohio," our informant added. "Bill Veeck puts on stunts that draw fans to Cleveland. So did the Cleveland football and baseball clubs. The result is the Columbus fans go there instead of to home games." . . . The heck of it is none of these teams has any place to move the franchises.

Halg and Haig

Walter Hagen, five times winner of the P.G.A. golf title, will be only a spectator at this year's PGA championship at Richmond, Va... It was the Haig you remember who belted one from the first tee at the Belle Meade tournament in Washington a couple of years ago. Said Haig to Walter Jr., and said "You take it from here son."

Brandon Kings Even Series With Montreal Royals

Brandon, Man., May 13. (CP) —Montreal Royals and Brandon Wheat Kings are back on even terms in their battle for the Memorial Cup —highest honour in Canadian Junior hockey—and will fight it out in the final game at Winnipeg Monday night.

Ernest Kings, fighting an uphill battle in the last two contests, forced the eighth game in what originally was scheduled as a best-of-seven series when they trounced the Royals 5-1 here on Thursday night before more than 4,800 fans. The victory-wheat Kings' second straight—levelled the count at three wins apiece, with one game tied in overtime.

Frank King, fast rushing Brandon captain, added to his individual scoring by blasting in one counter and assisting on two others. He now has scored six goals and assisted five times for 11 points to tied marksmen of both clubs by a wide margin in the series.

Brandon's other goals were evenly divided among Alf Francis, Reggie Abbott, Joe Crysler and Mac Beaton. Royals lone counter went to Neal Langill.

For the first time in the series, Brandon skated off the ice at the end of the first period with a lead, going ahead 1-0 on Francis' goal.

The teams split goals in the middle session, with the driving Wheat Kings pumped home three counters without a reply in the final frame to gain their fourgoal margin.

Each team drew six penalties, Brandon drawing majors to each. Brandon outshot Royals 32-27 as they carried the play throughout most of the first period when they threw 17 shots at slim Bobby Bleau, Royal goaltender.

Ray Frederick, Brandon goalie and star of game No. 4, had a comparatively easy time in the final frame, only making six saves but his work in the first two periods was outstanding.

The Montrealers started off speedily in the last period in an effort to gain a tie which would have given them the series on points, but Goalie Bill Rattray off for tripping King and Beaton added two more within 25 seconds of each other.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

In spite of all Sonny Boy had said about Sally sleeping in the mornings, when I developed a cold she insisted upon preparing trays for me. Only one who has eaten grapefruit from the half shell cut the wrong way can appreciate my experience. Julee ran down my arms and dripped off my elbows as, propped up in bed, I attempted to remove the wrong-way-Corrigan fruit from its lengthwise sections. I asked Sally to bring a grapefruit to my room and I showed her how to cut it, not from pole to pole, but around the equator.

"Oh, that way!" Next day it was cut and to end again.

"Sally—" I began reprovingly.

She laughed gaily. "I never was any good at arithmetic."

She thought some gelatin would be just right for my dinner. I didn't get the dessert that night for supper, and I didn't have it the next day. The third day I was able to go downstairs. "Oh, it isn't set yet," Sally said.

"Did you bring the water to a boil?"

"Right to here," Sally said, pointing to the level on the cup, and paying no attention to my question. I yielded to her superior charm. While I had the dessert on the stove coming to a boil, I walked to the window to look out. On the sill in the full sunlight was a bowl of sliced greens.

"What's this?" I asked.

"A surprise for your dinner, I love wilted lettuce, don't you?"

What Sally loved was surprises, and since she had bulldog blood, her failures didn't vanquish her enthusiasm; they only spurred her to new efforts. The matter of the gelatin must have rankled, for a few days later she heard there was some in stock at the Commissary and she had Sonny bring home a package. I heard her humming in the kitchen and soon she came to tell me there was a lovely cream mold for me in the refrigerator, and it would be ready for our dinner that night . . . But it wasn't. It was just as loose as the last batch.

Sally looked so puzzled and discouraged that I asked her how she had made it.

"Like you told me. I boiled the water. Hard. Then I mixed it. I even rinsed out the mold with cold water."

"Did you empty it before you poured in the mixture?"

"Oh, yes. But it didn't fill the mold so I had to add more water." She smiled happily at her ingenuity.

Sally thought washing was fun and she begged me to show her how to run the machine. It seemed wiser to give her instruction than to let her break loose alone. I showed her the rudiments of washing. But I must have overlooked explaining some things.

"How come," she asked me when I put bluing in the water, "the clothes come out yellow?"

"You must have had something yellow in, too."

"No. Just the sheets and pillow slips."

"Are you sure?"

At this, Sally grew less sure of herself. "There were only two little pairs of socks," she confessed.

"Yellow socks?" I suggested.

She nodded her head.

The next week's washing took on a rosy hue, even though this time Sally had placed it exact, as she told me, and knowing much much better than to wash the socks with linens, she had set them aside to do last.

"What did you do first?" asked, knowing from the tiqi that something was wrong.

She explained that one of her friends had told her how she washed her white things by placing them in the machine with luke-warm water — just a little—and mild soap flakes. But Sally, not being wasteful like her friend, had added hot water to the luke-warm water when the silks were done, and had then gone on with the washing.

"Wasn't the water pink from your silk things?" I asked.

"I don't think so," she said, "I couldn't see any pink. There was a pile of suds on top. Nice, creamy soapsuds."

So now we had faintly pink linen. Before our range included green and rose and the lesser-to-be - desired shades (Sally had a grey sweater), I forbade her to help any further.

"Use the machine for your own things any time you want to," I said, "but under no circumstances are you to help me."

She received this ultimatum with resignation, with a look that said, "Gratitude lies not in the human heart; Columbus died in chains."

Her next good deed was aimed at me alone. It was my day at the Red Cross sewing room. I left the house early and returned late, tired as a dog bent over a sewing machine always left me. No one was home when I returned the house. Yet I could hear a pounding and thumpling going on in the kitchen. I opened the door and immediately was set upon by a mad wraith. It was white, about the size of a small child. It flailed the air with its thin arms, jumped furiously from floor to table top to floor to sink to floor to chair to floor to stove to floor to table top.

It finally perched a moment. Heavens above! It was a turkey! A plucked turkey!

Now I've seen nudes, plain and fancy, bewitching and embarrassed, but I never saw one as naked as this one, or as hysterical. It was again in the crazy jumping from floor to stove to floor, making a horrible gobbling noise in its throat. I backed out of the kitchen. I snatched the phone off the hook and tried to think of the number of the butcher, of the fire department, of the police department. I had a one - turkey riot on my hands.

While I stood at the phone, Sally bounced in. "Guess what!" she cried, beaming. "I have a surprise for you! A woman from the country brought in a turkey, a great big one." Sally reached her arms to show me how big. "She said you bought it at Christmas time but asked her to keep it on the hoof until you sent for it. But she's going away. So she delivered all the remaining birds alive to her customers who had ordered them held so they could kill them when they wanted them to eat." Bursting with pride, she concluded, "I fixed it for you. It's all ready to cook. I intended to be home before you returned, but I went out for a little air . . . Phew, turkeys smell awful!" She wrinkled up her nose prettily. "And you beat me to it."

"Sally," I pinned her with my eye, "my evil eye, "how did you make that turkey hold still while you plucked it"?

"I killed it," she said competently. "I didn't want to make a mess all over everything, so I ping its head off. And I didn't think I could wring its neck. I'm not strong enough. I killed it a nice, quiet way. I chloroformed it."

March came in like a lion, and so did Roger, as though he'd been gone three hours instead of three months. As usual, I was getting dinner when the phone rang and a blithe voice said, "How's condition?"

Like an Oriental, I deprecated our humble abode, our humble service, our humble fare.

I said the house was full of people, four in the basement, two in the guest room.

"Still home?" he asked.

"No, not yet. But we're expecting him."

Roger drew an easy breath. "That's perfect. Be right down."

I appealed to Rob. "Don't worry, Toots," he reassured me. "We got an exclusive listing in the office today on a furnished house. I'll cinch it for Roger." I made Rob phone the owner right away to tell her it was rented. I felt saved. When Roger drove up in a staff car, chauffered by a Wac, I was almost cordial.

"It's good to be home," he boomed, with an admiring eye on his officer's cap. He hung it with his coat in the vestibule closet, carried his bags up to Bill's room, and spent a minute chatting with Sonny and Sally who had come out in the hall to see what all the racket was about. He told them how pleasant it was to have them aboard. He called on the boys in the basement, welcoming them to his old quarters, and invited them to join us upstairs for dinner.

Robbie went over to the piano to play, but before he struck a note, he remembered about the house. "Oh, Roger, I've got good news for you. A very comfortable furnished house was listed with us today."

Instead of leaping into the air and yelling "Whoopee!" as we expected—because any house, especially furnished, were practically non-existent—Roger leaned forward, gazed thoughtfully into the fire, blank plenty of time to weigh the matter, but looked guardedly where the house was located. Robbie gave the address Roger sank back in his chair and smiled tolerantly. "Wrong side of town."

"Wrong side of town, my foot!" Rob jarred. "There's no such thing now as a wrong side of town. A house is a house. And you're lucky if the roof doesn't leak."

"I'll take it," John said, will the eagerness we had hoped for from Roger.

"You forgot," Roger said patiently to Rob, ignoring the other "I have two young children."

"Babies!" Rob roared. "What difference does it make when they live?"

"These are formative years" Roger reminded him. "It makes a very great deal or difference.'

"It doesn't to me," John sall. "I'll rent it sight unseen."

Constable Dale Richardson, known as the "Lone Ranger of Houstc, Texas," a one-man vice squad who has dedicated himself to putting gamblers out of business in his nde of the woods and other necks adjacent, is shown in action here. At left, he is whanging away on a pinball machine in a Houston hostelry. At right, he relaxes among the debris he creat. A U.S. grand jury is investiRichardson, whose charges that gamble are trying to buy him off or frame him into stopping his raids. He, in turn, is accused of attemptin a shakedown.—Central Press Canadian.

Cheques Without Samps Can Mean Posecution

Clawa, May 13 (CP)— That lastcheque you wrote—the one youdidn't put a stamp on—could get you in trouble.

Because that sort of thing is against the law.

The law, revenue department officials explained, requires that thperson who writes the cheque mus pay the tax of three cents on cheques up to $100 and six cents for cheques of more than $100.

The tax must be paid before the cheque is cashed. So you justcan't make out the cheque for an extra three cents and let it go at that. You may have intended the extra three cents as the tax- but you didn't actually pay it.

The stamp tax has been on cheques, purely as a revenue measure, for some 25 years and there have been prosecutions for not putting stamps on when the cheque is written. Conviction carries a fine of $10, but prosecutions are "few and far between," an official said.

That means you don't have to accept a cheque for payment unless there's a stamp on it when you get it. Judge T. R. Barton ruled in Toronto yesterday, in what was believed to be the first legal decision of its kind, that an unstamped cheque doesn't constitute a payment. A landlord was trying to evict a tenant because, he said, she hadn't paid her rent. The tenant had given the landlord an unstamped cheque for one month's rent, but the judge ruled that wasn't good enough and ordered the eviction. The tenant, Mrs. Lillian Baxter, said she will appeal. She can't be evicted until after the appeal is heard.

If someone does give you an unstamped cheque, you can't strictly speaking—take it to the bank, give the teller three cents and have him put on a stamp. Because then the wrong person pays the tax. The law says it's to be paid by the person who writes— not the person who cashes—the cheque.

The revenue department doesn't go around looking for people to prosecute. It gets the money regardless of who pays it. And it can't get a conviction unless it has an unstamped cheque. But the department is forced to prosecute when someone presents it with an unstamped cheque and asks for a prosecution.

PRIME MINISTER CAMPAIGNING ON GOVT. RECORD

St. Laurent Claims There "Are No Great Issues of Policy" in Election

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prime Minister St. Laurent made it clear Friday night that he is campaigning for Canada's June 27 general election on the record of his Liberal administration.

Approaching the half-way mark of his Maritime campaign, he told a political rally at Lunenburg, N.S., there are "no great issues of policy" in this election because his opponents have "no policy of their own". He said the only big issue is how the people feel about the record of the government.

But Opposition Prew, Progressive Conservative leader, had other ideas about issues.

Swinging through Newfoundland, the first national leader to visit the new, tenth province, he said at the capital city of St. John's that the Liberals had failed to tackle the country's dependency and unemployment and promised that a Progressive Conservative government would seek to make the dollar and the pound convertible.

At the developing campaign headquarters in the east end of its first in-the-hustings week, Solon Low, Social Credit leader, and Ernest Edmonton party advocates control by the Alberta government of the natural gas and oil reservation of Alberta's natural gas and oil resources. Only in this way would the needs of the province be served, he said.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader in Ottawa, said the party's objectives, told the operators of small businesses they need have no fear of the C.C.F.

The C.C.F., he said, called only for nationalization of certain basic industries, including banking, power, iron and steel, transportation, meat packing and farm-implement manufacturing.

Defends Trade Record

Mr. St. Laurent criticized what he felt was a lack of policy by the Progressive Conservatives, defended the government's trade record and said there was good reason to expect that new trading arrangements, advantageous to both countries, will be worked out with the United States.

Mr. Low told Bell Island, Nfld., and promised that a Progressive Conservative government, while it would not change the educational system, would try to solve the problem by making funds available.

Hanmer said the government's trade policies, he said there has been a staggering and alarming drop in export shipments.

In Montreal, Liberal headquarters announced that Finance Minister Abbott will run again in St. Antoine-Westmount. It had been reported he might contest another constituency.

BULLDOZERS DIG THRU DEEP OOZE TO CLEAR TUNNEL

Cargo of Chemicals Blew up Friday

New York, May 14 — (AP) — Bulldozers scraped through deep ooze and matted wreckage today to clear the blast-seared Holland tunnel for its daily load of 46,000 cars and trucks.

A big truck, rolling toward New York with a cargo of chemicals, blew up Friday morning. It spewed fire and poisonous gas through 300 feet of the traffic-clogged tunnel.

However, the tunnel was expected to be ready for normal operations by late this afternoon. Damage may total $1,000,000.

Repairmen said 250 feet of the tunnel's inner ceiling would have to be replaced.

New Jersey authorities sought to determine if criminal negligence led to the concentrated destruction on the underwater highway that links New York and New Jersey beneath the Hudson River.

Hoover, the cause of the blast could not be pinpointed in the welter of debris.

Thirty-eight persons, mostly firemen and tunnel workers, collapsed or staggered groggily from the tunnel's smoke-fogged depths during a five-hour battle with fire and flames.

Twenty-six were taken to hospitals with shock or gas poisoning. None was reported in danger.

Experts said only the 84 powerful fireboats that sprayed 3,000 gas fumes from building up a blanket that might have ignited the tunnel into a deadly gas chamber.

At least 23 trucks rumbled to an abrupt halt in bumper-to-bumper confusion as a mushroom of fire signalled the explosion.

Framework Melted

The intense heat fused some of them together, melting the metal frameworks into an almost solid mass of wreckage.

Their cargoes of meat, rags, chemicals, butter and eggs were scattered in the fiery shrieking mess. It lay ankle-deep on the floor of the tunnel's east-bound tube, through which vehicles travel from Jersey City to Lower Manhattan.

Panic-stricken private motorists abandoned their cars and stumbled for the tunnel exits, coughing and choking in the acrid, smarting eyes.

The third, two miles long and 93 feet under the Hudson, was completed in 1920. Cost was $48,000,000, and is insured for $60,000,000.

The port of New York authority said damage would run from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Edmund Tyndall, 46, was driving the truck of chemicals for a Brooklyn pier for shipment to Europe. He escaped unhurt and was questioned last night in a hospital.

Carbon disulphide is not supposed to go through the tunnel without a tank car, but Northern ware containers holding no more than a gallon, the port authority said, a load of the chemical is not supposed to exceed 100 gallons.

Tokyo, May 14 — (AP)—The National Federation of Coal Miners' Unions today announced that 450,000 miners will go on strike at midnight throughout Japan. The 48-hour walk-out is protest to an attempt by mine operators to reduce wages about 20 per cent.

Municipal By-Law Catastrophe For Gaston Dallaire and Missus

Quebec, May 14 (CP) — The municipal tax has fallen on Quebec's French-Canadian potato wagons and for little Gaston Dallaire and his wife, Irene, it's a catastrophe.

It's a blow not for the sprightly lad of night-workers who have always got their cups of tea — the tout in charge tells me — "St. Lawrence" bicycle (jam tarts) from the Dallaire stall, plus a free drink from the bucket (the hunchback).

The Dallaires have been and have put through a by-law banning the travelling food vans.

The Dallaires who drive through darkened streets with loads of hot pork pies, stew, pork and beans, and boiled eggs in vinegar, have an armful of petitions asking that an exception be made for "Irebuckett."

The Dallaires went into the business because Quebec, Canada's seventh city, is populated, in an almost restaurants set their hours accordingly.

It's only recently that any restaurant would have stayed open after midnight.

Irene Dallaire started to prepare a few meals for her husband Gaston was a taxi-driver. He decided her food was so good other late-goers should get the benefit of it and spent $2,000 equipping a restaurant.

The Dallaires have done well, now have $20,000 in the bank and their 10-year-old son is getting schooled but his parents were deprived of.

"Trebuckett" was on the job this week until the municipal deadline for the food vans and Irene Dallaire told one sobbing group of customers:

"There's not much hope."

Gaston said if his appeals for "Trebuckett" fail, the best he can do is open a restaurant in the

British Electors Study Results Of Borough Council Voting

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 14 (CP). — The Conservative party, buoyed by one of its few major electoral victories over Labor since 1945, today cautiously hailed its followers' success in placing too much emphasis on the national significance of the results.

Labor spokesmen stressed the same theme. They were inclined to blame their losses on poor functioning of their electoral organization in the local field.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, said the healthy showing of their own party organization is back to its pre-war standard.

The Conservatives won 1,856 of 4,693 seats at stake in 420 boroughs in England and Wales.

Labor won 1,778 seats. Independents 641, Liberals 107 and Communists 31.

Morgan Phillips, Secretary of the Labor Party, said that — despite the result in these elections — Labor still controls two-thirds of the post-war gains in the local government field.

(Labor has lost not a single seat in the by-elections held since the 1945 general election.)

One result, of Labor's poor showing in the borough voting may be a stiffening of opposition to the budget introduced last month by Sir Stafford Cripps, the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

There have been some demands within the party for an interim budget to provide some tax relief and revoke budgetary increases in the price of basic foods.

Labor lost six of London's 22 boroughs councils but kept control of 17. It previously held 23.

London's council seats went 739 to Labor, 616 to Conservatives, 11 to Communists and four to Independents. That was a net gain of 269 for the Conservatives and a net loss of 263 for Labor.

London newspapers for the most part shied away from, the taking the results as a tip-off on 1950 election results.

The Independent Times of London said "it is still far from certain that the national budget of political forces say next May will be similarly lifted."

The Conservative Daily Telegraph said "it would be foolish optimism to draw the conclusion that they (Conservatives) can win next year's general election in their pocket."

The liberal News Chronicle remarked that "much can happen in a year."

On the other side, the Daily Herald said that "as an experiment as a whole, the voters of Britain, south, east and west register a resounding vote of no confidence."

EISLER EXPECTED TO BE LANDED AT SOUTHAMPTON

Report States He Will Be Taken to Gdynia

Southampton, England, May 14 (AP) — A special court session was called today, apparently in connection with Gerhart Eisler's arrival on the Polish ship in which he fled New York.

Detective-Inspector W. E. Bray of Scotland Yard, accompanied by immigration and port officials in a tender which met the Batory when it steamed into Southampton water and dropped anchor.

There were reports here that a member of the Polish embassy staff in London also went to meet the Batory at the anchorage twelve miles out. The report could not be confirmed.

However, the captain of the Polish ship on which Eisler escaped as a stowaway, was quoted in a radio report as saying: "I will hand him in Gdynia." That is the Polish port for which the ship will sail after leaving Southampton.

CBS correspondent Richard Yaffee, who also is aboard, said that only instructions from the ship's owners, the Polish diplomatic service would make the captain change course.

The Batory is not scheduled to dock here. It cast anchor in Cowes Roads, off Southampton and the Isle of Wight.

A U.S. embassy spokesman, who said the United States wants to extradite Eisler, said this would be the first time a ship in British legal waters. This presents a novel and diplomatic difficulties unless he agrees to leave the ship.

The United States wants to return him to New York as a stowaway who left New York illegally. He stowed away on the ship in New York, but it is reported that he had his passage to Gydnia after his presence on the vessel became known.

There was disagreement whether Eisler could be taken from the ship by force. Some said that a British source who declined to be identified said Eisler had jumped ball in New York, and this is an extraditable offence for which he might be removed from the ship.

Liberals Offer Stable Regime, Asserts Abbott

Perth, May 14 (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott told a nomination meeting here Friday night that the Liberal party can offer stable government to Canadian voters in the approaching general election.

"The continuation of stable government that the Liberal government has given this country for the past 15 years is the party," Mr. Abbott said.

F. S. Popple, Perth Falls lawyer and president of the County Liberal Association, was nominated to contest Lanark riding in the June 27 election. The seat was held by the late counter-Conservatives in the part House of Commons.

Humane Society Inspector Says Charge Over Animals Will be Laid

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 14 (CP) — Rosario Tessier, of Sudbury, Ont., will be charged with mistreating horses rented to a logging company for timber and pulpwood cutting north of Thessalon, a Sault Humane Society official said today.

Harold Allard, Humane Society inspector, said that information relative to the charges was given at Thessalon Friday. He indicated that preliminary proceedings would be held next week.

Mr. Allard said investigation showed that Tessier's horse dealer started shipping animals to the logging camps on November 16, 1948, in small groups. Five were lost through ice during the transportation and 11 others were drowned in a trek through bushland.

Black water, an ailment commonly found among older horses, killed a total of seven more horses, the Sault inspector said.

In his statement of the alleged mistreatment of horses by Tessier, Mr. Allard denied previous press reports that "125 horses were killed in three weeks."

"In fact, 30 horses were lost over the period from October to April and 23 horses had to be destroyed up to May 9, Mr. Allard said, and the rest had "improved considerably" when he left the Sault Humane Society first horses were brought to the camps.

A large majority of the horses concerned were never at any time heavy enough for the work and should not have been supplied for such purposes."

The Sudbury horse dealer had charged earlier that his horses "were worked by alternate drivers day and night, and were driven to death." Tessier denied any or, unable to rise, were shot."

Mr. Allard claimed, however, that "it is perfectly unacceptable for horses or men to have worked 24 hours a day in the rocky lake area as alleged."

Big Three Approve Self-Rule Statute For West Berlin

"Statement of Principles" Issued by Those Concerned

Berlin, May 14 (AP)—Britain, the United States and France today approved self-rule for west-ern Berlin under limited Allied supervision.

It was announced that the three western commandants have signed a self-rule statute in the form of a "statement of principles." The statute grants the Germans direct administrative control of the western portion of the city but reserves wide supervisory powers to three commandants.

Fields of activity specifically reserved to the occupation authorities include:

Disarmament and demilitarization; restitution, reparations, decartelization, foreign interests in Berlin and claims against Berlin; relations with authorities aboard; and security of Allied forces, control of convicted German war criminals, and supervision of police "in view of the special circumstances prevailing in Berlin."

One clause retains for the occupation authorities the right to intervene "in an emergency to take such steps as necessary to insure the security, good order and financial and economic stability of the Western Sectors of Berlin."

A four-power conference was called to seek to clear away some of the confusion and difficulties remaining as a hangover since the lifting of the Berlin blockade last September.

Chiefs Schedule Meeting

The economic chiefs of all four military governments met in Berlin scheduled the meeting. A major subject before them is the Ruhr, industrial area reviving old east-west German trade agreements suspended when the Soviets imposed the blockade last June.

The western allies do not dispute Russian claims that the agreements still are valid—but they do contend the agreements are obsolete.

Meanwhile, Russia declared her intention of establishing trading reciprocal deliveries to 18 western nations of the Interzonal Trade Commissions agency in return for past reparations deliveries by the Soviet Western Germany.

Under the Russian agreements, the Soviet Union was granted a 25-per-cent share in German coal production and was obliged to reciprocate with goods worth 25 per cent of the share.

American military government officials disclosed that the western commandants in the Consultative Association tee at the Allied Control Authority Building in Queen Elizabeth Barracks.

A local construction company, the St. Lawrence Contracting Company, Ltd., last evening at a special meeting of the Board of Education was awarded the contract for the construction of the new secondary public school on Yeomans Street, it was announced today by Harold Selden, chairman of the sites and accommodation committee.

Contract price for the construction of the new school is $150,000, this to include construction of the five room school with playroom, and installation of the heating.

Mr. Selden stated the construction firm would commence immediately to excavate for the new school.

Board members had previously expressed the hope that the new school could be completed in time for the September opening but now this is considered impossible, although contractors have indicated they may be able to complete the structure by October or November.

Architects Grover and Smith, Kingston, who planned the new school, were present at the board meeting when the contract was let. The meeting was called at a night convenient to trustees, but members went into a special meeting of the board to award the contract for the construction of the school.

Loaded Gravel Truck Drops Through Bridge

Daniel Neuman, Maynooth, hauling gravel for Tyendinaga township, escaped death by inches Friday afternoon when his loaded gravel truck dropped through the plank floor of a steel girdered bridge across Parks Creek on the seventh concession of Tyendinaga.

As the truck broke through the plank flooring of the 125 foot bridge, Neuman was able to jump to safety through the cab window just as the truck rolled onto its left side and hung by the front axle to a steel floor girder.

The rear wheels of the heavy duty dump truck dropped into the water, ten feet deep under the bridge, and the load of crushed rock spilled into the creek.

"It was an awful sensation as I felt the truck drop through the floor of the bridge," stated Neuman following the accident. "I was out of the window of the truck before it stopped dropping but was nearly pinned under the truck as it rolled onto its side."

Although on a township road, the bridge across the creek was maintained by Hastings county. Hastings Road Superintendent Lorne Lazier said the bridge had been condemned but was still in use.

Neuman had been hauling gravel for one week and was unfamiliar with the bridge. He was hauling crushed rock for spreading on the 7th concession but missed a turn and got onto the old bridge by mistake. It took wreckers more than five hours to get the truck up through the floor of the bridge.

Township employees stated the bridge at one time spanned the Trent River at Frankford, one of the spans having been moved years ago to its present site.

Wives of Bridge Club Members Are Entertained

The culmination of a successful season of the Belleville Bridge Club was held last night at Kinsmen Park when the wives of the members were entertained at a bridge and luncheon in appreciation for the efforts during the playing season. Eleven tables were in play and the competition was so keen that it was voiced the women should be taken in to help out some of the members, when play opens in the league in the fall.

The arrangements for the fine social evening were in the hands of Jim Ward, Bill VanTassel and Jim Truesdell, with President Bill Miller lending a helping hand. At the conclusion of play, the president thanked the women for their interest in the league and their kindness in providing delicious luncheons on the nights of play. "We as members of the league can never repay you for your kindness," said Mr. Miller.

Mrs. George Williams was the high scorer with Mrs. Frank McKeown, Mrs. Ralph Ketcheson, Mrs. Harold Holwell and Mrs. William McCreary next in order. The consolation prizes were won by Mrs. William Miller, Mrs. Frank Domenico, Mrs. R. A. Lashbrook, Mrs. Morley Ward and Mrs. Jack Lawrence. After the prizes were distributed a buffet supper was served and a social hour spent as all wended their way homeward in anticipation of another delightful function in the near future.

Darts League Hold Enjoyable Stag Party

There were "sounds of revelry by night" in the Sergeants' Mess at the 9th Anti-Tank Regiment at the Armouries last evening when the Belleville Service Darts League held its annual smoker. Upwards of 85 members and guests were present.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of the J. J. Lee Trophy emblematic of the league championship which was won by the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans for the second time in succession.

Jack Lee presented Dick Burns, captain of the champion ANAFS with the trophy. Dave Hamilton, representative of the Black Horse Brewery, Montreal, presented individual members of the champion team with handsome statuettes. The fine gesture of the Black Horse Brewery in donating these prizes was greatly appreciated by the league as a whole.

Mr. William Doyle, of the John Lewis Company, presented Bill Dunning, ANAF team member, with a set of handsome andirons for his feat in scoring a "possible" of 180 points. This feat, it is believed, is the first of its kind in darts circles in Canada.

Secretary Ken Edgecomb was one of the busiest men of the evening and should be congratulated for his efforts in staging the party. Cards, darts and contests featured the remainder of the evening. Refreshments were served at all evening from a buffet table.

Anglicans Mark 400th Birthday Of Prayer Book

(By The Canadian Press)

Four hundred years ago a book was published in London that has since been acclaimed as the "book of union" of the Anglican communion throughout the world.

It was in 1549 that the first copies of the Book of Common Prayer were run off the printing press at "Ye Signe of ye Sunne" in Fleet Street. Since then hundreds of editions have appeared not only in English but in dozens of other languages.

The book of Common Prayer was carried through both houses of parliament by Jan. 31, 1549, by an Act of Uniformity which made its use compulsory in public worship in all cathedral and parish churches of the Church of England and after the following Whitsunday, June 9.

The 400th anniversary in Canada will be marked by special services in Anglican churches. The Canadian committee in charge of the observance of the anniversary has appeared a form of service to be used on Whitsunday, June 5, or on either of the two following Sundays, in England, Sunday, June 19, has been set aside for commemorative and thanksgiving services.

An Arundel copy of the coronation the official service book was the earliest effort, to embody the church's corporate acts of worship in one volume.

The Book of Common Prayer was revised in 1552 when many important changes were made. Abolished in the reign of Mary Tudor, it was reinstituted in 1559 in the first year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth with a few significant amendments. During the Commonwealth its use was strictly prohibited. With the Restoration of King Charles II, it was restored and in an amended form it was annexed to the Act of Uniformity of 1662 and its use thus made compulsory for all the clergy.

The Prayer Book now in use in Anglican churches is the book as amended and revised at various times during the last 400 years.

Influenced Language

The Authorized Version of the English Bible, published in 1611, and the Book of Common Prayer in addition to their religious significance, certainly accomplished more than any other books in standardizing the English tongue.

For hundreds of years, when other books were scarce, these two volumes found their way into the homes of all classes, both in England and in many other English-speaking lands. The language of the Prayer Book was heard regularly by thousands unable to read and its dignified euphonius phrases entered the common speech of the people. Dozens of fine expressions, in frequent use today, come from the book.

Emphasizing the spirit of toleration reflected in the Book of Common Prayer, the Canadian committee in commenting on the anniversary says that it was drawn up with a view to including in the corporate worship of God as many people as possible, both conservative and reformers.

"In order to do this, the great truths and practices of the old Catholic religion which had endured from the early centuries of Christianity were retained," the committe says. "At the same time principles for which the Reformers and leaders of the Revival of Learning contended were provided for.

"In particular, provision was made for the expression of personal fervor and respect was shown for the factual basis of that faith, made known by revelation, scholarship and science."

All this involved the preservation of ancient creeds, the church year, sacraments and the principal parts of the old Latin liturgy. The emphasis on personal religion was expressed in such new forms of prayer as the general confession, communion devotions and the exhortations, and the "cleansing away of myths and legends which had no sure factual basis."

"This effort to hold together in one body men of good will of different religious temperaments involved compromise," the committee says, "but not the sort of compromise which deprives both sides of the essential truths for which each contends. The compromise is a synthesis or comes close to being one. Four hundred years of using in public worship a rite based on this sort of compromise, or near synthesis seems to have taught Englishmen toleration."

Institute Needed To Cure Addicts

Victoria, (CP)— Chief Justice Gordon Sloan of British Columbia believes a central institution for treatment of sexual perverts and narcotic addicts is needed in Canada.

Addressing the Western Conference on Social Work here, he said such an institution would "bring immeasurable relief to those of us who are forced by present laws to send hundreds of young men and women —narcotic addicts — to prison."

"After intelligent and careful screening of narcotic addicts and perhaps others, those capable of being returned to a normal way of living could be sent for treatment.

It should be staffed with doctors, psychologists, sociologists and psychiatrists, with an adequate staff of after hour workers... The institution would more than pay its own way."

The chief justice said nearly 150 criminal appeals came before the Appeal Court in the course of a year.

"... In the case of perverts and narcotic addicts, I am never satisfied when upholding jail sentences, which are, in most part based upon what has been described as a tariff system of punishments apportioned to the crime."

Would Encourage Artistic Effort In Commonwealth

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—Lying in hospital paralyzed down one side, black-bearded Malcolm Mackenzie thought of other frustrated people including dominions and colonial artists struggling for recognition.

On being discharged in 1940 he founded the Empire Art Council, designed to assist artists and art students from Commonwealth countries to "get the most" out of their visits to Britain.

Still paralyzed, but full of enthusiasm for his venture, Mackenzie knelt there before hundreds of visiting artists every year at his Chelsea home.

The council has developed to the point where it has Viscount Alexander, governor-general of Canada, as its president, and many distinguished vice-presidents, including Lord Tweedsmuir (son of Canada's former governor-general), Lord Methuen and Lord Baldwin, governor of the Leeward Islands.

Described as an "honorary vice-president" is the singing canary that thrills blithely above the murmur of voices in Mackenzie's studio.

Relaxed Atmosphere

"I try to receive people in a homey atmosphere," said the veteran soldier and artist, standing on crutches beside his busy-looking desk. "There are no commissionaries here and we do not greet visitors with a bundle of forms to be filled out."

"We are an independent organization—we get no financial assistance from the government—and our aim is, purely and simply the consolidation of artistic effort throughout the Commonwealth.

In particular, he said, the council wished to facilitate a mutual exchange of British and Canadian art and obtain "more information about cultural activities in Canada."

Just recently Mackenzie sent 30 prints of master paintings to the St. John's Art Club of Newfoundland.

"The people of St. John's are keenly interested in art, but when I first got in touch with them a few years ago they were desperately short of artist's material and works of art. There was even a scarcity of paint.

BRITAIN, ART AND ENTERTAINMENT

Britain is to build the finest of concert halls for the festival of Britain in 1951 on the south bank of the Thames. It will be a structure to arouse the admiration of Britons and the peoples of other nations. The concert hall group which will include a restaurant, an art gallery and dance hall, is to cost $7,740,000. Though the temporary buildings put up for exhibition purposes will be torn down after the exhibition of 1951, the concert group of buildings will remain to join the national theatre, work on which will then begin. The theatre and concert will share the river frontage between Hungerford and the Waterloo bridges. There will be a 3,450-seat auditorium and a smaller hall for chamber music, recitals, theatrical and school plays; recreation foyers for dinner dances, restaurants opening to terrace and gardens, a storied art gallery and two large general-purpose meeting rooms.

Britain has always had an intense interest in the arts. That shown today is one of the thrilling facts of the time and indicates the virility of her people in finding expression in the various arts and forms of entertainment. Her place in the arts is high and the artistic spirit is in the very nature of the people.

Britain has a proud record in the drama and the stage, in music, and painting. She understands the part the arts and entertainment play in the nation's spirit and life. For instance in the theatre of the modern world and in fact of the entire world of history she is preeminent and has been for centuries. In music she has produced great composers and she has had a great number who have made names for themselves in the art of painting.

The nation with its traditions dating back deep in history is also modern with a happy gift of expression in every field of effort and interest, and the development of the principle of democracy, which is one of her greatest contributions to the world. There spirit is a living spirit. It has a noble growth and promises much for the coming era.

BERLIN BLOCKADE ENDS

The blockade of Berlin has been one of the strange manifestations of this time. After long months it has ended and trains and goods are moving again. The courage of the West in defying the domineering spirit of the Soviet Union has brought many to the cause of the Western Powers in whom the world can or should see their future secure.

Russia's yielding is a proof of the spirit which prompted the leaders of these Western nations and their intrepid farmers. Germany has been given a demonstration of the power of the united strength of the democratic peoples.

To Russia there must come the feeling of disappointment that she has had to yield her unfair attitude towards the West. Russia has seen the Western Powers carrying through their determination to continue the air lift until the Russians promptly yield. Allied determination has been one of the promising aspects of the developments which have taken place as they showed by the determined resistance to the Russian blockade. Russia knows now what Western spirit means.

The world rests more easy, however with the relief from the strain of the blockade. To the world at large more imposing than the Russian opposition has been the continuity and demonstration of Western skill and action.

LOPSIDED

Most males are a trifle crooked — in a physical sense, that is — according to a survey made at the University of New Mexico.

The findings are rather deflating to the male ego. For instance, no male has been found who is perfectly symmetrical. A little bit of lobsidedness is really par. In fact, the average male physique is made up of odds and ends that don't match.

Such disclosures are devastating to those with a Narcissus complex. But please listen to this: Most noses of the right-handed men were studied tilt to the right, instead of leaning true north, so to speak. Their right shoulders sagged lower than their left, and they had more flesh on the right-hand side of their faces.

The left foot is usually a trifle larger than the right. The right hands of right-handed men tend to be broader than their left. Their left legs are a bit longer than their right. Most of the representative group included in the survey believed they were taller than the height recorder proved them to be.—Hamilton Spectator.

DEATH OF A BOOK

"This is the latest book," he said,
"The books of yesterday are dead.
For books, as even you and I,
Fulfil their purpose here, and die.

"This is the latest book, concerned
With all that man to date has learned;
But when it's found what lies ahead
This book will join the countless dead."

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

HAPPINESS WHILE YOURS

The late Dr. William (Billy) Lyon Phelps once said: "Happiness is much more dependent on the mental attitude than on the circumstances. This would be an absurdly obvious platitude, were it not for the fact that ninety-nine out of a hundred people believe the opposite."

In youth happiness comes and goes like the wind, here today, gone tomorrow. There is immediate complaint if it doesn't come in big doses. In later life, however, happiness has to be counted. Some even try to buy it, while others foolishly think that sensual pleasure brings it. "Billy" Phelps was right, however. Happiness is largely one's mental attitude.

Happiness has to be earned just like we have to earn our daily bread. It comes from thought selfishness, kindliness toward others, and through consideration for the feelings of others. We have an inrush of happiness when we make others happy. And we gain, it when we have become creative and do something that affects the wellbeing of others. It's what we give of ourselves that returns the greatest happiness.

We are apt to speculate upon getting happiness from some future date "when our ship comes in" or when a certain objective has been gained. But genuine happiness has to be grasped a day at a time, or perhaps an hour at a time, while it is yours to take. Better still, while it is yours to give. It is our attitude that furnishes us with happiness. Our attitude toward life, toward our fellowman, and toward God.

Our mental attitude toward our work can make us very unhappy, or it can make us the opposite. We do best the things that give us the greatest amount of pleasure and satisfaction. Most of us have more pleasure in happiness than we realize. We are always better off than we make ourselves believe. We ought to be happy. Happiness we know we have while it is ours, and make the most of it. Else it may leave us. Happiness is not accumulative.

I am amazed at the show of happiness by those who seem to have the least cause for it. Giving. Shut-ins, for example, and the brave poor.

SPACE SHIP VOLUNTEER

Canberra —(CP)— Capt. Robt. McGowan, Australian scientist will volunteer for the "first space ship to take off from the earth for regions 600 miles up," McGowan who is in charge of rocket trials at Woomera said the trip might be in the "by no means distant future."

RAISED FOR FOOD

Dogs were once raised in Europe for food.

Little Current, Ont., May 14 (CP) — Manitoulin Island residents vote Monday on sale of beer and liquor, banned since 1914 under terms of the Canada Temperance Act.

If the 5,823 eligible voters decide against continuation of the C.T.A. on the Lake Huron island, the Ontario Liquor Control Act will come into force. It would bring about opening of government stores for selling liquor, beer and wine for home consumption. A minor vote would be required before beer and wine could be sold in hotels or public houses.

At present, drinking of liquor on the island is permissible, providing the spirits have been brought in elsewhere. Opponents of the C.T.A. claim that this loophole in the temperance legislation has led to undesirable drinking practices on the island. Its repeal was urged by what they describe as "a bootleggers' paradise."

The "dry" campaign was conducted by both the "wets" and "drys" on the island. Principal papers on the island, the Little Current-Tribune, Manitoulin Expositor and Gore Bay Recorder, have supported the campaign for legal sale of beer and wine. Polls throughout the island were open yesterday to W. J. Patterson, editor of the Expositor after the reported that persons were lining up outside polling booths of his home frightened his wife away.

Besides applying to Manitoulin, the C.T.A. is in force in the Algoma district, counties of Peel, Huron and Perth (excepting the city of Stratford.)

Newfoundlanders Taking Interest In Campaign

St. John's, Nfld., May 14. (CP) —There is almost certain to be a full political battle here in the Progressive Conservative candidates race for the leadership of the party in their first provincial election campaign.

There are 28 seats for 25 electoral districts. Premier Smallwood, Liberal leader and his 200-per-month campaign tour of the island, will contest the district of Bonavista North against James M. Way, Progressive Conservative candidate.

Mr. Way replaces Wilson Hummings, named to contest Bonavista East until he was found ineligible under the residence requirements of the Election Act.

The C.C.F. is not entering the fight. Four Labor officials are in the joust under the banner of Progressive Conservatives.

Criticism of the financial terms of Union of Newfoundland in the Progressive Conservative platform, Mr. Drew said the Liberal provincial leader of the party, have said repeatedly that the arrangement in the agreement would be reviewed should Labor come to power.

Because Mr. Smallwood was leader of the movement for Confederation he has become a symbol to this respect. His name which is based to a large extent on the achievements of the Liberal-Confederate party is featured in campaign—their first in 17 years.

Mackenzie's Column
Our Way of Life Secure if Europe Strong and Free

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Paul G. Hoffman, director of the Economic Co-operation Administration of the Indiana University audience the other day that "Our way of life will be secure if Europe is strong and free in 1952."

Mr. Hoffman's prediction of course is based on the fact that the Marshall Plan is due to wind up its operations in 1952. He said that if recovery is accomplished by then "it is more than probable that the Kremlin will decide on a policy of 'live and let live'."

As I see it the position is this: It's true that the "cold war" aspect of the communist offensive has been halted. Indeed, the revolutionary tactics of communists in Western European countries — especially the powerful French and Italian parties — continue to decline. They will gain control of their governments if it is humanly possible.

China Swept

Meantime, out in the Far East communist armies are sweeping southward across China. Northern Korea is threatening and encroaching for control of the southern half of Korea. Indochina, Siam, Indonesia and other Asiatic countries are torn by communist activity. Burma which now read the Orient is likely to become increasingly a battle ground between communism and democracy.

This being so, what basis do we find for predicting that our way of life and that of free Europe is strong and free in '52?

Well, for one thing, while the Far East may be the "hottest" the decisive theatre in the battle of the long cold war is still in the western world's greatest immediate threat comes from Europe.

What new development could alter this picture? There seems to be only one answer to that at this reading. It would be the failure of communists to hold the peoples of the various countries which have been absorbed into the Soviet bloc.

What reason is there to suppose they cannot hold their conquests? The answer is that present day communism isn't the iron-handed force of the iim which many folk had thought it to be.

Today's communism isn't the old brand. It is totalitarian Bolshevism. The old brand was bad enough but the new brand is worse. It has clear since the world war, as communism has taken over it has developed into a fiercer form. There are plenty of indications that there is dissatisfaction among the peoples of the satellites.

Whether that dissatisfaction could develop to a point where it would overthrow the hated communism remains to be seen. If and when that happens, the democratic world will be out of the woods. Pending that contingency, the security would seem to be doubtful.

Apart from the referends to decide whether they will give governments for the island, they have escaped the blasts or election oratory since 1914. The main issue for their last government before being taken over by a Communist government.

Capital Closeups:
Tulip King of Parliament Hill Keeps Capital Easy on Eyes

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 14 (CP)— Meet H. Arthur Luscombe—tulip king of Parliament Hill. He's a massized job keeping the capital easy on the eyes.

From June April until chilly November he nurses a sparkling array of flowers in government grounds and long, twisting driveways. This mammoth flower show, which has been developed into a pride of residents, is an annual display of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths sprinkled throughout the city.

Some 50,000 flowers — crocuses, daffodils, tulips, annuals and chrysanthemums — follow each other in succession the months to spread sparkling pastures of color. Luscombe and them in shape is the work of Luscumbe and 34 helpers.

Mr. Luscombe is a bronzed, quiet-spoken man, a farm boy from Guelph, who grew fruit in the Niagara Peninsula and served with the Canadian Forestry Corps during the Second World War.

In the eight years he's been with the D.C.—four years before the war and four years after — he's increased the planting of thousands of tulips, crocuses and other plants.

Under the watchful eye of the peace tower clock on Parliament Hill, daffodils in a variety of colors—yellow, crimson, mauve, pink, white, and purple—stand in two banks and row after row the main walk leading to the Commons.

Early Blossoms

Long before crocuses start to sprout in private gardens in the spring, the tulip show is blooming on the lawns of the war memorial.

My secret is a heating tube," says the chief gardener, "it runs under the 12 miles F. D. C. driveway with sparkling yellow.

Big Splash

Then comes the big splash—the tulip show—from May 15 to 24. Luscombe give his best attention. The bulbs are grown for the show. Canada buys about 500,000 or 600,000 each year and there's always a special group of 20,000 from the grateful Queen Juliana as thanks for the pleasant wartime stay in Canada.

As the summer months pass the stately tulips and white zinias flood government grounds and finally, in the early fall, there are row of chrysanthemums, red, pink, yellow, white, purple and bronze, spread over several lawns.

THE POOR GEEKS WHO TRY TO BOIL IT OUT

I get a chuckle out of people who; in their ignorance, seriously cling to the belief that a hot bath of one kind or another "break up" whatever one may be coming down with; or that one can reduce by undergoing the mild discomforts of steam baths; or that profuse sweating induced by superheated air and water vapor in the room or by heating the body in a cabinet or oven removes poisons or, as the charlatans say, "toxic waste matter" from the body and so relieves or cures whatever ails the person.

I know of no better home remedy or first aid for on-coming C-R-I (just which Common Respiratory Infection there's on telling in the early stage, but call it "cold" if you are a sissy-type fathead) than a hot mustard foot bath administered at the patient in bed, if the nursing skill necessary to give a HMFB in bed is not available, then the next best emergency home treatment for the C-R-I on my judgment, is rest in bed under plenty of light covers with heat to the feet and legs only of hot clear soup, hot lemonade, hot weak tea, or—no, no, no hot coffee. To resort to alcohol in any emergency is a fool's trick. It is equivalent to saying "I give up." What's the use? I'll benumb or dull my judgment for a while and when I recover from the effect of the booze set whether I'm better or worse.

More or less sweating after a hot bath is good, but to sweat after toasting in bed is a good sign that the treatment is producing the desired effect. Sweating is a form of depilation, flushing the surface, withdrawing blood from the internal organs to the relaxed vessels general circulation.

It is the same reason, which is scientific and sensible, a HMFB in bed (or a hot bath, for that matter) is the best first aid or home treatment I know for acute earache or toothache (inflammation in the middle ear, gathering in the ear, and) for acute toothache ("ulcerated tooth," alveolar abscess) and for acute sinusitis. In the booklet Call it C-R-I you will find in addition to rest in bed, HMFB and soaking the feet

Impressario Ted Schwab Gives Away Secrets of Production '1949 Pack Up Your Troubles'

"There is as you know" mused Mr. Ted (Hammerstein) Schwab, musical comedy impresario who has produced many sparkling musical shows here in the past, "to put it mildly, one of the most pleasing, tuneful melanges of mirth, melody, music, dancing and singing ever presented to a Belleville and district audience, about to be launched from its colorful background in the Collegiate Auditorium."

He stroked a reddish-grey day-old-stubble. The grey while it is among other things, the mark of a Man of Distinction, appeared last week. Purely temporary as it will disappear as soon as the Kiwanis Club's fourth edition of their now famous annual musical comedy "Pack Up Your Troubles" goes down into the archives as history.

This hard-working 155-pound producer (that includes the bow tie) with Messrs. Reg. Hinchey master of the baton, Jimmy Cornell and a host of others, who have been important cogs in the wheels of production, not to mention the hard-working cast and individual stars, will see the climax of their efforts on Monday night, when the 1949 edition of "Pack Up Your Troubles" makes its seasonal debut. It will be offered again Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Best in Years

"It is not 'generally known,'" went on the imperturbable producer, narrowly pecking at an obstinate whisker that had become unruly and was packed on the starboard wing of the Tom-Cat—adornment, "but this show is by far, out and away beyond the greatest stretch of imagination, the best the Kiwanis Club has produced thus far. Of course," he added tactfully, "you know you will respect a confidence, and see to it that that statement is not made public."

He gulped at a beaker of chocolate-malted. We were in his favorite drug-store where he takes his "refreshment."

"Usually" he said "I don't give out public interviews, especially where the press is concerned, since you and I are members of the same Pyramic Club, I don't mind letting down a few hairs—pardon — bars of wisdom and information."

We produced the tools of operation, fountain pen, notebook with pencil poised in mid air.

meanwhile placing a dozen alongside the coffee cup, in case Signor Schwab forgot to punctuate his usually, streamlined flow of rhetoric.

At the point Kiwanian Bruce Lattimer strolled by casting curious glances at his wrist watch, and the tete-a-tete being held by the immaculate maestro and the fourth estate.

The Schwabian visage flashed a "don't-disturb-us-please" look at the former Lieutenant-Governor of Kiwanis and resumed.

Cast of 60

"As I was saying," he said, "I think we have gathered together the smartest, cleverest cast ever to grace a Belleville stage, not to mention forty of a chorus boys and girls who are out of this world as far as choral work is concerned, not to mention pulchritude and masculine beauty."

"What are you . . ."

"Don't interrupt me, please," murmured the erudite Schwab, "I am concentrated when being interviewed to be deprived of my train of thought. Continually, and all that, y'know."

"But, but will. . ."

"Exactly," he replied, "I anticipate your question. The answer is yes." We have such soloists as Harold Carruthers, whose beautiful baritone will be heard in such numbers as Old Man River, You Were a Dream and "Chattanooga Choo-choo." Miss Sharon Lucy will be heard in "Italian Street Song" "Heavenly Music" and other numbers.

"That's fine, but. . ."

"Yes, I know all about that," injected the now fully wound - up producer, "Bruce Lattimer chocolate malted must have power-ful effects on the larynx). "We're again featuring that inimitable comedy quartet of Bud Cavanaugh, Bill Hamilton, Norma Marcus, Eddie Waterhouse augmented by Don Tate and Gwen Shore."

"Then there's Arthur Duby, Barbara Joan Stanton, Terry Meagher, Heales Grant, Alice Vandervoort, the Donovans, Mona Hartley, Jeanette Kyle and other stars."

"Supposing, the . . ."

The Schwabian Adams apple beat a tattoo against the immaculate bow tie, as he downed his fifth malted.

"Suppose, nothing," he smiled. "I know what you are going to ask. Yes, there will be an eleven piece orchestra under the baton of Reg. Hinchey, featuring Jimmy Cornell on the clarinet. And that should be enough recommendation to any Belleville audience as far as the musical end of the show is concerned."

We opened the reportorial mouth, but before anything came out . . .

Beautiful Effects

"Never mind, I'll tell you all about that. The costumes are terrific. The stage production will be something never seen in these parts before. The scenic effects are dazzling. The chorus a piece of well organized choreography. The music is heavenly. The individual stars are tops in their line and the comedy will 'roll 'em in the aisles.'

At this point another voice injected itself into the conversation. It was "Boss Lattimer". "Listen, gentlemen," he warned, "I don't believe in long - term leases. If you guys want to buy the place, make me an offer. But there are other folks who would like to rent the place."

Slowly we rose to our feet. The maestro's tonsils were still in action. We heard snatches of "colossal", "stupendous", "should fill the house entirely" as we walked to the door. We turned right, then turned left, and slowly the great voice dwindled away to a murmur in the cacophony of the mid - morning Front Street activity.—G.H.C.

PICTON

Man Sustains Painful Burns About Chest, Arms

Painful burns about the chest and arms were suffered by Ernest Morley in an unusual accident. He was filling the gas tank of his truck when some of the gasoline spilled on his clothes. Later, at the Newman warehouse, another worker lit a cigarette and the lighted match came into contact with Mr. Morley's clothes. They caught fire and burned rapidly. More serious burns were prevented by the prompt action of other employees in smothering the flames with bags. After treatment at Prince Edward County hospital, he was allowed to go home.

Eddie Attersley, 5, suffered a double break in the wrist yesterday. He was playing on a slide in the park, when he lost his balance and fell.

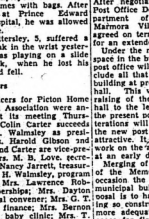
MARMORA

Post Office To be Enlarged



Marmora—Marmora post office erected in 1928 as part of the Memorial Building is to be enlarged. Its lease expired last year. After negotiations, the Federal Post Office Department, the Department of Public Works and Marmora Village Council have agreed on terms for a new lease for an extended period.

Under the new agreement, the space in the building used for the post office will be enlarged to include all that portion of the building at present used as a side hall. This will necessitate the raising of the floor in the fire hall to the level of the floor of the present post office. Other alterations will be made to make the new post office modern and attractive. It is understood that work on the alterations will start at an early date.

Merging of there two sections of the Memorial Building will occasion the erection of a new municipal building and the proposal is to have this new building so constructed as to provide more adequate and convenient space for fire protection equipment and to house municipal offices and a rest room.

ANAF Veterans Show Interest in Municipality

The members of Unit 201 Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, at their regular monthly meeting on Thursday with President W. J. Ford presiding, voiced keen interest in the recent action of the School Board in appointing non-veterans to the principalships of the new public schools which are to be constructed in Belleville. This in view of the fact that Lt.-Col. Cousins, a veteran, who is an outstanding teacher, fully qualified and a proven leader was available for the appointment. A resolution was voted on and passed unanimously endorsing the principles of President Ford's letter of protest which appeared in the press and directed to the School Board protesting the appointments of non-veterans instead of Lt.-Col. Cousins.

Without a dissenting vote a resolution was passed censuring Aldermen H. J. Allin, S. Lummiss, B. Latimer, R. Wilbur, H. Clarke and O. Lloyd for their opposition to rental homes being constructed by the former Belleville Housing Home property and a voice of thanks extended to Aldermen Pice, Duffy, Liddle, Brown, Armstrong, Allin, Hyde, Thomas and Mayor Storey for their efforts in having the homes built.

The question of financial report was read showing the club's finances to be in extremely good condition and under good direction.

Membership Chairman Rashotte reported on the growth in membership. He stressed the aims and objectives of the association to unite fraternally all ex-veterans for the purpose of good-fellowship, social improvement and assistance, to promote patriotism, to encourage public influence in good organizations and to give an expression on public questions affecting the rights of veterans.

Fifteen new members applications were accepted and the members initiated — bringing the club's membership to nearly six hundred paid up members.

Refreshments were served by the entertainment committee and an hour de so was spent in good-fellowship.

City Council Agrees to Erect 100 More Homes

Members of City Council at a special meeting Friday evening gave third reading to the by-law to enter into an agreement with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to construct an additional 100 veterans' rental homes in the city.

First reading of the by-law was given at the regular meeting of council Monday evening, with special meetings being called for Wednesday and Friday evenings to give second and third readings.

The 100 additional veterans' rental houses will be constructed on the former county home property south of No. 2 Highway, and east of the Belleville General Hospital.

CANADA WARBLER

Because of its comparative rarity, quick movements, and habit of hiding at man's approach, the Canada Warbler is not as well known as it should be. This is not a bird of the far north, but nests in settled territory, and is worth searching out. Unusual placing of black spots on a bright yellow breast gives the appearance of pendants, and is the reason why this is sometimes termed the "Necklaced Warbler." The so-called necklace of the Magnolia is more a series of stripes, shortest in front, longest down the sides. There is no other specimen with which the Canada Warbler might be confused in the Male or Female and young are not as easily recognized, as their necklaces are much Vainter.

Yellow rings around the eyes, or "gold spectacles" aid, and a somewhat triangular black mark below and behind the eye completes identification. Otherwise the Canada Warbler is plain olive grey above, with no wing bars, and bright yellow below.

Quite precisely, only the adult male wears whiskers—though they are not necessary for his wife and children as for himself. These are conspicuous bill bristles for the purpose of entangling flies, because this is a flycatching Warbler, although it also gleans tiny insects from the under side of leaves. On account of these food preferences, the Canada Warbler, travelling from its winter resort in northern South America in company with various other kinds of warblers, does not arrive here until the weather is warm enough to bring out flies and insects. If you happen to get close enough, you may hear the song—like the bill as a dainty morsel is caught in mid-air; or, better still, the "click" note that always seems to prelude the high-pitched song, which differs greatly by individuals, though generally following somewhat the same pattern: the very highest tones sung in the middle. The call is a loud, querulous "chip."

Fortunate are those who are able to find a Canada Warbler's nest, well concealed in moss at the foot of a stump, or under the roof of a tree, very often in second growth, and frequently on the wooded bank of a stream. The home is made of rootlets, strips of bark, dead leaves and grass, and is lined with pine needles, fine rootlets, or horsehair, according to what material is available. The white eggs have a wreath of chestnut spots around the large end.

Girl Guides Hold Charming Tea and Sale

The Belleville Girl Guides Association held a charming and successful tea and sale of home cooking on Friday afternoon, at the spacious home of Mrs. A. E. Lewis, 29 Queen Street, while many visitors and guests took advantage of the warm day to enjoy a friendly get-together as well as the daintily served and sandwiches, and to carry away some of the delightful home-cooking of the culinary art and tempting confections.

The hostess, Mrs. A. P. Lewis, and Guide Commissioner, Mrs. C. Watson, received the guests at the door.

Mrs. James Forrester was the convener of the tea.

Just inside the archway at the left, sitting in state on a table all to itself, was a beautiful cake, made and donated by Mrs. Ross Silver, and guarded by two worthy sentinels, Mrs. Aman, and Mrs. C. Brown. The cake was a dream in itself, and a veritable "Queen of the May" with its pale pink appleblossom icing clustering out in silver-tipped peaks, and surmounted by a lovely cluster of pink and white apple blossoms, with tiny clusters placed here and there around the plate on which the cake rested. The object of the cake rested. The object of food was to go to the owner of the lucky ticket, who proved to be Mrs. R. S. Gibson.

Liberal Offering

Directly across from this attractive corner, sat the treasurer of the Guides, Mrs. Ferguson, who showed a really liberal offering, as the afternoon was more on.

In the tea room could be seen a beautiful symphony in white, the tea table with its rose-point madeira linen cloth centred with a crystal bowl filled with waxy-white tuliips, flanked with four crystal holders bearing aloft tall white candles, and either end, the silver service presided over during the early part of the afternoon by Mrs. M. G. Brandcombe, and Mrs. McLean Haig, and during the latter part, by Mrs. Lew Riggs, and Mrs. W. N. Ponton.

Mrs. L. A. Kells was the gracious receptionist to the tea room, and those who served were: Mrs. T. Cannon, Mrs. N. Wilbur, Mrs. A. P. Young, Mrs. F. W. Askey, Mrs. R. Keel, Mrs. O'Neil and Mrs. H. Samuel. Those who replenished the ever-vanishing sandwiches and cakes were: Mrs. Don Gariepy, Mrs. E. Fairman, Mrs. L. Hopkins, Miss Merle Sprackett, Mrs. Reg. Anderson, Mrs. C. Wallbridge, Mrs. Clive Ryan, Mrs. F. Leach, Mrs. H. Booth, Mrs. F. Fulton, and Mrs. A. Geen, while Mrs. J. Kenna and Mrs. S. Snowdon prepared the tea.

The home cooking table, replete with many kinds of dainty and tempting cakes, chocolate heaped high with luscious icing, nut-topped white cakes, mellow-in-the-mouth tarts, little dream cakes—food for the gods—raspberry jelly rolls, and candy creams of several kinds, some plain, some nut crowned, fudge drops oozing nuts, and cream squares. Over these dainties presided a bevy of busy ladies, Mrs. D. Stewart, Mrs. E. Lally, Mrs. W. J. Coles and Mrs. G. Stanton.

An exceptionally attractive and lovely afternoon in the avid luncheon surroundings, perfectly conceived and exquisitely served.

Know the Art of Relaxing

No matter how busy you are, take time out of your day for relaxation, advises Allyn McLeod, pretty Broadway musical comedy star.

By HELEN FOLLETT

RELAXING seems to be a pastime about which most women know nothing at all. To most of us life is a delirium of activities of one kind or another. The career girl is on her toes, chasing out every day to work. The hard working home-woman has to drag the baby along when she goes to market. No helper!

Teacher would like to ask the members of the beauty class if they can go long, do a Flop, catch forty winks of sleep? She knows the answer. They haven't time; if they had the time, they couldn't. Nerves rid into the knots. Everyone going at a gallop Well, it's good way to get premature wrinkles; just about the best, if you ask us.

When life seems to be kicking you around it is the right moment to pull up and ask yourself a few questions. Are you putting your energies to good use or are you wasting them? Is your day too crowded with tasks and appointments, or are you just wearing yourself to rags trying to have fun? It all amounts to the same thing, and soon lines in the face, a drooping body, lagging heels.

Close Your Eyes

When you are tired you must rest, if you are going to keep going. Drop everything. Lie down and close your eyes. Relax very deliberately from the little pink toes at your noble brow. Lift your hands, it them go limp. Do the same thing with your feet.

You won't stay relaxed unless your mind is quiet. Stop thinking about pressing duties. Fancy yourself entering along country roads, passing beside a quiet river or fields of waving grain. Visualize quiet villages, green lawns, church steeples.

Do you know what will happen? Your thoughts will drift into dreams and, first-thing you know you are fast asleep, stealing an afternoon nap. It can happen.

Late-Day Silk Dress

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS is a pure silk dress, pricked at about two-thirds what you would expect to pay for such a chic model in such sophisticated material.

It is dedicated to "best-dress" late day hours and on into the simplest evening dinners and is none too low cut or too dressy to go to luncheon with a summery dieture hat. You girls who have a lot of June wedding invitations piling up will find this dress a boon, besides saving some pennies sees for the inevitable wedding presents.

The bodice is softly and flatly draped from a shallow, with v neckline cut into the shoulders and cap sleeves; the skirt has gentle front fullness, again flat.

PLAINFIELD
Nine Children Receive Baptism On Mother's Day

Plainfield. — An outstanding Mother's Day service was held in the United Church at Plainfield with a large congregation in attendance. Mr. Ellis Prindle, Sunday School superintendent, was in charge. The Scripture was read by Wayne Wannamaker, Willder, Harold Treverton, Marilyn Meeks, Beverly Geen, and Beverly Rigby.

Following the reading of the Scripture, a baptismal service was held at which nine little children were baptized by the minister of the church, the Reverend A. E. Campbell. The children were: John Wayne and John Gary, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gow; John Douglas, and Carol Rose; children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hoskin; Eric Donald and Ruth Ann, children of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Harrison; Bonnie Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Barker; Judith Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Meeks; Barry Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Meeks.

After the baptismal rites were performed, Mrs. Gerald Meeks and Mrs. Douglas Meeks and Beverly Gow sang sweetly "Mother Little Children Come Unto Me".

Mr. Garth McCreary in his capable manner gave the story of D vid Livingstone, featuring "Mother", and the choir sang "Mother Mine" with Miss Marion Sills at the piano.

The Reverend A. C. Campbell gave a fine address, choosing as his theme "Why Mothers Get Gray in Present Day World Conditions". His address was greatly enjoyed.

Much credit is due Mrs. Harry Harrison for her untiring efforts to make this service such a fine success.

Powder blue dayiims dress

For nice compromise between the very dark and very light background print, comes this color theme to you. It is of pure silk in powder blue printed delicately in dark green. Delicately detailed to go anywhere during the day, the dress has a demure little collar above the pleated yoke front. The skirt is gathered in front and gored in back.

MARION COON EVENING AUXILIARY

Tweed. — The Marion Coon Evening Auxiliary of St. John's United Church met at the home of Mrs. Max Bush, on Tuesday evening.

The worship service was conducted by the President, Mrs. Harold Foster with several members assisting.

Mrs. C. E. Way's group was in charge of the program and told the story of Easter. Mrs. Ken Fisher read an Easter poem. Mrs. Wallace Johnston spoke on the motor trip to Florida and of interesting experiences. After the first meeting closed the hostess and her assistants served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. W. McGuire.

Fashion Flashes

DOUBLE DUTY is the busy lot of the terry cloth robe, so useful for beach and for home. Available in full-length and shortie style, belted or wrap-around, in solid colors or prints, the terry robe is a real addition to the robe family.

THE AIRY approach is the right approach to Summer straight, simple lines are in evidence in many. So the star of a recent showing was a cascade of white with a wide frame with open spaces. Little pointed picot-edged cuffs of organdie ribbon gave a delicate white and coral form the effect and bring the loose, pointed collar edge the brim, making for a so pretty effect. The crown is partially open.

LIGHT AND lovely is a suit of silk alpaca in a delicate marine blue. The jacket is fitted and has a tiny-peplum, and is a nice contrast to the fairly full skirt. With it a blouse of rose and marine striped silk is worn.

LOOKING ahead for Fall, so far as the fashion picture is concerned, it looks as though the closed toe and heel pumps is to be the vogue. To effect this detail, though there are cut-outs and straps arrangements to give an airy, light look. In all, shoes will look lighter, prettier and more feminine, to make the foot look small and graceful, quite the kind of shoe historically.

NEW LINES give a new look to the tiny jacket. Black Russian broadtail makes a handsome new collar, with little tuck down collar and sleeves that tie at the cuffs. The jacket swings from collar to hem with tiny brilliant buttons, and has slit pockets with under-tabs.

NO MATTER what coat style is plugged, the fitted reefer goes on its trim way. A handsome new reefer is of blue and white checked wool in a loose weave. Very nice velvet collar, and piping on the pocket tabs adds a nice touch.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He's In a Mess—Wants to Know the Way Out

Those who have brought up to know their Bible stories will remember the man who asked one of the old prophets how he could cure his leprosy. The prophet told him simply to go and bathe in a nearby river.

The man was angry at being told such a simple thing would cure him and refused to do it. Whereupon his servant, who seemed to have a remarkable knowledge of psychology, suggested that if the prophet had told the man to do something hard to cure himself, he would have done it without question, but because the thing was so easy, he would not believe it would work.

This story comes to my mind as I read a letter from a man who seems to be passing up the simple remedy for his problem and trying to find a complicated one.

He tells me that, some time ago, he left his wife after two years of marriage because they were constantly quarrelling. A lack of money and "no decent place to live" were the chief causes of their quarrels, he says. Apparently, he left more or less on the impulse of an excited moment, because he says: "At that time I was all mixed up, and could only think of what I thought she had said to me. I made up my mind we were through. My wife went to work and didn't ask me for support.

She had hurt me so deeply that I wanted I was out for revenge. So when I met another woman who seemed very agreeable, and thought everything I did was right I planned to marry her eventually. She knew I was married and separated from my wife.

"Now I see my mistake. This woman doesn't have the character my wife has, and I am losing all respect for her. I want to go back to my wife. I feel so ashamed when I face my family and friends, and I would like to end this relationship immediately. It has taken two years of separation from my wife to prove to me what a swell kid she was.

"But how can I tell this other woman? I am afraid of what might happen. I am in a terrible mess. Tell me how to get out of it."

Now there are two things this man wants to do. One is to tell the woman with whom he has become involved that he wishes to end their relationship. The second is, he wants to go back to his wife.

As I see it, the right way to go about both these things is very simple and direct, and perhaps, like the man in the Bible story, it is this very simplicity that makes him overlook it. What he should obviously do is, in the first instance, to tell the other women frankly and honestly that he has made a mistake; that he is sorry for having upset her life as well as his own, and that he now wants to mend his mistake so far as possible by going back to his wife and trying to work out his marriage. Then, in the second place, he should take the simple way of being equally frank and honest with his wife, telling her also that he is sorry for the past and is sincerely anxious to make the future happier for her.

I am not saying that because these things are the simple and obvious ones to do, he should will be easy. But I do say, that if this man will stop trying to evolve some intricate system through which he can pull a few strings and put the whole situation back into its original shape again; if he will face the facts squarely, and move towards his objectives in a straight line, he will have far more chance of achieving them than in any other way.

BEAUTY

Hands up, Lady! What About Yours?

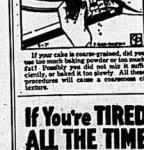
There's many a hard-working housewife who takes the job in her stride, emits no grumbles about it, but she does lament about the toll it takes of her hands. When she sits down at bridge, gaze she is distressed if her mitts look as if they had just been parboiled along with the beans. To keep them in form required care all the year round. She thinks of Juliet, whose hands were like little white butterflies. Hoh! Julie never had to rustle pots and pans, wipe up the kitchen floor, dust closet shelves.

One big help has lately appeared—rubber gloves of such thin texture that they do not interfere with the movements of the fingers. Heretofore these protective agents have been thick and clumsy and that is why many women hadn't any use for them. They slowed up the job. If you are the boss of the domestic works, hie forth and get yourself a pair. Then when doing rough work, when you have to employ strong cleansers and the like, don them until it is ready to shed down to raw flesh.

Find a mild soap for dishwashing. Three times a day the dish pan comes out unless you have an electric washer. Soaps have improved wonderfully the last few decades. They are milder and blander but, even so, they must be thoroughly rinsed away and the hands given a thorough drying.

One should have a lotion to use daily, especially after doing laundry work or dish washing, and a cream to apply occasionally. Slip on cotton gloves so that the soothing lubricant will have time to sink into the flesh. Do this once a week. The results will be gratifying.

Shabby hands make a woman self-conscious. If they are beautiful—white, of satin finish, exquisitely groomed with nail polish, she may like to show them off a bit. It is like being perfectly dressed. If one knows one's clothes are precisely right and becoming, one has self, and spirit, a sense of poise. How we look has a lot to do with the way we feel. That is why beautifying is a necessary part of life's activities. It isn't silly. It builds self-respect and brings a certain amount of happiness.



Sardines in Sour Cream Sauce

She thinks of Juliet

We are likely to judge people by their hands. If they look capable, we make no guess that a woman is industrious, active, useful. The fussy, nervous woman keeps her fingers juggling, fusses with her hair, bracelets or buttons, and we wonder if it what effect her lack of poise has on the members of the family circle. Must give them the jitters.

The woman who is restful, pleasant companion folds her fingers prettily, keeps her hands in a state of repose. She is not forever flinging her arms about, a silly habit of which one, of course, may be unconscious.

Wife Preservers

If your cake is coarse-grained, did you use too much baking powder or too much flour? Grease the pan well, fill sufficiently, or bake it too slowly. All these procedures will cause a coarseness of texture.

A Good Skin Complexion

Lovely skin is doubly important on your wedding day. Before the ceremony then, use a good cleanser, follow by a refreshing lotion that "wakes up" skin

By HELEN FOLLETT

Here is a good looks rule that applies to every girl and woman who is chasing beauty rainbows; keep your face scrupulously clean and keep it creamed; it feeds on cosmetic lubricants that are unknown against the roughness of the surface.

As long as there are chimneys and chimneys ding out soot, we'll need to scrub our phizes with soap suds; if a brush is used, so much the better.

The really handsome complexion is a satiny one, of enriched and cream coloring, or of a golden cast, or that pinkish-primrose shade that reminds one of the petals of a tea rose.

Pale Complexion

There is no loveliness in a pale complexion; it suggests lack of vitality. No make-up can hide pallor. Circulation is sluggish. The pale girl should get out in the open every day, pump her lungs full of fresh air, have mild exercise that will create a normal appetite. She is not supplying her blood streams with the groceries they need for building the various elements of the human composition. She is starving her body cells.

Physicians read a lot of facts in the complexions of their patients. The skin is a barometer that tells about the health weather, whether it is good or bad, sunny or clouded.

The generation that is being born now may not be in need of cosmetics. There may be greater interest in the science of physical education. Let us hope. Teen agers can't bear to listen to health talks, but appearance is just about the most important of all subjects to them.

To have a fair, fine-textured complexion girls need nine hours of sleep every night and a diet that has the proper proportions of proteins, carbohydrates and fats so that it will be balanced. They also need to carry their bodies beautifully.

Fashion Flashes

NEW ANGLES mark many of the newest skirts. Pale beige flannel makes a suit with a short swing jacket that buttons aslant at the waist. The skirt is pulled over into interesting side drapery with a pocket concealed in the fabric fold.

ONCE AGAIN the real afternoon frock has its day. Dress of silk taffeta, sprigged with tiny single roses and wee clusters in such shades as peach, apricot and beige-pink, makes an afternoon frock with a skirt that is almost circular, the cape sleeves offering a nice balance. The cowl neckline is notched and takes a nice slipon. Dress is girdled in black velvet.

A WELCOME ADDITION to easy-to-care-for clothes is a casual shirtwaist frock of nylon woven in an exact crepe weave. At present only available in white, other colors are promised later for nylon crepe.

IN THE GRAND MANNER is an evening wrap of silver-gray silk taffeta. Cut very narrow at the shoulders, it flares gradually to a very full, floor-length hem. Wide turn-back cuffs have flaring points.

LOOK OUT for yellow as an important color note and accessory color. Offset with a navy frock or suit is a small satchel-shaped handbag in fully polished bright yellow calf skin. With it a matching belt has two-buckle style with twin opening.

ONE WAY to dramatize a fine but simple evening costume is through one very striking accessory. This might well be black suede gloves with flaring cuffs of jet-embroidered starched Chantilly-type lace.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Those endearing terms, "Thank You" and "Please"

Do you say "Thank you" enough? And how about "Please"? Do these kind words spring automatically from your heart to your lips? Are you quick, politely, gracefully, with a full heart, as you walk along the way of life? Or are you miserly with them, ridiculously miserly, saving them . . . "Thank you" are you liberal with these words when you are with people whom you consider important to you, people whom you want to impress, and never deign to use them to members of your family or to the bus driver as he hands you your transfer?

It's such an endearing habit to acquire, this habit of quickly, spontaneously, saying "Thank you" and "Please." These so pleasant words smooth the way, smooth the wrinkles out of life. They are flowers of grace, and they spread grace. They bright en hearts and minds. They'll even take the tarnish off your own spirit, if you keep them polished with use.

Here's a gem to memorize, and, memorized, to hide to your children:

"Hearts, like doors, will open with ease
To very, very little keys;
And don't forget that two of these Are, 'I thank you' and 'If you please.'"

Congratulatory telegram to testimonial dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband recently received an invitation to attend a testimonial dinner to be given in honor of a friend whom he has known for many years. He will not be able to attend, and we would like to know whether or not it would be correct to send a congratulatory telegram to the place where the dinner will be held.

Yes, indeed a proper bow of friendship and hearty wishes, this, and your husband will send forth his congratulations to his long-time friend . . . (1) by a note beforehand, telling his friend not only his hearty-hearted congratulations, but how sorry he is that he will not be able to attend the testimonial dinner, and (2) by a telegram, timed to arrive during the dinner, and worded appropriately to be read (as most congratulatory telegrams are) at the dinner. This is such a significant milestone in a friend's life that it should be especially featured with salutations of good words and good wishes of the friends of the guest so honored.

A brief note of thanks for messages of sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother passed on last week, and I have received many notes and cards of condolence. I do not want to answer each one, but I would like to write a short, sincere note of acknowledgment. (I have written all the thank-you notes for flowers, but not for the notes.)

Betty S.

A few words of sincere appreciation.

Dear Mrs. Foster,

Thank you so much for your kind sympathy. Your words were a great comfort to me, and I am most grateful for your sympathy.

Sincerely
Elizabeth Smith

Eat the lettuce, it's good for you

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a salad . . . for example, such a salad as chicken salad, fruit salad, or shrimp . . . is served at a bridge party or similar occasion, either in the afternoon or evening, should the lettuce leaves be eaten?

Frances D.

Certainly . . . indeed . . . of course! In those days when one should know so much about healthful foods, it looks pretty silly to leave the lettuce, which is an important part of the salad. Even if you think of the lettuce as a "decoration", it's an edible decoration!

Women's Pilot Club Is Representative

New York, (CP)—Most of the members of the Pilot Club have never been in an airplane and don't expect to be.

The club for women describes itself as a "female counterpart of the Rotary, Lions or Kiwanis clubs."

"We're actually a civilian service club," says Miss Kathryn Helm, president of the New York City branch. "Our aim is to get women of different interests together to help charter the first European club.

members in New York, there are nurses, dietitians, housewives, chemists, insurance agents, advertising women and others.

Purpose of the organization is to be of service to the community. The New York chapter at present is considering several charitable projects. Its one permanent project is to send parcels and letters to a French tuberculosis sanitarium for women.

In 1929 the first Pilot Club was formed in Atlanta. Now 325 branches comprise Pilot International. Eight units are in Canada, one in Mexico.

Mrs. Rosie Roberts, president of Pilot International, is now in Paris to help charter the first European club.

Conservation Corner

South Bay Mouth, Manitoulin Island (Special)—Disposal of fish waste, with research into the value of various types of Ontario's so-called coarse fish, is receiving the consideration of scientists now working on the fisheries experiment in progress here. The South Bay experiment is entering its third year under a committee composed of scientists and representatives of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, Northern Ontario Outfitters Association and Ontario Commercial Fishermen.

R. N. Johnston, Chief of the Research Division, Department of Lands and Forests, declared: "The coarse fish being taken in the South Bay experiment offer an excellent opportunity for extensive work on the disposal of fish waste.

It is proposed that experiments be carried on to make a compressed, de-fatted, canned fish product by canning cooked fish waste and subjecting it to pressure in a hydraulic press. It is hoped that this material would prove acceptable as a food for fur bearers.

Consideration is also being given to utilizing the waste liquor from the fish which may have a high content of vitamins and growth promoting substances. This might possibly be evaporated to a concentrated fluid and made available to interested parties for experiments in the feeding of poultry and other livestock.

In recent years, research and use of coarse fish from Ontario waters has become of increasing interest, and Lands and Forests Minister, Harold R. Scott has on numerous occasions urged more intensive study of the problem. Many Central Europeans, he has pointed out, find there is nothing wrong with the edibility of such fish as the sucker, carp, ling and other coarse fish which at present are called a nuisance by commercial and sport fishermen. Attempts are being made to try and popularize sport fishing for carp through the use of light tackle.

Many fur farmers, Mr. Johnston said today, are anxious to find a source of cheap food for such fur bearers as the mink, and this would provide a market for the coarse fish if methods of processing it to their satisfaction could be found.

Projects on Agenda

Toronto—Three long-term and five short-term wildlife research projects are on the agenda for the Research Division, Department of Lands and Forests, during 1949, according to Hon. Harold R. Scott.

The long-term programs are continuations of established projects and include the ruffed grouse study in Algonquin Park and on Beckwith Island; small mammals population relationships, and the relation of wildlife to forest environments.

Short-term projects include: the study of repellants as constituents of pelletting material for seed; a vegetation map for the wilderness area of Algonquin Park; grouse season and fire hazard relationships; assessment of provincial red deer population and general biological problems and the ecology of, of wildlife food and cover plants.

Doing Fine Job

Toronto—District fish and game associations are doing a "marvellous job" in helping the Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of Lands and Forests, in the distribution of fish and restocking of Ontario waters. This was the tribute paid by Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, Chief of the Division, in outlining the progress being made in replenishing supplies of game fish.

At the same time, Dr. Harkness declared that "a new era was coming when fish raised in provincial hatcheries would be distributed in streams on which the restocking of need had been previously made and according to the availability of supply.

At present, all fish requisitioned from persons or groups seeking to plant fish are routed through district offices of the division and then sent on to Toronto for approval. "We may reach the point where assessment has been made and distribution will be according to supply and need," he said.

Raising fish for distribution is expensive. Yearling speckled trout cost $60.00 per thousand in April, the cost increasing at the rate of $10.00 per month for each succeeding month, for restocking waters not open for public fishing. Publicity fished waters in Ontario are stocked free of charge by provincial government hatcheries.

Owners of private ponds or streams which are fenced off for public fishing must buy their own fish from privately operated hatcheries in Ontario.

There is, however, no private hatchery in Ontario which has best for sale and this offers some difficulty to owners of private ponds who would like to stock bass. They are not permitted to release fish in waters other than those in which they are caught. On occasion the Department has granted special permits for transfer of small numbers of fish but generally frowns on the practice.

General attitude of the government is to maintain the public fishing facilities of the province to the utmost. So far as private fishing is concerned—clubs and individuals will have to look after their own restocking.

As for muskinonge—there probably isn't any private musky water in the province, which is just as well. The government operates one of the few successful musky hatcheries on the continent in the Kawartha area. But since muskies insist on live food this means there must be ponds to raise minnows with which to feed the muskies, and the cost would be far too high, it is considered, for the average private individual.

Major Projects Planned

Toronto—Nine major projects are being planned for Ontario fisheries in 1949, Lands and Forests Minister, Harold R. Scott, announced today. Of these, the Algonquin Park creel census; artificial fertilization of lakes; experimental fisheries management in Algonquin Park; and the scientific follow-up of the South Bay Mouth-experiment are continuing projects.

Need New Hose

Toronto—Wanted: Expendable fire hose! Ontario Department of Lands and Forests is greatly interested in hose—perhaps of plastic—which is light to carry and economical to replace.

At present the Department has over two million feet of conventional linen hose used in district forest fires. It is packed in circular bags containing 500 feet— and weighing around 75 pounds per bag.

In a major conflagration, thousands of feet of the regular hose may be damaged or destroyed by fire at a heavy loss, and transporting the hose to the fire provides many a ranger with a headache as well as a backache.

Each spring this portable weir is set up in Thessalon River to trap lampreys, eel-like fish which destroy game and commercial fish in Northern Lake Huron. More of these on Lake Huron rivers would help wipe them out, experts believe. Big job of the day is keeping the weir cleared of floating debris. High water, or a jam of rubbish would sweep weir away in swift-running Thessalon.

German Officers and N.C.O's Corps Anxious to Refurbish Their Tarnished Prestige

By WILLIAM ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 14 (CP)—Germany—the western zone at least—is having no difficulty in adjusting to the luxury of a military class, and there are indications the former soldiers desire it.

The German Officers' and N. C. O.s' Corps already are anxious to refurbish their tarnished prestige, British sources say.

Military collapse after the First World War was explained away by claims that a Socialist revolt on the home front was a "stab in the back."

Now they are trying to blame Hitler for the debacle of the second. Gen. Franz Halder, former chief of the German General Staff, speaks of the "complete elimination by Hitler of all military influence in the conduct of the war."

It is an intangible spirit, difficult to counter. But the machinery which between two wars defeated the Treaty of Versailles and kept the two traditional corps intact is being bolstered.

Germany after the First World War was allowed an army of 100,000 effectives. Of the 100,000, 8,000 were officers and 12,000 N. C.O.s. Needless for an army of 40 divisions plus headquarters and administrative staff.

But in addition the General Staff, by keeping intact the Officers' and N.C.O.s' Corps records through a bogus "welfare"-set-up, had at instant disposal 34,000 regular officers, 100,000 "non-coms" and 226,000 non-professional reserve officers.

The Allies are taking no chances of repetition this time. Once army personnel reserve officers.

The Allies are taking no chances of repetition this time. Once army personnel were demobilized and prisoners-of-war returned, their records went to the indicnastors. Personnel are dispersed to their hometowns and military bonds which tied them together snapped.

Demolition of war installations is almost completed and services equipment has been scrapped.

German police for the entire British zone number 45,000.

The same cannot be said of the Russian zone, where a Communist-indoctrinated ,German "police force" of at least 200,000 is armed with everything from light automatics to artillery and tanks.

Western military governors say it represents nothing short of the nucleus of a German "Red army" calculated to ensure continued Communist domination of eastern Germany once the Russians pull out.

He purpose also could be more sinister but little support so far is found for the theory.

Board Approves Wage Increase At Bata Factory

Toronto, May 14. (CP)—The majority report of a conciliation board hearing a request for higher wages at the Bata Shoe Company at Batawa, Ont., near Belleville, Friday ruled that Quebec wage rates should not be held as a "standard" for Ontario wages.

The majority report, signed by Judge W. S. Lane of Picton, Ont., and submitted to the Ontario Labor Relations Board, recommended a general wage increase of 10 cents an hour for some 500 workers at the shoe company.

The report said "we see no justification for a situation which in the Province of Ontario which allows wage rates to be set by the wage structure of Quebec."

Representative of the company on the Conciliation Board held that because the company is located in Ontario, it should not be forced to accept the wage structure in Ontario. The representative said that 62 per cent of Canadian shoes are made in Quebec and added that the policy "would prevent certain industries operating in this province."

Scout and Guide Activities

Church Service Final Instructions

On Sunday morning, May 15th, all Guides, Scouts, Brownies and Cubs, in full uniform, are asked to be on Cable Company's parade at 10.30 a.m., if possible, to meet their Leaders, and be prepared to leave the campus at 10.45 a.m. for service at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church. As announced before the Roman Catholic Guides, Scouts, Brownies and Cubs will attend service at St. Michael's Church. In case of rain come directly to the church, where your Leaders will be waiting for you. Rev. H. A. Eastman has planned a wonderful service, with special music and hymns and a very special message for Scouting and Guiding. We hope to see you Sunday morning.

Our Girl Guide Association annual tea on Friday was a wonderful success, and we are very grateful to Mrs. S. J. Curtis, who gave her home for the tea, and to Mrs. James Forrester, who so very capably convened the tea. We also thank all who helped in any way to make the tea such an outstanding event. A detailed account is given in today's paper.

Information concerning the annual Guide Camp will be published, we hope, in next week's column.

4th Belleville

In the absence of the Scoutmaster, Fred Churchill, who is leaving Belleville to take a position as canalman at Frankford with Dept. of Waterways, Tommy Williamson of the 4th Rover Crew will be acting as S. M. Scouts Gary Hall and Richard Moore were granted their 2nd Class Badges and Scouts Peter Hart and Stewart Robertson gained their cyclist badges.

May Import Houses To Beat Shortage

Canberra (Reuters)—Australia may have to import "prefabs" because of shortage of coal, steel, transport and labor needed for home building, A. W. Welsh, director of housing, told a conference of federal and state housing ministers.

He said the additional cost of importing houses might have to be borne as part of the price of building up the country's population.

Rugged Wrestling Polish 'Talun' Defeats Irisher O'Connor in Dull Main Bout

Beef took the gonfalon of wrestling here last night as giant "Iron" Waladyslaw Talum powered his way to a clean-cut third-fall decision over "Dangerous" Dan O'Connor.

Definitely mismatched in the semi-final was the popular Pat Flanagan who took terrific punishment from 230-pounder Hi Lee who from a spectators' point of view had everything his own way. Flanagan gave all he had but it was not enough. The big boy from Arkansas (300) practically toyed with Flanagan and the result was more or less pathetic.

The whole show was not on a par with what has been presented to the fans here thus far this season. True some 1,100 fans saw the battle between the "Iron Pole" Talum and Dangerous Dan O'Connor in the main bout.

There was little to enthuse about on the part of the spectators as O'Connor and Talum barged their way through three falls.

There was a flurry of excitement, perhaps, as things started to liven up in the third fall when Talum and O'Connor took turns in being tossed out of the ring.

Talum at one time by way of divertisement flung his towel around the jugular vein of O'Connor, but after being subjected to a bit more or less of strangular punishment, the canny Irishman reversed tactics and "flanguver" the towel athwart the giant Pole's jugular and the crowd waxed a bit of enthusiastic.

But that was not all there was to it. Pat Flanagan did his best to enliven proceedings with a rip-roaring performance against giant, Hi Lee.

Irish Tom Collins tangled with big Ben Mahgan in the curtain-raiser and won referee Cliff Fox's decision after 30 minutes of grappling.

Accent on Youth As Stratford Opens Season

This is the 6th and last of a Canadian Press series on pre-season prospects of the International senior baseball clubs. Today's story is about Stratford Nationals.

By L. W. (Chick) APPEL
Canadian Press Correspondent

Stratford, May 14 (CP) — The trend is toward youth with the Stratford Nationals who open their 1949 Intercounty baseball campaign today at Brantford against the Red Sox.

Piloting the Nats for the first time is George (Pappy) Smith, of Massena, N.Y., well-known pitcher and coach of numerous clubs in Canada and the United States.

In all, the Nats have added 11 outside players, among them hockey star Danny Lewicki of Fort William, Danny Flanagan, an honest-to-goodness homebrew, is another athlete who is very likely to grab a place on the Nats' infield.

The other newcomers to the Stratford nine are Allen Kelleher, Belleville infielder; Ron Clark, Brockville outfielder; George Bevington, St. Marys infielder; Art Whitehead, Toronto pitcher; Ray Plante, Valleyfield, Que., infielder; George Pembroke, Toronto infielder; Vern Richardson, Montreal pitcher; Ken Bulley, Galt pitcher; and Jack Ryan, Toronto infielder. Eight of the 11 additions to the Nats' roster are still eligible for junior ball, while two others have just exceeded the junior age limit, which emphasizes the youthful nature of the team.

Should Give Balance

Members of last year's team, should give the team balance and steadiness. Returning for another campaign are Ken Hughes and Irish Miskimmons, who divids their duties between pitching and the outfield; Letty Price, Letty Allen, Bill Fuss and Bud Dixon, pitchers; Ken Wilson, catcher; Hugh McGillivray, third baseman; Chuck Hamilton, Hazen and George Blake, outfielders; Bob Lauder, infielder; Bruce Smith, outfielder. Also homebrew Dean Gibson and Boat Hurley who are battling for infield berths.

Next Wednesday the Nats go to St. Thomas for an afternoon fixture and before returning home play a floodlight game against the Majors at London. They open their home season with London Majors a week from Saturday, their second tussle of the season under the lights. All of their 21 home games this season are night fixtures.

It is not expected that all of the players listed will make the senior Nats, but those who fail to make the grade will be placed with the Nat Juniors.

Actually the aim of the club officers is to build a future championship squad, consequently they chose youthful players rather than older and more experienced ones in their importation.

TO HALT NARCO CRIME

Johannesburg, South Africa (CP) — An all-out campaign against criminals, especially motorized gangs, is being launched by Witwatersrand police. A fleet of 40 flying squad cars with two-way radio will go into action when they will operate in Johannesburg district, and on the East and West Rand.

OPPOSE RED DOORSTEPS

Thingoe, Suffolk, England — Residents of the local council have forbidden council house tenants at nearby Bardwell to paint doorsteps red. Councillors considered colored doorsteps would spoil the appearance of the latest building estates and ordered housewives who already had colored steps to clean them off.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A man once bit a dog — and the newsboys went wild over what at that time was termed hot news. Various scenes a spot of news from a baseball point of view than can be placed in the same category as the man-bites-dog item. This time, it's the umpire who was wrong and not the player. The senior club league backed up the club's protest that Ellis Nibe was off the beam on the play at second and ordered the game replayed.

x x x

It happened in a recent Baltimore Orioles - Montreal Royals game. The Royals clipped the Orioles pluggee to the tune of 13-1, but the Orioles promptly protested the game through an umpire's error at second base. Ellis at present was back which they claimed was contrary to baseball playing rules.

x x x

Here's what happened. And local umps might mark, learn and unwardly digest, just in case a similar instance occur while they are masking and protecting the home plate. Baltimore was leading 1-0 with a man on first and third, two out. The man on first stole second. Then on the Montreal catcher's high throw to the base the Oriole on third broke for the plate. The umpire covering that play at second collided with the Montreal shortstop taking the throw. The shortstop was unable to make the throw to the plate and the run scored.

x x x

The three umpires ruled that the official at second had interfered with the runner and ordered the Baltimore player back to third, voiding the run. President Frank Shaughnessy, International League head, ruled that the umps incorrectly interpreted the official baseball rules and upheld the Orioles protest.

TOURNAMENT TALK—

There have been no outstanding scores recorded thus far in the Central Ontario Bowling Championship Tournament now under way at the Bowl-O-Drome. In the doubles competition, the highest score attained is 2632, which leaves plenty of leeway for other contenders. Singles and standard scores are also fairly close competition has taken place. Bowl-O-Drome officials tell us that there are still plenty of time for bowling teams and individuals to enter and all stand a good chance of grabbing the $100 first prize money. The tournament closes May 22.

"HELP THE SALLY ANN"—

We're always glad to digress from the sports field for the nonce and do a piece about one of the grandest organizations that ever existed on this continent—the humanitarian work is concerned. It is the Salvation Army which is now conducting its annual campaign for funds with which to carry on its work. The Belleville quota is $7,500 and the campaign has been under way all week.

x x x

During two wars, the interim and since the guns ceased to chatter to announce that may be another interim, the Salvation Army has quietly gone its way, unheralded and unsung among the peoples of the earth, administering its services to all regardless of race, creed or colour.

x x x

During the holocaust of the late "Sally Ash," as it was affectionately dubbed by the democratic soldiery, did a magnificent job. Its representatives went into the hell of battle, unafraid, comforting the wounded, burying the dead, dishing out "coffee and doughnuts," free, became world famous. Nothing was too good for the boys in uniform and many a weary wounded hero as well as those who lived to see what is called "peace" has thanked God for the Salvation Army. . .

x x x

Nor did its efforts to serve humanity cease with the "spilling of the world's first" opened at last another vista of duty and work for the "Army." One perhaps that was as much if not more than that of the war. It made no difference to the "Sally Ann". It merely girded its armor all the tighter, reorganized its forces and set about the new job.with the same cheerfulness, resourcefulness and all success those in need, as it has done since its inception.

x x x

The Salvation Army has done a magnificent job in Belleville. Many worthy causes have been aided through its unselfish efforts and sacrifice on the part of its officers and personnel. No one has ever been turned away. Human derelicts have found not only physical refreshment in the warmth and comfort of the Citadel here, but also hew hope. This city, like many others, can ill afford to be without the services and presence of the Salvation Army.

x x x

But all this is well known. The Salvation Army does not advertise its good deeds. It is not necessary. They speak for themselves. But it urgently needs funds with which to carry on its fine work. Less than fifty cents per capita of the population of this city is the objective. Every dollar is needed right away. You will be investing in the welfare of humanity — something that has practically no needed for. We say you and I. Can help. Do it now. The "Sally Ann" will be grateful for whatever assistance you can render it in this campaign.

Brandon Kings Favored to Win Monday Night

Winnipeg, May 14 — (CP) — The last piece of the 1948-49 Memorial Cup jigsaw puzzle will be fitted into place here Monday night when Montreal Royals and Brandon Wheat Kings meet in the eighth and final game of the series.

But it is a toss-up which team will fit into the spot left vacant by Port Arthur Bruins, 1947-48 Dominion junior hockey champions.

Wheat Kings opened the originally-scheduled best-of-seven series final as 8-5 favorites, but were almost counted out after five games. The underdog Royals, showing a speedy attack and power-play in every department except goal, waltzed to a 3-1 lead in games, and needed only a tie to clinch the title. And they were made the favorites to finish the series in the sixth contest.

But the bettors failed to count on the fighting spirit of the Western champions, who came back strongly to take the next two games 2-1 and 3-2, and force an unprecedented eight battle. Royals were just about ready to demand a selfies test of the high-flying Manitoba team.

Now, the Brandonites are slight favorites in the betting nightmare as their followers believe the team has caught up with the five and dash started in the sixth game, a 20-game winning streak in the Manitoba league schedule.

One factor, however, swings many fans on Royals' bandwagon. Brandon has yet to beat the Easterners on Winnipeg ice.

Wheat King players and supporters discount this by saying the team was not at its best in the two games played here.

Royals are just as confident they can win at the Winnipeg amphitheatre as it is "better suited for our type of hockey."

All in all, it's been a tough series, with four of the seven games being decided by only one goal and another tied up at full time. Wheat Kings hold a slim one-goal lead in total goals scored with Royals registering the only shutout.

No matter which way the verdict goes Monday night, sports fans are agreed on one point: the losing team need. not feel ashamed.

Major Loop 'Rhubarb Season' In Full Swing With Cards And Pirates in Star Bout

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The major league "rhubarb" season is in full swing with St. Louis Cards and Pittsburgh Pirates in the star bout.

Bad feeling first sprouted between the Cards and Bucs in a game April 22 when Stan Rojek was hit twice by a pitched ball. The second time he was ejected for over a week. Some of the Pirates thought it wasn't an accident.

Friday night it burst forth again when St. Louis catcher Joe Garagiola and Pittsburgh pitcher Rip Sewell collided after a near beaning.

Garagiola, who had hit the 'dirt a few seconds earlier to escape one of Sewell's pitches, tapped a grounder toward first base. It was the routine comeback from a hitter who wants to even matters with a pitcher.

Sewell came over to cover the bag and bumped into Garagiola, sending him sprawling.

Players of both teams and their managers swarmed on the field at Pittsburgh but cool heads prevailed before a punch was thrown. Umpire Jocko Conlan told managers Bill Meyer and Eddie Dyer he would clear the benches if order was not restored immediately.

Eddie Bockman's ninth - inning homer off Red Munger gave the Pirates a 4-3 victory. Sewell struck out three batters in the sixth of the year for Elmer, a seasoning smash off Harry Brecheen.

Tied for National

Hugh Casey, who pitched the last two innings after Sewell faded for a pinch hitter, was the winner.

New York Giants and Boston Braves remain tied for the National League lead after the Tuesday activities which called for an all-night program.

Larry Jansen held Philadelphia to five hits for a 9-1 victory.

Bobby Thomson contributed a three-run homer and a pair of triples to the attack that shelled starter Russ Meyer to the showers. Johnny Mize also hit home run No. 5. Bobby Rolfman, starting his first game as Giants' second baseman, came through with four hits.

The Braves needed 18 hits to shade Brooklyn 6-5 in 10 innings, equaling Johnny Sain's season record at 3-3. Bob Elliott's single, his fourth hit, with the bases loaded broke up the ball game. Eddie Stanky had five hits, and Phil Masi and Elliott, four each. Reds New Third Cincinnati climbed into third place on a 10-hit shutout by Red Lively who notched his third win by blanking Chicago 7-0. Two double plays by the Reds helped Lively, through some tough spots. Manager Eddie Sutton honored on Walt Dubiel's first pitch, Cincinnati was on its way.

Detroit bounced St. Louis 7-2, behind Ted Gray's pitching and Chicago trimmed Cleveland 11-10 in the only American League action. The other four clubs were not scheduled.

Don Kolloway, a blazing streak since he was sold to Detroit by Chicago, banged out four hits, including three doubles, to lead the Tigers. He was aided by rookie Johnny Groh who regained his batting eye with a pair of doubles.

Gus Zernial, hitting a sensational pace doubled in the seventh inning to give the White Sox their winning margin over Cleveland. It was the fourth hit for the rookie outfielder.

One-Horse Trainers Allowed To Saddle Horses, Racing Goes on as Usual at Dufferin

Toronto, May 14 — (CP) — The customers at Toronto's Dufferin Park were no unhappier than usual today.

Amicable settlement of a dispute that threatened to close the track 'till Monday, free to lose their money on the horse of their choice by one of 'Night racing' none of which had a single entry 10 hours after the official deadline.

The dispute, involving a ruling by the incorporated Canadian Racing Associations that barred one-horse trainers from the Ontario tracks under its jurisdiction, was settled when the I.C.R.A. reversed itself Friday night. Horsemen had threatened to "boycott" all I.C.R.A. tracks if the ruling was allowed to stand.

After an emergency closed-door session, the I.C.R.A. announced that trainers would be granted licences "on the basis of ability, character and experience". President James Heffering said a meeting would be held today to review regulations governing of trainers handling only one horse.

The I.C.R.A. had contended the ruling was imposed "in the best interests of racing and that one-horse entries took up stabling space and that the horses were frequently inferior to others which they kept off the track.

Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association, representing the trainers, protested the ruling and carried out a threat to file no entries for today's card until the I.C.R.A. announced its change in policy.

The H.B.P.A. claiming backing from its parent body in the United States, said 90% of trainers were the backbone of racing.

Solmar Tables:

More About Half-Limit Club

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

Noted Sportsman, Author And Creator of Solmar Tables

Along about this time last year we sent out a news story about the Half-Limit Club. It was our feeling that fish and game laws, particularly the former, are Anachronisms from the standpoint of sound conservation.

Where we had one angler twenty years ago, today we have twenty. Since World War II the general public interest in the outdoor sports has been overwhelmingly on the upswing, so that our supplies of fresh-water fish, even with greatly expanded stocking programs, are woefully inadequate to meet the public demand.

The time has come when the great American angler must face the fact that sport fishing is exactly that—a pleasant form of recreation, and not merely an enjoyable way to find and inexpensive meal for himself and his neighbors.

In other words, you can't have your cake and eat it, too. A game fish that has been caught and killed ceases to serve its purpose as a source of outdoor recreation. One that has been caught and released will live to fight another day, thus doing double duty for the general cause of angling.

Formed Club

With this in mind, six of us banded together into an informal, non-profit group and we gave ourselves the name "Half-Limit Club." We elected officers, had application blanks and membership cards printed, and ordered a supply of club insignia in the form of attractive sleeve patches in canary yellow felt on which is embroidered the club design.

During our first year we proceeded slowly. We felt that there were bound to be some kinks to be ironed out. Now, with a year's experience behind us, we feel that it is time to expand.

Last spring we had the pleasure of entertaining Mr. H. G. Tapply, Editor of Outdoors, as our guest for a week of trout fishing. We told him of our club and signed him up as a charter member. He suggested that we send him a story on the Half-Limit Club for publication in his magazine.

Wanted to Start Chapters

The story appeared in the March issue of Outdoors. No sooner was that issue on the newsstands than the letters began to come in. A few of them were merely congratulatory, expressing approval of a sound conservation program. The great majority, however, were from folks who not only thought the idea a good one but who wanted to start local chapters of the Half-Limit Club in their own communities.

We decided to answer each one of these letters in detail. We sent samples of the club forms, to act as guides in having the other forms printed. Answering all those letters was a big job, but we felt that they deserved replies. Of course, it is still too early to know how many new chapters will be formed. Those things take time. We do feel, however, that the movement, if such it can be called, is off to a very good start.

Among my friends are a good many fish and game wardens. I know what these men are doing and from them I receive a story story about the nefarious behavior of too many "sportsmen." I don't mind telling you that the hundred-odd letters that came in about the Half-Limit Club did a great deal to restore my faith in human nature.

The letters came from the most surprising places—Utah, Idaho, Montana, places where we think of few fishermen and plenty of fish. One letter actually came from Mexico.

Many From Youngsters

Most reassuring of all, however, were the letters that came from youngsters, boys and girls ranging from 13 to 17. There were a good many of them. All of these were quite in earnest about starting clubs of their own and many of them have already done so. Now they are busily engaged in getting their own groups, all waiting for final directions. This sort of thing brings home the pleasant truth that instruction in sound conservation in our public schools is beginning to pay dividends.

Just to give you something to think about, here is the Creed and Pledge of the Half-Limit Club. Please note that there is no attempt on our part to diminish the fun that a fellow can get out of his fishing. Instead we are trying to point out the way for him to catch more fish.

It's all quite simple — catch more by killing less. Keep a few big ones and put the little ones back to grow up. That's all there is to it. This is the Creed and Pledge.

Creed of Club

"In the interests of better fishing, we, the undersigned, have banded together into an informal, non-profit group which shall be known as The Half-Limit Club.

"We believe that an angler should be content with a fair good fish in preference to a limit catch of lesser fry, and that these latter should be returned to the water to grow to a size more suitable for another's creel. It is not our purpose to curtail in any way the sport in fishing. We do believe in catching as many fish as we wish, keeping a few, and releasing the rest to be caught again another day.

"Feeling as we do that the limit legal catch is a constant threat to the quality of our fishing, we have chosen this method to further the conservation of the fish in our streams.

"Accordingly, we pledge ourselves to kill no more than half a legal limit of fish each time we go fishing, subscribing to the principle that more pleasure can be derived from catching many but killing few."

If you think the idea is a good one, don't take the trouble to write to me about it. Simply pick up the phone and call your local outdoor editor. If enough of you are interested, I'm sure that he will see to it that you have your own local chapter of the Half-Limit Club.

And before we forget it, your chances for catching more fish and for having the sport that each has to offer will be much better if you take the trouble to consult your Solmar Tables. They are published in your newspaper for exactly that purpose.

Get the habit of clipping out the weekly schedules and keep them in your fishing kit. It won't be long before you'll find that it already gets to be a mark of the daily Solmar Periods.

Bobby Locke Out in Front In Golf Tourney

(By The Canadian Press)

It began to look today as though the $15,000 Goodall Golf tournament at New Rochelle, N.Y., was invented as an annual benefit for Bobby Locke, the South African stylist with the magic putter.

He won it two years ago on his first try, finished a financially gratifying second last year, and today he was threatening to run away from his field of 15 rival professionals in the current event at Wykagyl Country Club.

After three rounds of play, in which he had shot the par-72 layout in 71-67-68, Locke was far out in front with a score of 206-36. Two rounds remain to be played today and Sunday.

Herman Keiser, surprise winner a year ago, stood second at plus 27. His shot consists of 68-68 Friday.

Third was Johnny Palmer, Babylon, N.C., the first day's leader. He had scored 72-71-71 Friday to slip to plus 29 and go plus 33.

Charlie Fusari, blond Irvington, N.J., whirlwind, exploded the Vince Foster boom Friday night when he stopped the Omaha, Neb., youngster in 2:46 of the first round at New York's Madison Square Garden Arena. Foster weighed 146 3-4, Fusari 147 1-2.

Foster was the Bible-quoting Westerner who rode to fame on the strength of a sensational knockout win over Sugar Ray Robinson in January 14. He was hailed as the hottest thing since Rocky Graziano.

At Cincinnati, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler Friday awarded Jim Wilson, Negro shortstop, to Newark Bears, International League farm club of New York Yankees. The Baseball Commissioner held that Cleveland Indians had no right to Wilson who had been loaned to Santo Diego, because of an earlier agreement the player made with the Yankee organization.

In another ruling, Chandler voided a contract between Newark and Luis Marrero, and gave him to Cleveland in the American League.

At London, champion jockey Gordon Richards said Friday his choice of a mount for the derby June 4 is Royal Forest. There has been some question of whether Richards would ride Royal Forest, the 4-10-1 favorite in pre-race betting or unbeaten Pardao, both trained by Noel Murless. Although he has been Britain's leading rider for two years Richards never has won the derby.

Brooklyn Dodgers Friday night purchased Negro pitcher Don Newcombe from their Montreal farm club of the International League. He has won two and lost two this season. Newcombe was offered for sale during the winter by the Dodgers but the asking

Pitching Staff Of Philadelphia A's Falls to Pieces

Philadelphia, May 14 — (AP) — The collapse of his "first-line" pitching staff set Connie Mack to wondering today whether, after all, 1949 is to be the year for that "one more pennant."

A month ago a chipper 86-year-old Mack let it be known he thought that his Philadelphia Athletics could win the American League pennant this year.

He had good reason to be elated. Phil Marchildon, the Pennsylvanian-born, Ont., righthander, was in great shape, Toronto's Dick Fowler had burned up the grapefruit circuit and everyone knew what Joe Coleman and Lou Brissie could do with a baseball.

The club started out all right. The pitching was shaky, but a surprisingly powerful hitting attack carried the A's through.

But, then, suddenly the roof fell in.

Marchildon injured his arm. Fowler was stricken with bursitis. And Coleman and Brissie quit winning ball games.

The A's start a long home stand today after an 11-game road trip in which they won only twice in eight starts. They are buried in sixth place with a won - lost record of 11-13, their poorest in three years.

Bill McCahan won one of the two victories of the western trip but he didn't finish the game. No - hit Bill had a great first game in 1947 but now is not win at all last year. His ailing arm still isn't in good condition, but somebody's got to pitch.

Fowler at 1-3 is having his poorest season of the majors. Marchildon has pitched only twice because of an aching arm.

Coleman (2-3) and Brissie (3-2) have not been effective, and no one can answer why.

Carl Scheib has been knocked out of the box four straight times.

But the 86-year-old Mack has not lost hope. "We'll come around," he says.

000. There were no takers. He pitched a no-hitter game and a one-hitter game with Montreal last season where he won 17 and lost six.

Indian Land continued to prove its supremacy over Dr. Stanton by taking his second consecutive victory Friday night in the feature event at the Ontario pace at Roosevelt raceway in Westbury, N.Y., before 19,734 fans. Dr. Stanton went out front with W. L. (Lindy) Fraser up at Forest, Ont., at the reins while Indian Land, driven by Joe O'Brien of New Glasgow, N.S., took the No. 2 slot. Indian Land pulled out in the stretch to win in 2:04.4. Indian Land paid $8.90, $2.80, $2.40.

Durocher Given New Contract For Two Years

New York, May 14 — (AP) — Leo Durocher today had a vote of confidence as manager of the New York Giants — in the form of a new two-year contract.

Announcement of the latest return in Lippy Leo's fortunes came Friday night. Only two weeks ago, the tempestuous little leader was believed by some experts to have reached the end of a rocky road. That was just before Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler reinstated him following a brief, summary suspension, the result of the great much-ado-about-nothing altercation with a heckling fan who charged Leo assaulted him.

Lippy's present pact expires at the end of the 1949 season and no terms were announced regarding the new one. However, those close to the situation ventured the opinion that the new figure would be around $65,000 a year. It was believed his present contract called for about $60,000.

Expect Ponder Will be Beaten In Preakness

Baltimore, May 14 (AP —The weathermen called things closer today than the colts figure to be in the 73rd running of the Preakness at Pimlico.

The forecast is for cloudy and a chance of thunderstorms late in the afternoon." Pressed for more information about the likelihood of rain, the bureau promised it won't fall until "after the race" at 5:15 p.m. E.D.T.

That was cutting it about as fine as the differences appeared to be among the 10 probable starters. It was viewed as a wide-open race with almost everyone trying to guess which is the one to beat Ponder over the mile and three sixteenth distance.

The calumet colt, who is in much the same position Olympia was before last week's Kentucky Derby. He probably should be the favorite but somebody probably will beat him.

The first "probably" turned to is Greentree's Capot, the horse which ran Olympia into the ground to have Ponder come on to grab the derby swag.

Being touted nearly as highly as Bieber's Palestinian, third in the derby. The name of Jockey Eddie Arcaro, one of racing's great riders, replaced that of Headley Woodhouse on Palestinian and many think it will make a difference.

Going right down the dotted line, Clifford Moore's Old Rockport gets consideration next. He was second choice last Saturday and wound up fourth.

Toronto Leafs In Third Place Of Int. League

Lou Novikoff, baseball's famed "mad Russian" is off to a great start in bringing gray hairs to heads of International League pitchers.

Novikoff, who batted .327 for Newark Bears last year, played his first game of the season Friday night and drove in five runs on a pair of homers to lead the Bears to a 12-3 triumph over the Buffalo Bisons. In addition to his two homers, Novikoff singled and walked in five trips.

The triumph enabled the Bears to jump from last to sixth place, Syracuse Chiefs, beaten 13-9 by the Rochester Red Wings, dropped into the cellar, nine percentage points behind Baltimore Orioles. The Orioles lost a double-header to the Toronto Maple Leafs 6-0 and 2-1.

Rochester overcame a 9-1 deficit in clipping the Chiefs. The Wings tied the count at 9-9 with a five-run drive in the fifth inning that was featured by Jim Bucha's two-run homer. The Wings broke the stalemate with a four run eighth-inning uprising against Johnny Bebber.

The victory enabled the Wings to remain a half game back of the pace-setting Jersey City Giants who trounced Montreal Royals 11-3.

Rookie Roger Bowman held the Royals to four hits to hand up his fourth victory of an unbeaten season. The Giants pounded Don Newcombe, sold prior to the game to the parent Brooklyn Dodgers, and Charley Lau for eight hits.

Veteran Nick Strincevich blanked Baltimore on four singles in hanging up his first triumph of the season for Toronto in the first game. Johnny Blatnik drove in three of Toronto's six runs with a double and triple.

Bubber Church also set the Orioles down with four blows in the nightcap. Glen McQuillen homered off Church in the eighth inning to tie the score at 1-1 but Ed Sanicki cracked his ninth homer in the bottom half of the eighth to break it up.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 14 (AP)—To remain 20 years at one studio, you have to be either good — or a relative.

Producer Arthur Freed claims to be unrelated to anyone in the higher echelons of M-G-M. Yet he is beginning his third decade at the Culver City lot. That—and box-office figures—seem to indicate that he is good.

Freed, who reminds you of a warm but unsmiling uncle, first went with M-G-M on a three-month contract to write the score of "Broadway Melody" with Herb Brown. It was the screen's first talkie musical hit, and Freed stayed on, writing such tunes as "Temptation," "Pagan Love Song," "I Cried For You."

Then Freeding

He became a producer in 1939 by using the musical talents of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms." Since then his musicals have been among the studio's top grossers.

How does he do it?

"I agree that in pictures, as on the stage, the biggest attraction is the musical," he said. "That's why I try to get important stories and hire the greatest possible talent to do them."

Tenth Level

As you may have heard, the life of a movie producer is not always peaches and cream. Freed in particular seems to have been cursed with hard luck.

Such as this week when Judy Garland tossed a lantrum and was suspended in the middle of "Annie Get Your Gun". This means a new leading lady and a $250,000 loss for the studio.

Miss Garland pulled another "El Foldo" just before she was to start "Barkleys of Broadway." That brought about the re-teaming of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A squeeze play in bridge is usually planned in advance. There are definite symptoms of it's existance to consider. Several steps must be taken to prepare for applying the pressure.

In preparation for applying the pressure it is first necessary to reduce the cards in all hands. Usually it is best to clean down to the last three cards. Sometimes down to four will be enough.

These preparations are pointed toward attacking the dangerous hand or hands. And since then the feared hand is discovered with pronounced ease by reading what is told by the opening lead.

South was declarer at seven notrump in this deal:

	NORTH
	♠K 5 2
	♥A 10 4
	♦A K 10 7 6 4
WEST		EAST
♠7 6 4		♠Q J 10 9
♥Q J 7		♥8 3
♦None		♦9 8 5 3 2
♣Q J 9 8		♣5 3
7 6 4		A 10 9
	♥K 5
	♦Q J 9 8 2
	♣A K 10 3 2

Opening lead from west was the club queen. A chain of discovery hand told what tricks could be counted on without effort. This decides what else is necessary to fulfill the contract.

There were two top spades, two top hearts, six solid diamonds, two top clubs; total 12. One more trick must be developed. It will have to come from the ace ten or heart ten.

What will prevent one of these tens from taking a trick? The queen and jack of hearts or the jack of clubs in the opponent hand. Something must be done to make these opponent cards impotent.

Sluffing or ruffing will not do it. For only it be possible to overcome them with a finesse. The threatening cards must be squeezed out of the hand of the opponent who holds them.

The first trick went to club king. This revealed at once that east held no clubs. Therefore, west is known to have the club jack, one of the opponent cards threatens.

A squeeze will work only against an opponent that threatens in more than one suit. So, west must be suspected of having also the queen-jack of hearts. Could you carry on from there?

Anchorage, Alaska — (AP) — Geese and jet planes don't mix at 500 miles an hour.

Take it from Lieut. Kelsey O. Wynns, a fighter pilot who came out groggy but victorious over a flock of ducks and geese yesterday.

He was on a training flight from Elmendorf Field when "All of a sudden a big explosion took place," he recounted.

Wynns was knocked unconscious momentarily.

"When I recovered I started to bail out, but I realized the motor was still running so I headed back for the field, dropped the tip tanks, and landed," he said.

On landing, he found that the "explosion" was caused by part of a goose breaking through the windscreen and coming through the left side of the windshield, making a hole big enough to stick a foot through.

The right wing had a 10 - inch long hole in it. Another goose broke the gun camera. Ten lbs. of meat and, feathers were found inside a duct chamber.

In Manhattan:
Seats for Plays Drawing Big Crowds are the Hardest to Find

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, May 14 (CP) — The first problem the theatregoer in New York encounters is that of getting seats. And since the hit plays draw the greatest crowds, seats for these are the hardest to find.

Let's say you want to see "South Pacific" or "Death of a Salesman." The box office will probably tell you "Nothing Doing" for weekahead. The leading ticket brokers probably will have the same story.

So you can either get tickets for some date far in the future, forget the whole idea of a play-going evening—or find a ticket speculator who will charge up to eight times the legitimate price.

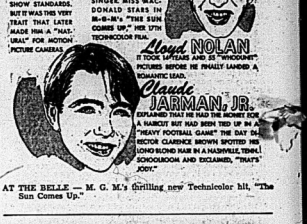
Inquiry Ordered

There's a gleam of hope, however. Mayor William O'Dwyer has ordered an investigation into the operations of ticket brokers. The financial records of the city's major ticket brokers have been subpoenaed. But critics of this inquiry contend that the only cure is to stop the operations of undercover speculators who grab seats and dispose of them at a fabulous premium.

A man found with 18 tickets to "South Pacific" was fined $100 this week and given a 15-day suspended jail sentence on a charge of reselling tickets without a license.

Producers themselves are taking steps by refusing to sell more than four tickets to a single person for any one performance. This is designed to cut down the number of seats which fall into the hands of speculators.

Furthermore some plays now advertise dates when seats at certain prices will be available.



The play-goer may get a break.

Sterling Performance

Fay Bainter, a distinguished actress long absent from the stage, returned to Broadway this week with a sterling performance in a mild melodrama entitled "Gayden". In this newcomer at the Plymouth Theatre, Miss Bainter plays the part of the sensitive mother of a sophisticated young musician, Gardner Sibley. Jay Robinson plays the part of the unpleasant son. Authors Mignon Eberhart and Stanley Ellin have achieved a tasteful study of clever degenerates and broken families. Acting in this tale of a mother and three wayward sons were Lois Bolton, Glenda Farrell and Francis Compton.

AT THE BELLE — M. G. M.'s thrilling new Technicolor hit, "The Sun Comes Up."

AT THE CAPITOL — John Shelton, Ann Doran and Joe Allen, Jr., are shown in one of the highly emotional scenes from the Screen Guild release, "Road to the Big House," the story of a man who turned thief for an honest woman, starring Monday at the Capitol. On the same program is "Mine Own Executioner," starring Burgess Meredith and Kieron Moore. Both hits are first Belleville showings. Matinee daily at 2.00.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma is still serving on the jury, claiming she would injoy it more if it took less time, and she was watching pop smoking and thinking in his private chair, saying, William, do you believe in the rites of misery?

Well rather, my dear, they're the foundation of democracy and the triumph of justice over sheer weight of numbers, pop said, and ma said, Well, there are only 4 women on the jury, and today at lunich we decided to ask permishun to appoint a new forman. Do I am? she said.

Most certainly, if you can show cause, pop said, and ma said, Ho and deceet and false pretenses. That's enough cause, isn't it? she said.

Ample, my dear, pop said. Do you meen he misrepresented his qualifications? he said, and ma said, I should say he did. When we voted for him he was a clean shaven, respectable looking citizen, but every morning since then he has shown up for duty with his face covered by an unshaven stubble that's a perfect mockery of justice as well as an inexcusable sine of disrespect to the ladies of the jury. And then, not satisfied with sailing under false colors, he acts as if he thawt he was Napoleon taking Waterloo every time he stands up in the jury box to announce that a verdict has been reached. I'm sure the judge has the impression that he reaches ed, unshaven efforts. So what do you think we 4 ladies can do about it, William? ma said.

Nothing quite the end of the lence, secure in the purity of your own conscience, pop said.

Radio Awards Stress Value Of Planning

By JEAN THOMPSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Achievements in specialized fields of radio production and entertainment continue to win high honors for Canadian programs in North American competition.

Latest prizes for Canada were won at the 13th American Exhibition of Education Programs held in connection with the Ohio State University's 19th annual Institute for Education by Radio.

Canada came back with six prizes and one special award. Station CJOR, Vancouver, took first prize with its program "Destination Palestine" for furthering international understanding. CBC took five first prizes in various categories and a special award for its Wednesday night programming.

For the sake of comparison, the National Broadcasting Company was given seven first awards of which three were for television programs. American Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System took three firsts each, of which one CBS prize for television.

The process of selecting prize-winning programs is interesting in itself, for they are judged by several critical groups before the blue ribbon is pinned on.

The competition is organized in categories which cover fields of education by radio. Subdivision include religious, cultural, literary and instructive programs and series.

Institute judges listen to live United States programs to make their selections. However, entries to have Canadian competition, the Institute invites submission of recordings, which are played and judged shortly before announcement of awards.

In the case of the CBC, recordings for competition are selected by its department of international exchange programs from submission of producers and supervisors of programs qualifying for the various categories. More than one program from any one series may be sent to Ohio.

The citations accompanying the awards emphasize the important connection between excellence of production and prize-winning. Such phrases as "excellent production," "balanced blending" and "meticulous planning" must be highly gratifying to people behind scenes who plan and produce the programs.

This recognition puts the seal of public approval on an aim foremost in production of many CBC programs, including of course, those which came through with radio's Oscars at Columbus, O.

For instance, Harry J. Boyle, director of the Trans-Canada network, remarked recently about CBC's Wednesday Night. "We strive constantly for perfection of production, and to attract as much by quality of production as by interest of material."

Listeners to Wednesday Night productions of "La Bohème" and "La Traviata" were quick to remark on the sparkle and brightness that permeated production.

Festival of Full Moon Celebrated By Buddhists

London, May 14 (CP) — The Buddhists of Britain—and there are many thousands—are preparing for the festival of the full moon tomorrow. Its called the festival of Wesak and it marks the Buddhist New Year.

Hundreds of followers of the Buddhist faith—and a sprinkling of those of other religions drawn by the spectacle—will gather in a hall in London's Red Lion Square. Prayers will be said in Pali, the original language of the Buddhist Scripture.

Celebrants will bring a profusion of flowers to place around Buddha. A Buddhist priest will read them in reciting Pansil, a formula used in the east at the opening of all Buddhist meetings. One of the chief speakers at the London celebration will be Prince Nakkatra Kitizakara, the Siamese Ambassador.

The festival of Wesak will be celebrated in other parts of Britain as well. An official of the Buddhist Society of Great Britain said there are thousands of the Buddhist faith in Britain who do not belong to any society.

The Buddhist Society of Great Britain was started 25 years ago by an Englishman, Alan Bennet. Now the organization is under the presidency of another Englishman, Christmas Humphreys, a London barrister and so nof Mr. Justice Sir Travers Humphreys of the King's Bench court.

Kentucky Estate Home of Famous Calumet Winners

By JOHN CHANDLER

Lexington, Ky.—(CP)— Six miles west of here is an immense place called Calumet Farm where they raise tobacco, corn, hay, Hereford steers, registered Jersey cows, pastry and Kentucky Derby winners.

You can't miss the beautiful 1,200-acre layout as you drive eastward along Route 60 from Louisville — where Calumet's Ponder won the Derby.

It's perhaps the most famous horse-breeding farm in the history of American racing. No telling if more Derby champs are running along now on wobbly legs following their mothers around the rolling green acres partitioned by miles of snow-white fences.

In the immaculate white stable lion barn trimmed in red, Pensive looked across the stable today at a horse named Bull Lea as much as to say:

"Well, what makes you think you're such a hot number?"

Pensive won the Derby in 1946, and his son, Ponder, followed in his old man's Derby footsteps May 7 at Churchill Downs.

Bull Lea never won the Derby, no sir. He wound up eighth in Lawrin's 1938 Derby. But Bull Lea has a couple of kids, Citation and Coaltown, who are just about the classiest things you ever saw on a race track.

Whirlaway Next Door

Right next to Pensive in the fireproof barn is one called Whirlaway. He won the Derby too, in 1941 for Calumet, and set the Derby record of 2:01 2/5 for the mile-and-one-quarter. Whirly also took the Preakness and Belmont. His youngsters aren't quite as famous, but they're the stakes winners Whirl Some, Dart By and Scuttered.

On the other side, near Bull Lea, is Sun Again. This chestnut beauty won many big stakes, and dead-headed for second place in the 1942 Preakness. One of his most famous sons is Palestinian, which took third in the Derby recently and might have something to say about the coming Preakness.

Money probably couldn't buy the four stallions, unless Warren Wright, the Calumet owner, suddenly decided to get out of the racing game.

There are 73 brood mares at Calumet, farm manager Paul Ebelhar also 40 yearlings, and the same number of foals.

Calumet also is in the market business with 20 acres of tobacco, 15 of corn, 100 of hay, has 200 steers, 3,000 New Hampshire broilers, and 600 laying hens. Chickens, eggs, milk, cream and butter go from Calumet to the retail market. There is a manager over each division of the farm.

Warren Wright took Calumet over on the death of his father, William Monroe Wright, in 1931. Warren had a three-horse racing stable in 1932. The nags won only one race, had one second, and a third. They brought him back $1,150-that year. Since then, Calumet horses have earned $6,000,000.

Last year, after Citation's Derby, Calumet had $303,963 in the bank from racing, and wound up the season with $1,269,710. Ponder's $91,600 Derby pot shot Calumet 1949 earnings to around $342,000.

FINDS VALUABLE GEMS

Potchefstroom, South Africa—(CP) — While prospecting on his Christiana district farm in the West Transvaal, S. S. Jonker, discovered four diamonds. They weighed a total of 14¾ carats and realized £2,400 ($2,368), averaging £40 a carat.

CANUCK AIR CHIEF INSPECTS AIR LIFT

Air-Vice Marshal Plant of the R.C.A.F., left, is shown chatting with Group Capt. E. O. Yarde, commandant of Gatow Airfield who was on hand to greet him upon his arrival in Berlin on an inspection trip. The Canadian air chief flew from the British zone to observe Allied airlift operations, continuing in spite of the lifting of the Berlin sides of the Atlantic.—Central Press Canadian.

Club Bearing Letters 'For S.I.U.' Exhibit in Court

Halifax, May 13 (CP) —A club marked with the letters "For S. I. U." was presented as evidence today in the resumed preliminary hearing of the officials of the Canadian Seamen's Union (T. L. C.) on charges of illegal possession of offensive weapons.

The hearing of H. C. Meade, Atlantic organizer, and port agent Gus Gentles later was adjourned to May 20.

Meade and Gentles were arrested several days after the April 8 waterfront riot between the C. S. U. and the rival Seafarers' International Union (A. F. L.). R. C. M. P. and city police raided the C.S.U. hall.

HAD TO GUESS

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Articles ranging from a crated Rolls Royce engine to old bed springs were sold yesterday at a Canadian National Railways auction of unclaimed freight. Bidders bought everything offered although they had to guess at what the called up crates contained.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

"You'll be sor-r-r-y," Sally said to Roger. That's an exploded fallacy that disfranchisement is important. Never forget, you buttered your bread. Now you'll have to lie in it."

John got the house, and we still got Roger.

Our M.C., aware no doubt of the slump in Roger-Roberts solidarity, looked out of the window and remarked that it had stopped snowing and that he proposed all the men go out and clear the walks.

• • •

All the men worked except Rob. Always allergic to work, he nursed his grouch by the fire while Sally and I busied ourselves in the kitchen. I sliced Bermuda onions thin and put them to soak in French dressing. Later, Sonny, taking a bite of a sandwich, said, "What have you done to these onions?"

"Marinated them."

"You know, Sonny, what people do on Sunday to clothes that are to be washed on Monday," Sally explained.

The men didn't return from shovelling and Sally finally found them in the alley. Roger wouldn't let them quit until they had cleared behind the garage so the cars could be backed out. "Tomorrow'll be Sunday," he explained archly.

"So what," the vanquished Rob snapped.

"Be – kind – to – Lee – day. I'm inviting you to the Club to dinner. Should lend variety to your lives." It did.

"Better let me drive," Roger suggested as we climbed into the sedan the next day. "It'll be easier getting past the sentry."

We wound up the highway to Gore Field and made the right-of-way by a hair's breadth. A plow had cleared a lane, piling the snow high up on either side.

Roger insisted upon letting us out at the Club driveway entrance. It was like the first appearance at the Club and our first as his guests, and we waited for him to make his grand entrance.

He described a wide arch as he swung the car out onto the main road, five minutes we saw the car. The next we didn't. It wasn't an entrance he made; it was a fade-out. Bow-, an hands and knees like an Eskimo coming out of his igloo, burrowed through the snowdrift and on onto the road. "Bad snow, that," he said amiably, indicative the place in which the car settled on its side, athwart the ditch and hidden by the snowbank. "I'll have to call it to the Engineer's attention in the morning."

"Oh, yeah," Rob stormed, "And what about the car tonight?"

"Oh, that I'll call the motor pool to pull it out."

"And how well they'll know how," I muttered.

But the motor pool had other plans; it didn't get around to pulling the car out by the time we were ready to go home. Roger had a perfect V for Victory, that both headlights were gone, both front fenders smashed, and that the cylinder head was probably cracked. It would take six months, if we were lucky, to get the necessary parts to repair the damage.

"Why, you—you crazy galoot, you!" Rob exploded at Roger. "You—you big palooka, you!" I was astonished at the moderation with which he dealt with Roger. For a moment I thought the shock had been too much for him.

"Haven't you insurance?" Roger asked in the voice of sweet reasonableness.

"Insurance!" Rob bellowed. "Why, you fool, do you think I'd ask an insurance company to stand a long like this! I'd rather hold 'em up with a gun. I'll tell you who'll pay for this, you simpy. You'll pay half and I'll pay half. That's who'll pay—for it. Maybe that'll learn you something about automobiles. And it'll teach me not to be such a blamed idiot as ever to let you handle a car of mine again. (It did not.) Get out of my sight!"

Robbie got the idea that maybe we didn't need Roger to make our party complete. "Get rid of him," he said next morning. "Tell him the OPA doesn't operate that way."

But the OPA doesn't operate that way.

"The OPA? Now, what have they got to do with it?"

"The OPA won't let you make a tenant move unless he's guilty of some infraction, doesn't pay his rent, or you're going entirely out of business."

"That's it!" Rob exclaimed. "We're going out of sale. We're going out business."

I won't say Roger listened at keyholes, but I will say that every time we got out the ax and began to put an edge on it, he looked over a new leaf instead of a car. Monday a large box of red roses arrived for me with a card: "Words are too feeble a thing to express my gratitude to you for your ever gracious hospitality. May these buds speak for me in their more beautiful language." Roger." That wasn't a good day to show him the gate. He arrived home bearing three thick steaks which he had wheedled from the chef at the Officers' Club. Definitely, that was not the night to boot him.

Saturday night, Robbie and I were invited to a dinner in town and Roger was going to the Club. Roger admired my new dinner gown extravagantly—the ladies were dressing though the gentlemen were casual and Inatie ed I tell him our hosts' telephone number.

Roger kept calling to inquire whether I were having a good time, whether I wouldn't enjoy more joining him at the Club for the dance. Each time I was rather cool to the phone; I gravitated nearer and nearer to sweet 16. The third time he called, my mind was made up; Rob had refused to play poker and I'd been completely unable to be caught up on his rest. I know nothing about poker and care less.

I gave Rob the look of the cat-about-to-eat-the-canary as I slid past his recumbent form, so comfortable on a davenport. My look must have carried weight, for he quickly opened his eyes.

I tried to make wifely signals to let him know I was leaving and that so far as our hostess knew, it was because of a terrific headache brought on by concentration on poker.

I gave him the family look. Every word dripping with icicles, I asked, "Are you coming?"

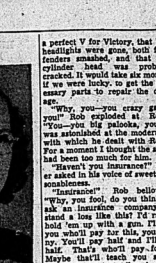
"Not by a damn sight. It's the last of the evening . . . Thank you. I'll play a little piano." All the guests approved.

"Then I'll go alone," I said.

No sooner had I got in the car, turned on the switch and the lights, than our hostess called from the front porch, "Rob's coming."

Roger had told me to go at once to the bar where he would be guarding a row of high – balls he'd have poured before the bar closed at 12 o'clock, and that we'd drink them as we danced, since the music would play for a couple of hours longer. It was just midnight when Robbie and I reached the Club and I hustled inside while he parked the car.

I was sitting on a bar stool sipping my first drink when Robbie barged through the door. As usual, he missed the step down from the entrance to the ballroom and rolled across the floor. The waiters and the club manager rush to his assistance, and still feeling piqued at him, I pretended I'd never met the man and remained on the bar stool nursing a high-ball.



It wasn't long until a waiter tapped me as I danced and said a gentleman in the checkroom would like to speak to me. I thanked the waiter and said I'd go soon.

I was sipping my third-highball when the waiter returned. He wrung his hands and beamed like a man torn between duty and desire to stay out of the particle. He said the gentleman was getting pretty mad and would like to see me immediately. I thanked the waiter and said I'd go soon.

It was a lovely waltz I was enjoying when the waiter returned, this time to beg that one of us, either Roger or I, go at once to the cloakroom. Roger went.

He returned to report that as Rob came out of his barrel roll, the club attendant had observed that the dark-blue suit was not a

GOLD MEDALLIST FROM PRAIRIES

Kay V. Marshall, 13-year-old collegiate student of Moose Jaw, Sask., winner of the grand prize for best essay on the subject "Our Navy and Seaborne Trade Are Our Sanity Life," as conducted recently by Navy League of Canada, in co-operation with the Royal Canadian Navy. Miss Marshall came first in the junior age group, 12 to 13 years, in Saskatchewan, for which she was awarded a gold medal and cheque, watch for herself and a framed picture of H.M.C.S. Magnificent for Central Collegiate. In addition she has also won the Navy League's diamond med-l and an expense-free visit to the fleet at Esquimalt, B.C., including a trip to sea in a Canadian warship. She will be accompanied by M. E. Ballard, principal of the collegiate who will be her escort, as a guest of the Navy League. The adjudicators for the national contest were Dr. E. J. Pratt, University of Toronto, Arthur R. Ford, Free Press, London, and Rear Admiral F. L. Houghton, R.C.N., vice-chief of the naval staff.—Central Press Canadian.

words with the sergeant on duty. The best the sergeant could do at the moment would be to send a "escort" to take us home. Roger perished the thought that he should accompany us and leave our car alone at the mercy of the mechanics. He would stay and personally see that it was righted and drive it home himself. It was a gorgeous moonlit night, and if there is one thing above another to be said for Montana, it is that the visibility is good. In Montana one can see farther and see less than anywhere in the world. Blind Ed with his cane could have found the turnoff from the army road to the highway. But not Roger.

I must have been asleep for several hours when there was a tap on my door. Roger wished to speak to me. "Come in," I said, squeezing my eyes tightly shut and hoping not to be very much waked up.

"I've had a slight accident," he said. My eyes popped open. Roger held up a bloody handkerchief as evidence. "My nose," he explained. "I missed the turn onto the highway. Hit a post head on."

I was tempted to say "How could you?" but that would have been verbose. I settled for "Where is the car?"

"On the road," he replied, openly amazed at the stupidity of my question. "A passing motorist brought me home."

The scary road comes to a dead end as it joins the highway. I had a mental picture of a large sedan broadside to the Helena Road. The Highway Patrol had a physical picture of the same thing. They called to tell me about it.

• • •

By the time I told Rob the story next morning, I could also add that the radiator was bent in

EVERYBODY IS HAPPY FOR THE MOMENT

Across the broad Atlantic in Berlin, the Russians were at last playing ball with the Western Allies by lifting the blockade that they clamped down on the battered capital 10 years ago. In Flushing clamped down on the battered capital 10 years ago. In Flushing Meadows, N.Y., there also seemed to be a more friendly atmosphere as U.S. Statesman Bernard Baruch (left) chatted sociably with dour Andrei Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign commissar in the delegates lounge of the United Nations. It was a pleasant picture on both sides of the Atlantic.—Central Press Canadian.

Tuxedo but a double – breasted pin-stripe, and that since these dances were strictly formal, he had invited Robbie to remain out of sight in the checkroom while a waiter went to get me. Roger said that since Rob was overheated, he thought a high-ball was in order. He turned to the shelf where his row had been. Had been in the correct form of the verb; the bar was closed and there was nothing to be done about it. No one wanted to carry the message to Garcia, sulking in his tent. So Roger brought up a solution to the problem. "I'll tell you what we'll do," he said. "We'll invite a few of the better people down to the house."

It was two o'clock in the morning. I gave him my ace-you-kidding look and he reproved me gently with, "Remember, Lee, these boys work hard, dying for you." It was a punch below the belt; he knew full well I was fighting his way in a cockle shell through hurricanes and enemy action to the Pacific front.

Roger suggested we stop at a bar and have a quickie in order to compensate Rob for the lack he had suffered at the Club, an idea Robbie readily seconded.

"We'll go to Tony's," Rob said, "He's an old tenant of mine. He'll fix us up even if it is closing time."

"Let's match for the first round," Roger said. Rob lost.

Roger ordered a second round and the waiter said the drinks were on the house.

We heard off that round and Roger said, "How's to take your turn, Roberts?"

"My turn!" Rob exploded. "Why I bought the first round."

"Sure," said Roger. "And I provided the second round."

"You." Rob shouted. "That round was on the house on account of me. I own this dump. You can thank me for that dividend.

"Heh, heh," Roger chortled in weak laughter. "I was just kidding. Wanted to see if you'd fall for it."

The boys brought their appetites. They'd used to something to eat about this time of night," Roger flopped me off.

"Food for this mob!" I counted 20 noses.

"Here's a whole loaf of bread and half of another," Roger informed me, having left the kitchen, "and a couple dozen eggs. What we need is some ham or bacon."

"Ham or bacon," I echoed. "How many points do you think we have!" As usual, I felt lacking.

I needn't have. Roger remembered the tin of Polish ham which had recently been sent us as a food parcel. "That'll be absolutely out-of this world." I wish it had been.

Woman Charged After Complaint Made by Husband

Bancroft Man Says He Was Shot at While in Bed

Bancroft, Ont., May 16 (CP)—Police here said they are holding Mrs. Jennie Belle Hannah on a charge of having on her person a loaded revolver following a complaint by her husband that he was shot at as he lay in bed Tuesday. Bancroft is 65 miles northwest of Belleville.

Hannah told police he was awakened by his dogs "kicking up a rumpus." When he raised his head to look out a window, a bullet whizzed itself in the wall behind him after passing through a pillow near his head.

The woman, he said, are legally separated. Mrs. Hannah lives with friends in Bancroft while her husband farmed about two miles outside the community.

Police said they visited his house where she was staying and found an unregistered revolver. She has been taken to Belleville to await trial.

The woman has been released on her own bail to appear in police court in Bancroft on Wednesday.

ASBESTOS STRIKE LEADERS CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Aftermath of Bloody Clashes Between Police and the Strikers

Sherbrooke, Que, May 16. (CP)—Eight men are charged of conspiracy charges against asbestos strike leaders was scheduled to start here today, an aftermath of bloody clashes between police and strikers more than a week ago.

Meanwhile, Premier Duplessis today night the Canadian Confederation of Catholic Workers announced in a statement its intention of appealing to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa to invoke third-degree methods used by Provincial Police against strikers rounded up in mass arrests.

The C.C.W. statement, arising from an enquiry which the union claimed to have made in the conduct of police at Asbestos, May 5-7, charged the provincials with committing "acts of barbarism to those in Germany under the Nazis and in Russia under Communist camps."

The most recent arrests at the weekend totalled 15, including men described by police as leaders of the strike that since Feb. 13 has tied up production by five asbestos mining companies which normally turn out 80 per cent of the world's asbestos.

Among those arrested were Rodolphe Hamel, president of the federation of asbestos workers, which is affiliated with the C.C.C.W., Daniel Lessard, federation secretary, Rene Hamon, an organizer, and Armand Larrivee, president of the Asbestos local of the federation.

All were arraigned Saturday on charges of "conspiracy to incite illegal gatherings and resisting police."

Explain of Treatment

The C. C. C. W. statement said that during mass arrests by provincial police May 5 at Asbestos "no one workers were "literally massacred," some "marked for life."

It added that authorities of the Canadian Johns - Manville Company, largest of the strike-bound companies, were aware of the atrocities being committed on their property in improvised chambers of torture and were not questioned in the nurses residence of the company plant, the C. C. C. W. claimed.

A provincial police spokesman in Montreal said that arrested strikers were detained in such a building in Asbestos. He denied that police have used third degree methods.

He said police had no alternative but to use force in the face of resistance offered by the strikers and listed the actions which had led to the reading of the Canadian Riot Act in Asbestos.

The outbreak of violence May 5 occurred when provincial police stationed in the strike area were attacked when they rushed road blocks set up by the strikers to prevent outside workers from entering the town to work in the Canadian Johns — Manville plant.

The 5,000 workers went out on strike to enforce demands for 15-cents-an-hour increases in their basic hourly pay to bring it to $1 and other benefits.

TORNADO STRIKES SOUTHERN PART PANHANDLE STATE

Four or More Dead Property Damage Heavy

Amarillo, Tex., May 16 (AP)—A skipping, whip-sawing tornado chewed up a four square mile area in Amarillo tonight, killing four persons. About 65 were injured.

It was the first destructive tornado in the 62-year-old history of this "Panhandle" capital of 102,000 people.

Although many sections of Amarillo were hit, the tornado's most destructive blow fell on the southern area dotted largely with new homes and a new, all-negro cloudburst —and hailstones as large as a man's fist —added to the damage.

The dead were identified as Mrs. Lola Martin, 30; Eva McPherson 65; George McPherson, 67; and Mrs. Ira Sawcroft wife of her husband farmed about two miles outside the community.

Police said they visited his house where she was staying and found an unregistered revolver. She has been taken to Belleville to await trial.

The woman has been released on her own bail to appear in police court in Bancroft on Wednesday.

53-Year-Old Church Levelled In $300,000 Fire

Quebec, May 16 — (CP)—An inquiry was ordered today by Fire Commissioner Emile Boutean into a $300,000 Sunday morning blaze that left St. Vincent De Paul Church in ruins and damaged adjoining buildings including a school and hostel for poor children.

Exact cause of the fire breaking out near a tower of the church, only a few feet from its wooden shingled roof, was undetermined, was not known.

Mayor Lucien Pouliot, director of the institution which included church, school and hostel, said he thought the fire could not have been responsible. Curs Gaston Pombriand offered a similar theory.

The fire left 300 school-children without accommodation, damaged wing while 32 priests and brothers belonging to St. Vincent De Paul Order, and 83 boarders were left without shelter.

Spectators Injured

Thousands of Quebecers watched fire-fighters battle the flames and a number of spectators suffered minor injuries.

Quebec City fire department field aid attendants reported that 53 firemen and spectators were treated for minor injuries during the disaster. Most were suffering from a general alarm. None required hospital treatment.

The fire came just after hundreds of parishioners had walked out of eight o'clock mass.

Hearing on Eisler Extradition Case Adjourned to May 24 by Magistrate

London, May 16 — (AP) — A magistrate in Bow Street court today adjourned until May 24 a hearing whether Communist fugitive Gerhart Eisler should be extradited to the United States.

The hearing on the United States request was begun shortly after Eisler arrived at Bow Street court from Southampton. He is charged in the U.S. as a political refugee from the United States.

The court ordered Benjamin Eisler's lawyer that he be permitted to see his client there.

The bespectacled 52-year-old Communist leader was ordered earlier by a Southampton magistrate's court to show cause in Bow Street why he should not send him back to the United States to stand trial on perjury.

Four Polish diplomats were at the court when the car with Eisler arrived. The Polish Ambassador Edward Michalowski has a date with Foreign Secretary Bevin later in the day to protest because Scotland Yard men lugged the squirming Eisler from the ship.

Gunman Invades Wiener Roast at Port Colborne, Kills One, Hits Another

Port Colborne, May 16 (CP)—George James Szentkiry, 28, of Humberstone, Ont., today was charged with murder in connection with the moonlight beach-party slaying of Harold Szentkiry, 18, and the wounding of Richard Joseph, 19, both of Buffalo, N.Y.

Szendrey was charged in non-jury Welland after the slaying on the beach near here Sunday. Joseph was in fair condition in Welland hospital, but no effort has been made to remove a bullet from his chest.

Investigators said a man carrying a heavy calibre revolver accosted the youths and two girls early Sunday as they were roasting a wiener roast attended by a group of young people from Buffalo, N.Y. They said the stranger fired upon the young men after announcing:

"I want the girls."

The first shot felled Szentkiry as he stooped over to shake sand from his shoes. The second hit the crook of Joseph's arm and pierced the youth's chest at a downward angle.

The girls, Lydia Luisi, 16, and Geraldine Florite, 18, screamed with terror. The gun had been the last of the beach party group to leave the resort beach, seven miles east of here, and their cries brought no help to the lonely beach on the Lake Erie shore.

While Szentkiry lay dying and Joseph writhing in pain, the gunman put the revolver in his belt, sat down on the sand and lit a cigaret. He puffed there, paying no attention to the moans of his victims.

Helps Wounded to Feet

The girls helped Joseph to his feet. As they did so the gunman jumped up, threw away his cigaret and pressed his revolver against Lydia Luisi's head. He muttered:

"You girls come with me."

Joseph, bleeding severely, lurched toward the girls.

"You're not going to take them" he told the killer.

"I'm going with them."

With his strength ebbing, Joseph snatched the gun from the attacker's belt and fired two shots. Both missed their mark but served to rout the gunman. Joseph dropped the weapon into the sand. Lydia Luisi picked it up and tried to shoot at the fleeing man, but the gun failed to fire.

Thinking Szentkiry dead, the girls helped Joseph to the party's automobile and the youth drove half a mile to a farmhouse from where police and a doctor were summoned. The youths were taken to hospital, where Szentkiry died a few hours later.

Police said they found Szendrey in an upstair bedroom of an unoccupied cottage near the beach. He offered no resistance. They arrested him at gunpoint.

Said to Have Suffered Spells

A veteran of four years in the Canadian Army and winner of numerous marksmanship awards, Szendrey was said to have suffered "spells" in which he had not been "himself" since his engagement to Miss Szentkiry was broken three months ago.

His step mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Szendrey, said he refused to keep him at her house after he was released from the army. She said "I couldn't afford to keep him for nothing —he wasn't paying me any rent."

She was taken in by Mrs. Charles Szentkiry, a neighbor, after she had sold her husband's farm and pay board later. She and Mrs. Szentkiry related strange Saturday afternoon that Szendrey had told her he'd secured to change color."

The man's step mother didn't hear the shots of arrest until she heard it on the radio.

No Target Set for U.K. Exports To Canada; Sky is Limit

—WILSON

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)— Harold Wilson, president of the United Kingdom Board of Trade, told a press conference today that reversal of the sterling-area food agreements in 1950 dependent on United Kingdom sales in Canada.

To that end, the top-ranking British trade official said: "We must not fall in our mission to increase exports to our country."

The U.K. he added, would spend in Canada every dollar available for the purpose and payments would mean more than $400,000,000 a year.

Mr. Wilson on a three-week trade crusade in the Dominion told 30 odd newspaper men that Britain, meanwhile was discussing a one-year trade agreement with Russia.

Anglo-Soviet Trade Discussed

As questions were fired at him on Anglo-Soviet trade, Mr. Wilson said discussion for the 1949 "plain talking" trade trip to Canada was to explain some of the "misconception" that have arisen because of the present restrictions on sales behind the iron curtain.

U.K. he said, was not trying to sell any goods, which Canada might need, to iron curtain countries. British sales to the Soviet, Poland and Czechoslovakia were a fraction of sales to overseas.

Trading, Mr. Wilson explained, the U.K. sold Russia only about $1,000,000 worth of goods in a year time and owed several hundreds of millions to Canada for wheat, he pointed out.

But there was this difficulty between the U.K. and Canada and the United States. Britain had used her dollar holdings in the U.S. to pay for Canadian goods. She now was not earning sufficient dollars to pay for imports.

"The solution is in increased exports as fast and as far as possible," he said. "There is no limit for U.K. exports to Canada. "The sky is the limit."

Isaacs appeared in police court, tough, Ont., and Will Powless, the Woman's husband, were held as material witnesses.

Start Unloading Canadian Ship At Bristol, Eng.

Bristol, England, May 16 (Reuters) —Longshoremen at Avonmouth Port of Bristol, today started unloading cargo from the 7,-145 ton Canadian ship Montreal City.

On Saturday they had refused to handle the ship's cargo in accordance with their pledge not to work any Canadian ship whose crews use the services of the striking Canadian Seamen's Union.

Three gangs of longshoremen were working on the Montreal City today after the union had said they would demand that the National Dock Labour Board impose penalties if the men did not unload the cargo. Some longshoremen still refused to work in the ship, however.

Members of the C.S.U. went on strike March 31 after ship owners in the Canada Steamship contracts with the rival Seafarers' International Union (A. F.L.).

Say Russians Plan to Bring Strasser Back

Berlin May 16 (Reuters) — Russian authorities in Germany are planning to bring Otto Strasser, former Nazi leader, back to Germany from Canada to lead a pro-Soviet Nationalist movement, the British licensed newspaper, Monchen Kelly, says today.

Strasser, who broke with Hitler in 1930 and subsequently lived in exile, has lived on a farm near Bridgetown, N.S., for the past four years, the paper said. He said he had applied to authorities in the U.S. occupied zone to return to his homeland to lead a "rally of German Democratic forces." His application has been refused.

Montag Echo says "Otto Strasser already has very close links with Moscow before 1939 when he was leader of the Black Front" (anti Hitler Nazi organization).

EAST ZONE REDS REPORTED PILING UP BIG 'JA' VOTE

60 P.C. Turnout on First Day's Balloting

By WES GALLAGHER

Berlin, May 16 — (AP)—Eastzone non-communists today were reported rolling up a huge "Ja" vote to give Russia a German "government" at its back before the Paris Big Four conference.

Communist - controlled news agencies said there was a 60-per-cent vote turnout yesterday, first day of two-day balloting for a "people's congress."

The percentage presumably will be much higher by the end of voting tonight — and virtually solid "yes" of a single list of candidates carefully chosen by eastern - zone communist-front organizations.

The "people's congress" is expected to set up a government for Germany with great speed.

The Soviet Union then will be able to talk to the Council of Foreign Ministers on German problems from the Paris Big Four conference.

The Russians are expected to claim that now being formed in the Eastern Germany.

Britain, the United States and France banned voting for the "people's congress" in their zones. Western commanders-in-chief have selected about 500 delegates to represent the western sectors of the Congress, which will have about 2,000 members in all.

The Soviet-controlled German agency reported 58.3 per cent of the citizens of East Berlin went to the polls yesterday and gave figures as high as 75 per cent from the Russian Zone.

There were reports here of threats against those who might vote "no" — a communist — led political groups drove hard for a turnout.

The Soviet - controlled German press quoted Otto Grotewohl, the left-wing top of today's edition. It was largely ignored by Western Berlin papers.

30 P.C. Increase In Wage Rates Would Be Sought

Montreal, May 16 (CP)— The Canadian Congress of Labor Way Employees (C.C.L.) today announced its intention of asking a 30-per-cent increase for its 25,000 members when the present agreements with the railroads expires July 16.

At the same time representatives of the International Brotherhoods affiliated with the A.F.L. Railway Employees Department ended a two-day policy meeting here which was to govern working conditions on the agenda.

More than 170,000 Canadian railroad workers belonging to both groups were granted a 17-cent increase last July 1.

The average railroad workers pay at present is $1.09 cents an hour.

Frank Hall, chairman of the General Grievance Board of International Brotherhoods affiliated with the A.F.L. Railway Employees Department ended a two-day policy meeting here which was to govern working conditions on the agenda.

The new law limits the color of the oil to yellow or red with 1.6 of a yellow or yellow-red combination.

Mass-Appeal Advertising Methods, Hard-Hitting Sermons Used by C. of E.

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 16—(CP)—Mass-appeal advertising methods as well as hard-hitting sermons are the Church of England's weapons in its fortnight-long campaign against London "paganism."

The campaign, which has 500 churches, spectacular parades of sobered clerics walking through city streets on foot or in St. Paul's Cathedral opened the "Mission to London" Sunday.

During the next two weeks, loudspeaker vans, billboards and screens and skywriting will be used to overcome what Bishop William Wand calls the "crass paganism of central London and to capture the indifferent."

Bishop Wand gave the two objects of the mission — to make the half-hearted full-hearted and to capture the indifferent — in a message in the mission's headquarters, he studied a military-style map on which little red flags for the next two weeks at the mission will "fight for souls."

Many London churches where special sermons are being preached every day for the next two weeks at the mission will "fight for souls."

Many London churches are carrying out extra advertising campaigns in their own parishes. Even the 1,000-year-old St. Augustine's, Fulham. He toured the parish in a car, and preached in fields Sunday afternoon urging people to attend the St. Augustine's service.

Later in the day he visited several public houses to "meet the people."

One church, St. Stephens in Walbrook, has a lead from the book of London's Windmill Theatre. The home of the naked thing to four-a-day burlesque and it's packed twice a day. The West End. Windmills proud boast is that throughout the wars years of blitz and buzz bombs "we never closed."

Posters outside St. Stephen's proclaim: "We never close either."

U.S. Government Steps Into Strike At Ford Plant

President of Union Talks With Mediation Director

Washington, May 16 (AP)— The government today stepped into the Ford strike in an effort to get a settlement.

Walter Reuther, President of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.), visited Cyrus S. Ching, Federal mediation director, and talked with him about the strike.

Coming out or Ching's office, Reuther told a reporter, in reply to a question, that Ching's Agency Conciliation Service plans to "have a man there today"—meaning at the strike negotiations in Detroit.

The union had asked the mediation service to intervene in the strike.

President Henry Ford II gave a qualified approval to government intervention as the strike's effects in wage and production increased to an unofficially estimated $50,000,000.

Ford asked Cyrus S. Ching, head of the United Nations mediation service, to "help us find a peaceful" settlement other than the strike itself before he steps into the dispute.

One of these was Ford's yet-to-be-ratified five-cent-an-hour wage increase, which will have about 2,000 members in all.

The strike United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) who walked out May 3 on a charge of "speed-up" have denied Ford's statement.

Given ideal atmospheric conditions, it is possible to receive television broadcasts well over the 70-mile range which ordinarily is considered to be the very top limit.

This was proven in the city on Friday evening at Booth Radio store, Front Street, when a domestic television model manufactured by Stewart-Warner, broadcasts were received from the Buffalo station.

On a coaxial cable network hook-up flights from New York at Madison Square Gardens were broadcast from Buffalo and picked up by the machine, as well as wrestling direct from Buffalo. Later Broadway Review was received on the screen, all broadcasts being received very clearly.

From fifteen to twenty persons witnessed the broadcast in the Booth Radio Store.

SEEDING OPERATIONS NEARLY COMPLETED

Seeding operations throughout the immediate Belleville district are now nearly completed, according to farmers living in the neighboring townships.

Also this was indicated by a drive through the rural district over the weekend when it was seen that early grain was already well sprouted, or that fields had been worked and grain sown.

One farmer was heard to say that large amount of grain had been sown during the past week, while another said he had completed seeding—on the earliest date that he could remember.

Generally speaking fall grain and pasture is in very good condition, although in many instances rains have not yet been turned out to pasture.

RAILWAY TIES ABLAZE BUT LITTLE DAMAGED

Ties along the right-of-way of the Canadian National Railways siding on South Front Street, were reported ablaze Sunday afternoon when firemen were called to extinguish the fire. Firemen said a passing motorist noticed the blaze and turned in the alarm. Very little damage resulted, it was stated.

APPLE BLOSSOMS NEARING FULL BLOOM

Just ope week behind "Blossom Sunday" in the Niagara peninsula, apple blossoms in the Bay of Quinte area are now coming into bloom with the occasional tree now to be in full bloom, Hawthorn orchards generally have not yet come into full bloom.

Indications are for a heavy load of blossoms on the trees, it is stated.

Prospects for a good strawberry crop are not quite so good, however, with many farmers reporting their patches as disappointing. This is due to plants drying up during the late growing season.

Scouts, Guides, Cubs, Brownies Attend Service

Addressing the Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies on the occasion of their annual church parade, held in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday morning, the Reverend H. O. Taylor told them, "Of all the boys and girls in the city you have the most the most fortunate."

"There are millions of boys and girls who have no homes," the minister asserted, "who will have had no breakfast today, and perhaps will have neither dinner nor supper. You should be thankful and proud that you live in Canada where there is comfort and plenty. How fortunate you are, too, to have men and women who are willing to give leadership, expending their time and energy to help you to become good citizens.

Commissioners in Charge

The parade was in charge of Mr. E. R. Wilson, Scout Commissioner, and Mrs. J. Watson, Guide Commissioner. Falling in at the Collegiate campus the boys, girls, cubs and scouts met in their contrasting uniforms, moved off along Church Street and down Victoria Avenue to the church. It was a thrilling sight, this living monument to the faith of a good man, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who founded Scouting and the Cub velop character and good citizenship, and to inculcate loyalty obedience, self-reliance and thoughtfulness for others.

The Rev. Mr. Taylor, in his address, made reference to the law and promise of Scouts and Guides. "Your law tells you to obey," he stated. "There are many important things in the world to obey, because those in authority are trying to help you to do the best place for you to live in.

"You promise to do your duty to God and the King. You must look in your Bible and study the Ten Commandments carefully, you will find your first promise your duty to God. We are living in this heavenly age and of course God has made it lovely. He is a Father Who loves us and wants us to be happy.

Makes It Possible

"Similar to this is the second commitment your duty to country or thyself." What a wonderful world it would be if everyone loved everyone else as much as he loved himself. You do not find it so easy to love others because has done you some mean trick. If we trust Jesus He changes our hearts so that it makes it possible to love others.

"Nobody is a good citizen unless he is doing good and trying to help those around him. If you have caught the idea of Scouting, you will think of others, not of yourself. Unless you catch this spirit, which is the spirit of Jesus, Canada will not be the place we went it to be."

Appropriate hymns, chosen by the Scout Committee, included "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Jesus Loves Me," and "Land of Our Birth." "O Canada" and "I Would Be True," was sung by Miss Muriel Johson, accompanied by Mr. Donald Johnston, organist.

Leaders in Charge

Leaders in charge of the Brownies were: Pack No. 1, Mrs. A. G. Tooth, Mrs. Pullen; No. 2, Mrs. H. Samuels, Miss Cole; Pack No. 3, Mrs. Ryan, Mrs. Hall; Pack No. 4, Mrs. Gaskin, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Wager. For the Guides, Captain Sovier and Lieut. Jordon were in charge of Company 2; Captain Andrew Stewart and Lieut. Dorothy Stewart in charge of Company No. 7.

Cubmasters of the First Belleville Pack, Mrs. P. Nichol; Second Belleville Pack, Mrs. Kemp (Mrs. Aselstine in charge); Fourth Belleville Pack, Miss Lois Kellaway; Eighth Belleville Pack, Miss Dorine Cunningham (Mrs. Ashley in charge).

Scoutmasters Kenneth Smith, Eric Smith and Stan Cornwell were in charge of the First, Second and Fourth Belleville troops respectively and committees of these troops were organized by A. S. Lewis, Dan Stewart and Alf. Symons. O. C. Owen, president of the local association, was in attendance, as well as past commissioners and committees, which attests to the loyalty of the local leadership.

The one complaint emanating from the Earl Street area, Mr. Thorne picked up a large golden retriever and collie, which were definitely vicious and had killed by the dog catcher. The dog was wearing no collar or tag. It was stated the boy had bitten one boy and had torn the trousers of another.

Also on Burton Street, a small boy was reported to have been bitten on the leg by a dog running loose. Numerous complaints of this nature have been received from this area, it was stated.

Power Engineers Hold Meeting

The Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Institute of Power Engineers held a meeting recently in the Hotel Quinte.

Chairman McWilliams of the Chapter introduced Mr. G. M. Bray, sales manager of the A. P. Green Fire Brick Co. Ltd., Toronto, who spoke on Refractory Day Refractory Applications in the Power Field, and the Value of Refractories Accounts for Economical Maintenance,"

Following Mr. Bray's talk, an open forum discussion was on the gathering, and which took place over a coffee lunch served through the A. P. Green Mexico, Missouri plant. This film showed the various processes used in the manufacture of A. P. Green fire brick products and specialty products. The full story was shown in this film right from the "Open Pit" to the finished fire brick, right through to the final presentation to the customer.

After the film showing, there was an open question period which was conducted by the I. F. E. members in asking questions from the film applications and concerning their own particular plants.

Entertaining films were afterwards shown by the A. P. Green Company covering a fishing trip through the French River district, and a canoe trip through Algonquin Park.

Film and Talk On Newfoundland Enjoyed by Group

The May meeting of the Foxboro Film Group, held in Foxboro Public School, was featured by showing the film "Opening of Newfoundland's Parliament."

In the absence of Mrs. W. Sine, Mrs. Ion acted as secretary. She was instructed to proceed at once to place insurance on projector.

Mrs. Rikley introduced Mrs. Waller who was to give a talk on Newfoundland.

A film Newfoundland — Sentinel of the Atlantic," was also shown.

Mrs. Waller gave a short historical sketch of the island. It has an area of 42,000 square miles and also 110 thousand square miles of territory on the mainland. English, Irish, Scotch and French.

In the early years English vessels came to the island to fish and returned to England with their catch. In 1933 on account of financial instability responsible government was suspended and a temporary commission government was established consisted of three members of Newfoundlanders and three Britishers.

When war broke out a great air base was built at Gander and the present Canadian Army Station at Stable. In 1946 they asked for return to responsible government and in 16.8 the vote for confederation with Canada received a majority. On March 31, 1949, Newfoundland became Canada's tenth province.

Mrs. Waller then told of a trip over the Newfoundland railroad and made the life of the people there very real to her audience.

Mr. Ward, National Film Board representative, arrived in time to show two films entitled, "The Lesile Bell Singers" and "The Alaska Seal Fishing."

Everyone enjoyed a social half hour at lunch which was served by several of the school girls.

Y Holds Spring Open House Activities

A capacity audience filled the Y.M.C.A. last Friday evening for the Y.M.C.A. Spring Open House program for the Spring season. At 8:30 p.m. the boys and girls of the Physical Department commenced their display on the gymnasium floor under the direction of the various leaders of the department.

The young boys of the Prep and Junior divisions gave a demonstration of games of low organization. These games were simple yet permitted maximum participation and enjoyment both on the part of the participators and the audience. Demonstrations were given on the parallel bars, pommel horse and mats by Ken Trumpour, Stan Creeggan, Geo. Locke, Doug Soule, John Brownell, John Maxwell, Fred Wells and Don Calms who played the part of the town mute to the enjoyment of the whole group.

The girls of the Prep and Junior divisions gave a demonstration of maze marching led by Joanne Clarke and Barbara Smith. The leaders for this excellent march were Joan Allen, Elaine Clarke and Jean Ellis. The Galbraith sisters Greta and Kay amused the audience with a novelty singing and dance act.

The feature attraction in the gym activities was a weightlifting act by the British Empire weightlifting champion Sgt. Jack Varcaleau who appeared by kind permission of O/C Cpl. Tom Mills, commanding officer of 6 R. D. Assisting Sgt. Varsleau was Tommy Felder who helped the audience with his performance. Sgt. Varcaleau made a short talk to the boys on the girls present, so much so that an autograph was in great demand at the end of his performance.

Movies Shown

Following the gym display movie were shown in the boys' department. These were so popular that another demonstration could not be found. The refreshment booth was ably completed by the Y's Men's club who were in charge. Many and favorable were the comments as to the beauty of this room.

The Open House program draws to a close another successful Y.M.C.A. season. With the coming of the hot weather the program is now centered on outdoor activities at the waterfront. Preparations are now being made for the annual Boys' and Girls' Camp. The physical department under the direction of Doug Eaton, the physical director, is now planning an active swimming program which will commence the Y.M.C.A. summer program. Inquiries are welcomed at the Y as to the nature of this program. The program director Drummond C. Mitchell says that there is a readiness for the boys and girls within the Y. membership.

Expensive Fun For Prankster

It might have been fun to see the girls jump when a big firecracker went off with a "bang" just behind them. But it was rather expensive fun at that.

At least that must be what Raymond Carr, aged 22, of Strachan Street, realizes today after being required to pay 25 fins and costs for his prank.

Sunday police received at least two complaints of firecrackers being dropped behind girls and young women as they walked past on the street. A short time later the patrol officer caught Carr in the act and he was escorted off to the police station where he pleaded guilty to the offence and paid his fine.

Girls Hold Swim Meet in Y Pool

On Wednesday evening next the girls of the Y.M.C.A. will be acting as host to their parents in the swimming pool at the Y. For some months previous the girls have been hard at work on swimming tests and now they wish to display their new learned skills to their parents. The instructors, instructors, Jean Tilker, Diane Clarke and Joan Allen, will be present to tell parents of their child's progress during the months. Because many parents work Wednesday afternoon it has been decided that the pool will be open from 6.00 to 8.00 so that parents and children might swim together in the pool. A similar program for the boys and their parents has been planned for Thursday, May 26th.

Destroyer Ensign Safely Placed In Naval Museum

Ottawa, May 16 (CP) — A soiled and ragged remnant of a famed sea-fighter will find a permanent resting place in the Halifax Naval Museum.

It is the white ensign of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, torpedoed in August, 1943, three years after it had been commissioned in Canadian service and after it had knocked out two German U-boats.

Only one of the crew of 146 survived. He is Stoker A. W. Fisher, of Black Diamond, Alta.

The flag which once flew from the St. Croix found its way into Swedish hands. It had been given to one of 20 Swedes the destroyer plucked from the stormy Atlantic, seven days after torpedoes struck the Swedish motor ship Sucia, in August, 1942.

It was presented to Canada in a brief ceremony at the residence of Per Wikman, Swedish minister to Canada.

A note of thanks from the 20 rescued Swedes was also presented to Canada along with the ensign.

The St. Croix was one of six destroyers Canada obtained when the United Kingdom gave the United States rights to naval bases in Newfoundland in return for 50 American destroyers in 1940.

'Zombies' Win Mixed Bowling League Title

Round Square dancing rounded out an enjoyable evening.

Flinton Boy Loses Nearly All Fingers When Dynamite Cap Explodes

With nearly all the fingers of both hands blown off by the blast of a dynamite cap, nine-year-old William Creighton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Creighton, Flinton, 50 miles northeast of Belleville, is in critical condition in hospital.

Hospital authorities stated all the fingers of the lad's left hand had been blown away with two of three fingers of the right hand being lost.

The Creighton family had moved recently into their home two miles east of Flinton and in housecleaning the attic, the mother had found the dynamite caps. She did not know what they were and it is believed the boy had commenced playing with them, a hammer was found near the boy after the accident. The accident occurred early Saturday afternoon.

Dr. M. G. Dales of Tweed, gave the lad first aid and ordered him to Belleville hospital where he was operated on by Dr. G. S. Cronk.

The Creighton boy is one of six children. One other child, a boy, was slightly burned by the exploding cap, it was stated. Provincial Constable Stout of Northbrook investigated.

Kinsmen to Have Colorful Opening For Convention

The Kinsmen convention will have a very colorful opening on Saturday morning when the Kinsmen Boys' Band commences proceedings with a parade outfitted in their new uniforms.

The boys received their new uniforms last week after a four-month delay because of shortage of materials. The material for the uniforms is the type procurable from the United States. The uniforms are very colorful and instead of outfitting the boys in tunics the Kinsmen Club decided on capes for the boys.

The capes are made of wool and have a blue gold reversible which is a type of rayon material and is very expensive. A large Kinsmen crest is in the back of the cape and the cape is trimmed with the colorful gold braid. The crest is on the front of the hats which the boys are to wear. The pants are made of heavy wool and are navy blue with a gold stripe down the side of the leg.

A small-gold braid has been added to the collar of the coat and the boys' to use on hot days. The collars when closed are very close fitting and the braid may be worn instead of the boys having to keep the neck done up tight.

Wear White Shirts

For the present time the boys of the band will wear white shirts with the uniforms and arrangements are being made to try and outfit them with white shirts with the lining of the cape. It may be some time before these can be obtained as the cloth will first have to be imported. The ties are expected to arrive shortly for the uniforms. They are to be purple with a small crest in the middle.

There are 47 boys in the band and it is hoped that there will be 50 members within the near future. The parade is scheduled to begin at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday morning from the Quinte Hotel and proceed on a downtown route back to the hotel. A grand display of Indians in full costume from the reservation will also be presented.

MARSHAL DODGE DIES

New York, May 16 — (AP) — Marshal J. Dodge, 72, one of the organizers of the Todd Shipyards Corporation, died yesterday while en route from Britain to New York aboard the liner Carolina, his office reported. He was a director of the Corporation from 1917 to 1946 when he became its European representative. Dodge also engaged in a lumber business in Canada.

SEN. J. MURDOCK, FORMER CABINET MINISTER, DIES

Rose From Trainman to Become Authority on Labor Relations

Guelph May 16 (CP)— Senator James Murdock, 71, a one time Liberal federal cabinet minister who represented Ontario in the Upper House since 1930, died Sunday night in a rest home here. He had been in poor health since December.

He rose from a trainman to become an authority on labor relations and railway law and in 1921 was chosen as Minister of Labor in the first administration formed by Mackenzie King.

Born in Brighton, England, he came to Canada at the age of five and was brought up in the tannery district of southwestern Ontario. In 1890 he went to work for the Canadian Pacific Railway as a trainman on runs out of London, Ont.

Eight years later he was elected Canadian vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway trainmen, an office he held until 1921.

His first political activity came in 1921 when he successfully contested Toronto south for the Liberals. He was then made Senator Minister, he entered the Commons with an acclamation from East Hastings in January 1922. Also in 1922, he represented Canada at an International Labor conference in Geneva.

Defeated in 1925

Defeated in 1925 in Toronto High Park, he resigned his cabinet post. He was defeated again in 1926 and was appointed to the Senate March 30, 1930.

In 1924 the Commons referred to the committee on privileges and privileges a charge that the then Minister of Labor withdrew thousands of $4,000 from the home bank two days before that bank failed. Mr. Murdock was cleared and return his money to the bank's liquidator.

He became a storm centre in 1933 when he was ousted from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen during a registration days wage dispute He said he was blamed for not preventing a 1932 10 per cent wage cut on Canadian Railways.

Surviving besides his widow, the former Annette Follis of Toronto, are a son, R. H. Murdock of Windsor and a daughter, Mrs. C. Alexander Da Costa of Philadelphia.

The funeral will be held in Ottawa Wednesday, with burial in Toronto Thursday.

HEARING

He said a statement was read which threatened seizure of the property if the owners should ever return to United States waters unless Rieler was surrendered. The embassy statement said other measures were threatened "which included the closing of the Dynia-American Line (owners of the Stator) in the U.S.A."

The State Department said in Washington there would be no immediate comment on the charges.

The Foreign office spokesman said the Batory was in British waters "and is therefore under our jurisdiction and within our competence" to arrest Eisler on extradition charges.

Eisler was cited for contempt by the House Un-American Activities Committee on un-American activities unless first permitted to read a statement.

The House described him as No. 1 Communist agent in the United States and "one of the most dangerous men ever to set foot on American soil."

He later was convicted of passport frauds in a federal court and sentenced to one to three years.

Threatened Seizure

The Polish embassy announcement — Marshal Josef Pilsudski, leader who fled from the United States aboard the Polish ship, was removed forcibly from the Batory at Southampton Saturday.

The Polish embassy in London said in a statement yesterday that it had made the most energetic threat to seize the Batory the moment she returned to American waters.

The department said formal notice was served on the ship's captain that unless he gave up Eisler when the Batory put into Southampton "the attorney general will proceed against the steamship line for forefeiture of the vessel and other applicable penalties under United States law."

Police Blotter

Traffic offenders who persisted in speeding on city streets, or who failed to stop at stop signs on city streets, kept patrol officers in the police cruiser busy over the week-end. Several charges for the above offence were laid by police.

Liquor Control Act offenders also were in evidence with several being brought to the police station when found intoxicated on city streets.

Two week bill men were apprehended on vagrancy charges when they were found loitering in the horse stables at the fair grounds but were later given their liberty.

An epidemic of milk bottle thefts were reported on the Wilton Street area.

The company said however, that it hoped to be able to start work on the contract June 1. The union had asked that the talks start today.

Ford has insisted that the dispute be settled by arbitration. It says the contract calls for this. The company claims that arbitration is not proper—that a third party can't settle the case at hand.

A vote by Ford of Canada Plant's 62,000 strikers allows the wage issue has been settled at 5c an hour, 200 a day. The company's production that is placed unofficially at $20,000,000 weekly.

CLEANING UP

Clearance of cellars and attics for the removal of old papers serves more than one purpose. It can be made to bring in a little money and at the same time it may prevent a fire and even prevent the loss of a life, says the chief of Montreal's Fire Prevention Bureau. He finds that old papers properly bundled have a good dollar value but left to dry out in attics are a fire menace. He states that even in a small localized fire old papers can be a menace to life because of the noxious fumes they give off when burning.

Clearance of rubbish at this season is looked upon as a civic duty and is being impressed in every centre in the country for the safety and improvement of property. Labor so spent is rewarded with cleanliness, and removal of sources of possible fires.

MATTER OF MINUTES

So fast is flying today that the difference of time elapsed is small while the very high rate of speed is accelerated. The distance from London to Paris is just 221 miles, a very long distance when such journeys were undertaken a few hundred years ago. Today that 221 miles requires only a few minutes in the air. The other day the flight was made in 24 minutes and 1.8 seconds. The beaten record was 27 minutes, 38 seconds. These less than four minutes mark a new achievement in building of planes and the greater adjustment of man to the possibilities of the machine he is piloting through the air at a terrific pace.

The rate of increase of speed is measured in a matter of a few minutes. In other days races used considerable time. Today with the air developments, a winner gains but a few minutes over the previous holder but that is sufficient to award him the crown.

CHANGE

The change which has come over the world is marked in a special manner in England. It used to be that people thought in the manner of the verse:

"The stately homes of England!
How beautiful they stand,
Amid their tall ancestral trees,
O'er all the pleasant land."

Ottawa Journal comments that this is no longer true, for the cables have declared that most of the "stately homes" are no longer homes, that maintenance, taxes and death duties have taken them from the families which owned them through the centuries, turning them into schools, institutions and government offices.

"At the turn of the century, when the sun of the Victorian age had already begun to set, 2,500 private landlords shared half of England's land," the newspaper says. "Today there are only 462 estates of more than 1,000 acres. Less than fifty years ago dukes on an average possessed 142,000 acres, marquesses 47,000 acres, earls 30,000 acres, viscounts 15,000 acres and barons 14,000. Today one in every 12 acres is held by public bodies, the total being 5,000,000 acres, with holdings of famous and titled families correspondingly reduced. The forestry commission holds 1,440,000 acres; Crown commissioners 250,000 acres and the National Trust 142,000 acres, which include 1,000 mansions —many of them being turned into holiday centres for the general public.

"The British Empire and Commonwealth have changed more, on the surface at any rate, than England herself."

MOUNTAIN LABORATORY

India is taking a place in the matter of scientific discovery. A party of scientists will go to the Himalayas to find a site for a many-purpose scientific laboratory. It will be of the type of the Jungfrau laboratory in Switzerland with special departments dealing with the study of snow and glaciers and the contribution they make to the rivers of India, astronomical observations, cosmic rays, biological and geological research on the fauna and flora of the Himalayas. A year ago a party was sent out to find a site for the laboratory, about ten acres of flat land between 14,000 and 16,000 feet high.

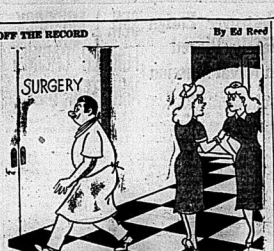
THE BIG FISH

I have a little fishing book
Describing rod and line and hook
And telling when and where
And just how large some species grow.

Time was I thought, and used to say:
The biggest fish all get away.
But here's a statement that astounds
"One swordfish weighed a thousand pounds!"



The bluefin tuna, it is told,
"That lives to be a few years

Is known, when it is brought ashore,
To scale nine hundred pounds or more."

Though 'twould be thrilling, I've no wish
To hook nine hundred pounds of fish.
Right here I make the statement plain:
I do not ask such luck as that.

I will forego the monster class
If I can land a three-pound bass.
With that contented I can be
I'll say it's big enough for me.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BEAUTY OF EARTH

God's greatest lecture to mankind is His unfolding of His springtime. George Eliot, in his little treasure of a book, "The Lifted Veil," says of Henry Fo:tt, "spoke of his joy at the inception of 'another springtime,' and he wondered how many more would be his to love and wonder at."

It is this time of year when the beauty of earth is most manifest. The leafing of the trees, the return of the feathered songsters, the budding and blooming of the gardens and fields. Flowers are what a festival of miracles! It is no wonder that the naturalists are loved and revered because of their kinship to God's marvelous works. You find immortality among them. Their song is universal — "Glory to God in the highest!"

Unknowingly you will note a blending of all beauty. Against a great background of green there are the endless colors of every hue and description. I sat in my library recently and noted a brilliant double rainbow in the eastern sky, the one duplicating the myriad colorings that bathe the beauty of the earth.

Every summer I await the appearance of the perfect white pond lily, emerging from the hidden mud in the lagoon before my island cottage. Now and then I have a time to wait out at midnight to catch the play of moonbeams upon those waters as they mingle with the sleeping buds of these sea-maidens' queens. In deep silence there is written then a poem that no human could compose in adequate metre, or perfection of rhythm.

Then there is the fragrance. How glorious the very smell of earth, and the carrying odor of forest, stream, or valley. No wonder the Hebrews in this earth after a summer shower, and everything of growth looks upon itself new life, after a drink from the sky!

This earth is the heritage of us all. We may become temporary owners of a little piece of surface, but its over-all beauty belongs to us all. If we love and appreciate it. As for the blue sky, the clouds, the sun, moon and the stars, each of us is a sole owner!

Sow Gives Birth To 22 Little Pigs Five Stillborn

Three sows giving birth to a total of 49 piglets, as recently reported from the farm of Mr. H. Tinney, Farnley township, have nothing on the record of a sow owned by Harold Lewis of Highland Grove.

Some time ago a sow owned by Mr. Lewis gave birth to 22 piglets, five of which were born dead. Seventeen of the litter matured. The general opinion among farmers is that large litters of pigs are not as profitable as the average litter.

Mackenzie's Column: Clay Hankering To Get Home For Some Fishing

By FRWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Gen. Lucius Clay, having written some of the great history of our time, is hankering to get home from Germany so that he can go fishing.

There's nothing which will put an overwhelming strain on his feel quicker than to get back to nature with rod and line. There is no more effective way to fray one's nerves as the song of a running reel.

So it isn't so surprising to find a host of distinguished men (and women, for that matter, among the disciples of Izaak Walton. They've found the secret that puts them right with their Maker, with their fellow men, and with themselves. It makes 'em fit, mentally and physically. It keeps 'em so.

Statesmen-Fishermen

I don't know whether the United States ever had a President who wasn't a fisherman. He has had many who were. Certainly there have been plenty among the statesmen of recent years, beginning with Harry Truman, his immediate predecessors were the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and Teddy Roosevelt.

Speaking of Hoover, did you ever hear the story of his big trout, Moby Dick?

Fish Story

During a trip to the United States Hugh Gibson at that time was Ambassador to Belgium, had been Hoover's guest in the Presidential summer camp in Rapidan, near Washington. The first day the President handed Gibson his fishing rod, and told the Ambassador to go catch a trout for dinner.

For a considerable time the angler fished with indifferent luck. He kept working along the stream until finally he came to a pool which looked as it was ideal for trout.

As the fly touched the water there was a violent swirl and a big strike like a ton of coal. The battle was long and thrilling, but finally the fish was brought to net and His Excellency found himself possessor of a trout weighing several pounds.

Gibson carried the trout back to the camp-house and gave it to the cook in the kitchen. A little later he happened to enter the room and, after taking a look in the kitchen, came to where his envoy was sitting.

"Hugh, where did you get that fish?" asked the President.

Gibson describes the pool.

"Why," exclaimed the President, "you've caught Moby Dick. He was presented to me by my citizens of ——, and has been hand-fed ever since."

LARGE-SCALE PANHANDLING

Begging was so rampant in Paris in the 1650s that its streets were patrolled by 400 men and 40,000 professional beggars.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

Being somewhat pear-shaped, I have had my anatomy patted, kicked, slapped and pinched by bodyguards and secret service men more than most. My only feeling is that assassins are generally a stupid and ineffectual lot. Somewhat the same view. But bodyguards apparently regard my wallet, my tobacco pouch, my bundle of unanswered letters as if they were the crown jewels. I carry in my left-hand filing cabinet, and in the right-hand one I am carrying in my overcoat pocket for the convenience of my bodyguard.

A man with full pockets is rarely an assassin. It is your empty-pocketed character who is the dangerous criminal.

In early 1944, returned from Italy to get ready for the Normandy landing, I managed an interview with Dr. Edward Benes, then London. And having time to spare before the appointment in the Czech embassy down back of Buckingham Palace, I visited a fishing tackle shop in St. James's Street and picked up a pocket knife, a thick one in reality. One war a black-japanned metal fly box with two flat clips for holding trout flies in neat rows. Having still a half hour, I filled the box with new flies, too. Then I proceeded to the embassy.

The guard was a heavy, squat, Russian type with a flat face, a thick neck, thick arms, and a thick head. He helped me off with my overcoat, and I noticed he had a pat at my armpits. As he did so I felt the pocket knife on the landing, he held out his hand. I took the fly box from me. He opened it. He stared grimly into it. Then he put the envelope into the custody of another guard, who also appeared suddenly at Benes, who smilingly handed me back the envelope in his office. Then the guard took me upstairs to Dr. Benes' private study.

Dr. Benes, who had taken either of the positions he would probably not have reached later the United States, to which he was called. The greatest good fortune that ever came upon him was when these disappointments concerning his career.

All of which may constitute some comfort to many of us when we fail to achieve cherished aim in life.

Missionaries In China Still Sticking to Jobs

Ottawa, May 16 — (CP)—Despite repeated warnings from the Canadian Embassy at Nanking, most Canadian missionaries in China are sticking to their jobs regardless of the spread of communism.

The External Affairs Department reports some 100 Canadians in the city — about half of them missionaries — have indicated their plan to remain.

Meanwhile, an estimated 100 persons, mostly missionaries of various denominations and already in areas under communist control, continue their work with little or no communication with Canadian authorities.

The warnings from the Canadian Embassy were mild unless advising Canadians they should consider the advisability of not continuing their activities in North China because of the prospect of the spread of civil war and of disruption in transportation and communications.

First of these warnings went out early in March and others were issued later. As the war spread, the Embassy warned Canadians living in other areas likely to be affected.

$50 Still in China

The Embassy estimates that about 500 Canadians are still in China and that "a large proportion" of these are missionaries.

The total of 550 compares with an estimated 850 in China last December. The drop is indication of a further exodus on this account.

Last week Canada called home the destroyer Crescent, which had been patrolling off the China coast since February for an emergency evacuation of Canadian nationals if necessary.

In addition, a North Star aircraft in Hong Kong also was returned to the Dominion.

Most of the Embassy staff and two woman stenographers returned to Canada year December, leaving Ambassador Heeney and five members of the Embassy staff.

Missionaries will likely be the last to leave. The North American Council of Churches in New York, which co-ordinates the activities of Protestant Christian missionaries in China, has definitely indicated that they are not being forced to leave; and Roman Catholic missionaries plan to do the same.

NOW-IS THE TIME TO TAPER OFF

It was a good six weeks after the cast was removed from my left arm—I had worn it about six weeks before I had regained sufficient confidence to resume my daily somersaults and setting-up exercises. I had missed the somersaults particularly, while my arm was in the cast. When things go wrong and Tom, Dick and Harry barge in and interrupt your work with their trivia until you are about to explode — try this, instead of resorting to stimulant, sedative, bracer, cocktail, high ball, snitter or shot; Resume your hairpins and your French heels and get down and roll yourself like a hoop on the grass or the carpet or mat. If you don't come up laughing or chuckling at what, a few moments before irked you almost beyond endurance, take it from me you're on the road to betterment to the chimney corner. I urge any reader who thinks I'm facetious about this to send a stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (a clipping will not suffice) for the pamphlet on Somersaults.

Women are credulous creatures. In their "teens they are too patient to begin wearing splints, braces corsets, girdles, brassiers and other harness, and because they need these artificial supports are but because they are persuaded that the figure requires "molding."

Then the young woman begins wearing harness of any kind, her chance of developing or keeping a good figure is gone unless she takes exceptional pains to keep it. The only way one can keep fit is through regular daily general exercise. Calisthenics, dancing, setting-up drill, walking, running, skating, dancing, swimming, playing tennis, washing, ironing, scrubbing, gardening, riding bicycle and housecleaning and making beds are all good exercises to keep a girl fit.

Whether a woman or girl wears her "abdomen" (belly is the correct word) will provide in unfailing fashion if she does not wear a girdle. She is in her seventies and has never worn a girdle. Does a girdle keep the figure slender?

Her questions have been answered in the foregoing paragraphs. As a lucky girl—let's hope the old women do not peruse her to let her in their misery.

Everything I say about splints, corsets, braces, girdles, supports, crutches or props applies to the ordinary, normal girl or woman. If she is afflicted with defect or deformity of any kind should be advised by duly physicians in regard to the wearing of any kind of artificial support.

Girls and women who get no more daily exercise than is involved in riding to and from office, store or school, attending the theatre, playing bridge, resting at ball game or sitting on the tchotski tuberosities for hours, reading in the evening after a day of physical inertia, as so many women of sedentary occupations do, must expect to become prostrateously less fit, until they have less "love" or elasticity or firmness of flesh and less and less vite. After a woman has gone through the mill of the harness she can wear will give only a faint suggestion of a good figure, at the cost of much discomfort.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Unleashable

Please, please educate people to childhood diseases. Our 7-year-old son has chicken-pox, yet local health authorities will not allow the doctor say other members of the family may continue being among people until we are quarantined. Our neighbors criticize us for doing so. What is your opinion?

(Mrs. R. G.)

Answer—Prevention of spread of chicken-pox depends upon isolation of the patient and strict asepsis (conscientious soap and water cleanliness) in the care of the patient. Usually no quarantine is required. The child is kept out of school and other children are kept away with their child for three weeks, the maximum period of communicability. Your health officer and family doctor advised you correctly. Your neighbors are just neighbors.

Cs and D for Hot Flashes

Following the suggestion in your pamphlet on Hot Flashes I began dieting on calcium-rich foods and supplementing my diet with Ca and D, and in less than three weeks time got rid of the flashes. Formerly I had been unable to sleep and had them through the day too. Have recommended your booklet to several friends and they have found relief in its use.

Thanks a million. I feel like a new person! (Miss M. L.)

DISAPPOINTMENTS MAY BE ASSETS

Sometimes our disappointments turn out to be our greatest blessings. Nothing would involve us more certainly in ruin than to be granted everything we want in the way we want it and when we want it. Frustration followed by triumph is one of the surest evidences of a divine Power behind all things.

Abraham Lincoln had many disappointments in his life. We all know of his straitened circumstances in youth and his disappointment in love. But few people know that Lincoln was greatly disappointed just a few years before his election to the presidency because he was denied appointment to a Federal office. Shortly after this disappointment, he delivered his famous Cooper Union address, but his wife would not hear to their going to the eastern point; and so Lincoln sadly relinquished the idea. There was a cherished ambition!

Of course if he had taken either of the positions he would probably not have reached later the United States, to which he was called. The greatest good fortune that ever came upon him was when these disappointments concerning his career.

All of which may constitute some comfort to many of us when we fail to achieve cherished aim in life.

Friends of Christian Education

Mrs. Thrasher also said, "Christian education in West China has progressed greatly day leadership of the Christian schools. It has introduced Chinese students to western languages and has given them the best in scientific attitude, above all, it has crossed all barriers of race, denominational lines in the fellowship of the pursuit of truth."

ROSLIN Miss N. Creyke Addresses W.I.'s On Personality, Dress

Roslin — On Tuesday, Phillipston, Zion, Plainfield and Cryderman Women's Institutes met with the Roslin branch in the church hall at Roslin, where the district conference, "Personality and Dress" was held.

The conference opened at 10.30 a.m. Mrs. H. Chisholm introduced the conference leader, Miss Nora Creyke, of the Institute Department, Toronto, who led in a discussion on "Personality."

Several main points brought up were: "Analyze your own personality, be it gay or quiet"; "appearance is judged on the street and character only when we know a person well".

Desirable characteristics were a sense of humor; pleasant voice; tactfulness and conversational ability. Learn to do by doing. Concentration on things well done, helps to build tact; make comments thoughtful and intelligent.

Do the Simple Things First

Don't attempt something that is beyond you. Do the simple thing first, and in that way you will build up self confidence.

The army says: "Learn to fall, push before you pull.

Learn to expend emotional energy where it won't hurt others. Don't nurse your own tantrums (in a child) is to ignore the child when he misbehaves.

Another admirable quality listed was "tolerance". Learn from others and from them take the best.

A book recommended by the speaker was "How to Win Friends and Influence Them", by Dale Carnegie.

Voice Culture.

If you would improve your voice first you must hear it. Use your lips to form words; speak distinctly; proper pronunciations; a variety in pitch, speed and quality. Be able to form more interesting.

Reading aloud is an excellent exercise. Also join a choral reading class. If you want to be impressive express your thoughts in words, and speak slowly.

Conversational Ability

Conversational ability was an asset. Read both sides of a question so you will be able to form your own opinion. Read fairly intensively on some subject that interests you. Read the best important articles to be read at your convenience. Learn to listen with enthusiasm.

Conversational Guide Posts

No controversial issues, unless you know your group. If you have family troubles at home, stay home. Don't brag about your children. Never use profanity. Condemnation. Don't express likes and dislikes. Don't be superficial.

Conference adjourned for luncheon which was served by the Roslin ladies.

Afternoon session commenced at 1 p.m.

Charming Manner.

A charming manner consists of being able to forget yourself, and be at ease, and comfortable. How to attain it is no: Know good etiquette; if you don't know, ask and find out. Be natural is the correct thing to wear; be sure that your clothes fit, and check your appearance in a full length mirror.

Nervous mannerisms can destroy poise, discover habits, and then you can devise means of breaking them.

Appearance

This is the index of the other winner characteristics: An attractive appearance is never an accident, but rather the result of personal grooming. Eat and brains do go together.

One can do much about the basic structure but one can about the upholstery.

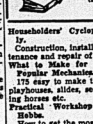
Good posture and cleanliness other essentials. Exercises are beneficial. Indians have no foot troubles.

Expression

Think a pleasant thought and smile a sweet smile. Buy shoes that fit. Don't worry, actually worry is just waste energy. Clothes improve poise.

Selection of clothes means buy clothes suited to the occasions needed. Suit your clothes to your figure, coloring and personality. Match your colors. Have print interesting and centralized.

A drape is slenderizing, provided it suits the silhouette, not outside. A contrasting yoke gives a wide shoulder, draws attention to face and minimizes hips.



Fit your clothes to leave room for a doubt. If there is no room there is no doubt. This rule applies to both slim and fleshy people. A good thing to do is choose accessories that will go with two or three costumes. Personal preference is seldom a wise selection in choosing a color, rather test colors with your hair, eyes or coloring for best choice.

Have grooming plan that fits your absolute immediate classening. Keep stain remover, orange stick and pumice handy at all times.

The speaker gave a demonstration for applying proper make-up.

Mrs. H. Chisholm on behalf of all present moved a vote of thanks to Miss Creyke for her helpful instructions and conference.

Mrs. Harry Harrison, of Plainfield, on behalf of the visitors, thanked the ladies of the Roslin branch for their kind invitation and splendid dinner.

IVANHOE Friends Honor Bride-to-be With Crystal Gift

Ivanhoe — One of the happy events of the month was a charmingly arranged crystal shower given in honor of Miss Mary Clements, popular bride-to- be, at the home of Mrs. Milton Shaw, on Friday afternoon.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This couple has a two-sided problem.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am almost 16 and very much in love with a fellow 20. We want to be married, but have decided to wait until at least a year after I graduate from high school, where I am now a senior. My parents do not know this boy and I are in love, or they would forbid me to see him any more, because he isn't of my own religion and nationality. I told him about this and we have come to an agreement by which we are sure we can be perfectly happy in spite of our differences on this point.

Another thing is that his mother is in a mental institution. It doesn't matter to me, but he insists that I tell my parents. If I did though, it would be another thing they would have against him, and they would most likely stop me from seeing him. I know they think they are doing what is best for me, but if they do break us up, they will hurt me more than they realize, for I am very sure he is my choice. What do you think I should do about this situation?

"Confused"

Dear "Confused":

You and your young man are in one of the most difficult situations that can confront any young couple.

I think, however, that since you do not plan to be married for quite awhile, you will be able to see your way more clearly as time goes on.

If I were you, I would not bring this matter up at all with your parents right now, but just go along as you evidently have been, doing in your friendship. There is no need for you to announce to your parents or any one else that you are in love and planning to be married. It is not understand of you to keep silent about this, as you are simply hiding your time until a suitable opportunity presents itself. After you have been graduated from high school, and have waited until you are a little older, you can tell your parents of your plans. In the meantime, if you are certain that both you and this young man fully understand all the difficulties involved in the marriage of two people of different nationalities and faiths, and also find out all the facts you can about the case of this mother's illness. It would not be a bad idea for the two of you to go together to the doctor who is most familiar with her case and talk things over with him. Then, when the right moment comes for your parents to know how things are between you and this young man, you will be able to discuss the whole subject intelligently in all its phases.

A romance that's bound to break up

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am an engaged girl of 17, now, and am having trouble with my fiance. He is quite jealous and even resents my going out with my girl friend on the nights I don't see him. Also, when I get dressed up to go out, he doesn't like it. He would be satisfied if I always just wore a house dress.

What advice can you give me?

A. A.

Dear "A. A.":

The best advice I can give you is to get yourself engaged and wait for another romance until you are old enough to make a wiser choice of fiancee. You might as well break off now, because I am very sure you are going to do so sooner or later anyway.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Card of sympathy to grandchild

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to send a sympathy card to a grandchild whose grandfather has died? I sent this card to the grandchild, and was strongly reprimanded because she said that I should have sent the card to her father as he is the direct mourner. I wished to express my sympathy to this grandchild and so sent the card to her with all good intentions. Will you please straighten out this question in our minds? — M. N.

I feel as you do . . . that it's difficult indeed to understand how anyone would not accept with grace and appreciation any message of sympathy, how anyone would unfeelingly pass over the good intentions that shine forth from any message of sympathy and, even in a time of mourning, indulge incriticism. Even if this grandchild considered that it would have been thoughtful of you to send the father a note of sympathy . . . and undoubtedly, under usual circumstances, it would have been . . . she should not have stooped to speak her criticism, to you or to anyone else, of your sending the card.

Too late to announce th eengagement formally?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. We have been engaged for eight month. Next week we are setting the date for our wedding. Is it too late to announce the engagement in the newspaper at the same time we announce the date of the wedding?

2. As our wedding would it be proper to have a ring-bearer If we don't have a flower girl?

3. Is satin correct for either a Spring or Summer wedding?

M. R.

1. If the engagement has not been announced at all . . . that is even in such a simple, informal way as the couple's telling their relatives and friends and the fiancee's giving her the engagement ring . . . it may be announced in the newspaper when the wedding date and plans announced. But if the couple's relatives and friends already know about the engagement, the news-item about the wedding may begin, "Plans have been made for the wedding of Miss . . . and Mr. . . . on Tuesday, June twenty-first, at four o'clock in The-Fair Church, the ceremony to be performed by The Reverend John Peter Allen, clergyman of the church". (Then, if you wish, add the other plans already made, names of attendants, and so forth.)

2. Yes . . . although today it is not usual to have a ring-bearer.

3. Yes . . . a satin wedding gown for a bride to wear satin at any time of the year.

Wear Bridesmaid's Dress at Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a bridesmaid at a friend's wedding to wear a dress she has worn to a wedding reception, and I am wondering if I should plan to change from my bridesmaid's gown to a street-length dress for the reception?

2. What would be an appropriate wedding gift? And how soon before the wedding should the gift be sent?

Dot

1.No. . . . the bride and her attendants wear their gowns during the reception. The wedding reception is part of the "hour of glory" for wearing this wedding gown.

2.Give anything appropriate for the new home that you think will be welcomed by the couple and that you decide will be agreeable to your budget . . . something in silver, crystal or glass, linen and so forth.

Fine Fashion Jewelry

By VERA WINSTON

THERE IS A wealth of beautiful costume jewelry just now, designed to co-ordinate perfectly with current fashions. For instance, a fine lace blouse, chiffon scarf, so perfect for suits and suit dresses, demands something delicate yet distinctive. Castleclifte fills the bill with a group of pieces that, when worn, carry the same theme, wear an urban air. This one, a circlet of rhinestones, sports a little golden twig from which tiny flowers grow.

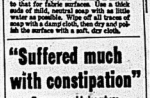
BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON



Are you getting weighty?

Fortunately for the world of women, the freak diet has passed into the limbo of forgotten fronzies. Men, the wise guys, never fell for them. If they decided that reducing was necessary, they consulted the old family Doc, had him lay down the law. Whether or not they kept the law was another matter. Anyhow they had all have-nots into a class. Or, one can follow a good system of setting-up exercises, such as may be found for the phonograph.

Sane daily work of the average women is not sufficient exercise, as there is a tendency to use certain muscles at the expense of others that are not brought into action at all. Any gym teacher will map out a program suitable for a person's age, weight and physical condition and, best of all, the kind of exercise one enjoys.

Wife Preservers

Upholstery leather cleanings is similar to that for shoes. Wipe it on a thick suds of mild, neutral soap with as little water as possible. Wash off lather with a soap with a damp cloth, then dry and polish the surface with a soft, dry cloth.

Sweet desserts should be passed by, if one would reduce

As cream and sugar are the enemies of the plump contingent, tea and coffee should be taken clear. Some demon coffee drinkers, pouring in the cream and adding quantities of sugar, can gain weight on that beverage alone. At first they may not like it clear but, in time, the appetite may make an adjustment; and accept it as not too bad.

Pastries, all sweet desserts, should be passed by, if one would reduce. The contents of the bon-box should never be touched. Butter must be limited to one pat a day. Nearly everyone eats more fats than they can burn up by normal activities, hence the vast numbers of heavyweights at beauty's waiting wall.

In any reducing program there should be included some daily exercise. Swimming, walking, horseback riding and golf are recommended by physical education experts. Over-exercise, of course, is as bad as too little, and the guarded application in a gymnasium is available to all Belleville and district girls in a class.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

He opened the can and turned the contents out a most beautiful ham imbedded in a thick coating of aspic. As Roger, sliding industriously, tossed slice after slice from table to frying pan, much of the aspic broke loose and fell to the floor. Soon we had aspic coated linoleum, and as the kitchen filled with hungry people attracted by the delicious smell of ham and coffee cooking, the footing became treacherous. Warmed and worked by so many feet the aspic flowed like glue, and I saw one strong man who had stood too long in one spot lean over and with both hands loosen first one foot and then the other.

It was little satisfaction next morning, as I scrubbed the floor, the cupboard doors, and the side walls; and retrieved plates from under the piano, behind the love seats, balanced on lamp shades, filled on the hearth — plates with ham fat congealed on them and remnants of scrambled eggs dried hard — to remember it was all my own fault.

Roger's new colonel apparently enjoyed the party at the Annex. Though the eggs had tarnished the silver tines of our forks to a dull gold, by some strong alchemy they also turned the gold of Roger's bars to silver.

I was still frowning a few days later, working my wrinkles deeper into the fertile ground of my forehead, when Roger — he had telephonitis — called to ask what I was up to.

"Not a thing," I fell into his trap.

"I've just run into a good deal for you," he said. "Met a chap who's introducing a fine line of cosmetics. He's giving away free facials. I told him I'd ask you if you'd like one."

"What's the use of my bother-ing with skin foods and such," I argued. "You know I'm not the type."

There was a suggestion of a pause on Roger's part. Then he continued — oh, ever so tactfully — that possibly at my age it was a good thing to think a little more about preserving oneself.

Something about the facial sounded so phony that I repeated: "You said it was free, didn't you?"

"Absolutely free."

"Well, send him over."

He wasn't a dapper little Frenchman: he was King Kong himself, built square like a football tackle, with low-growing thick black hair, teeth as large and yellow as an elk's. Sheer terror gripped me; I wondered whether he knew his own strength. If he got to erasing the wrinkles on my brow, he could erase me, too, and never know he'd done it.

He suggested I sit at a dressing table; he wanted me to watch the treatment in a mirror.

King Kong bound my hair with a towel, plaited another around my shoulders. He applied a generous dose of cleansing cream and wiped it off my face. My cheeks remained as pink as roses. He scrutinized me closely.

"It's lipstick. Indelible lipstick," I explained. "I get tired of having rouge blow off so I've been using a touch of lipstick. Like cream rouge. You know."

King Kong regarded me thoughtfully before he got down to work. He applied another sort of cream. I'm giving him something to contend with, I thought, glad of it. I believe in a fair fight. I've never seen such hand sin my life. Like a bunch of bananas. Now I saw him bring a dish-like. Every time his paws passed over my face, I did a total eclipse. But he was gentle. And he didn't scratch. So much creaming must have kept his skin soft.

I gathered from his sorrowful expression that I was in a bad way. He gave me hope, however. "Skin is made up of tiny overlapping layers like shingles on a roof," he said. "When you rub them every which way with coarse salt . . ." I glanced down at my best linen.

He opened a jar of cream and held it toward me. "Take a little of this on your finger-tips. Rub it into the palms of your hands. When it is well worked up, apply it to your face, beginning at the forehead and rubbing it in with small gentle strokes."

My strokes were long, if not gentle. I drew my hands from forehead to chin.

"No! No!" he cried. "Cheek strokes go up in circles toward the ears."

King Kong handed me a batch of tissue. "Now wipe your face and throat carefully." While I wiped, circling half-noseward and half-earward so I'd be sure to get right 50 per cent of the time, I saw more jars being opened.

"This is a beauty mask. I believe Madame needs this." Again I detected that note of sorrow.

King Kong was prepared to offer me a bargain. In order to introduce this superior product his company was willing to sacrifice price right down to the cost basis. He could sell me trial-size jars of the entire line for the absurdly low price of $25. "Twenty-five dollars!" I could buy a lifetime supply for that amount. The dime stores still sold cosmetics. I was their best customer. They'd miss me if I stocked up with $25 worth all at once. In an agony of suspense I tried to decide what was the least amount I could decently say. Free facial! But I was at that uncertain age (I hoped nobody was certain) when at no time I took steps before it was too late entirely.

King Kong tapped the mask to feel whether it was set. I closed my eyes at the sight of those oversize hands blotting out my face. I'd buy what he suggested. I knew that now.

He removed the mask, deftly touched me with powder base, then with powder, mascara, rouge, lipstick, face powder.

"Ah, Madame!" he exclaimed. "A Dresden doll, is she not?"

Well, a doll anyway.

I was watching for Roger when he arrived home for dinner. "What a transformation," he exclaimed. "Pretty. My dear, you're ravishing."

I passed up the compliments. "Where did you meet that man?"

Roger colored a little. "We were having a drink in the same bar last night."

"What did he give you to sick him on me?"

This time Roger definitely blushed. "Why uh . . he uh—"

"Roger," I said firmly, "get this straight. Slickers don't need a shill to catch me. Don't you ever give my name to another one as long as you live." I frowned away all the good of my treatment; and I must have looked as stern as I felt, for he never did again. He had other, more useful ways of taking me.

I returned home one late afternoon to find an eager, husky young Air Transport Command pilot waiting to see me. He was just back in this country from flying Lend-Lease over the Hump, and he had been advised at the Field that Sonny was to be transferred. He (it often happened that new applicants for our rooms would come to see us before the present incumbents had heard they were to be moved). He wanted the Vickery room for the bride he was about to marry.

Jean had wanted to get married before Rollo went overseas, but her parents insisted upon their waiting until she was 21. She had that birthday the same day we flew his 45th. mission — his age plus hers. "Let it!" he said. It seemed to him like an omen of good luck, and now as soon as he cleared at the Field, he'd get leave and they'd be married.

I looked at his war-weary uniform, wings over the pocket, two rows of campaign ribbons heavily dotted with stars and oak leaf clusters, the brilliant red, white, and blue shield on his sleeve; at that thatch of blond hair, the premature lines around his eyes; the tense, nervous way he used his lips; and I thought there wasn't much sacrifice a civilian could make that such a boy hadn't earned and didn't deserve. I bristled him on what I considered expect of him and his child expect of him and his wife. (Why I wanted breath on such futility I don't know for I never anticipated what a new guest would do and what did happen was never in the pattern of what had happened.)

Roger came home as Rollo and I were finishing our arrangements. He hung around until "the Little Birdman", as he referred to Rollo, left; and then he confessed it was making a great mistake, that the fellow wasn't of "our class". I didn't tell Roger that Rollo was about to be married and would not undermine him and his hold on us. I listened instead to the click of his nose as it went out of joint, and watched the brown of his eyes turn to green. "One thing I hope for your sake," he concluded, "is that you'll keep him in his place. After all, he's only a roomer. A fellow with his cheek would be the first one to take advantage of your hospitality." He couldn't be the first one, but I let that pass. Instead, I set the table for three and hoped one pound of hamburger would do; Roger was exceedingly fond of Swedish meat balls.

Roger's prediction was right, but for the wrong-reasons. Cheek and class had nothing to do with it; it was an airmail special delivery letter that stirred Rollo's life with a passion and ours with it. Rollo had watched for that letter for a week and when it arrived, he wished he'd never seen it. He brought the letter to the kitchen to read.

Rollo began by giving off half-finished excerpts as his eyes raced through over the pages looking for the date he wanted to tell me. As what Jean had really written bore in on his consciousness, his voice faltered. His face, which had been looking for what was not there.

There's a big investment behind the gas for every car

Finding oil and bringing it to you—in the kind of products you need, and at low prices—is a big job and takes a lot of money. Behind that dependable supply are thousands of Canadians engaged in finding, producing, transporting, refining and marketing—working with tools that cost hundreds of millions. But the investment in those tools is your guarantee of adequate supply and minimum price.

FIRST, the oil must be found. This means expensive equipment and the staking of money in patient search. A single deep test drilling rig is worth half a million dollars and one unsuccessful well in the Alberta foothills has cost more than a million. Then when oil fields are found, they must be developed; just to drill and equip one well in the Leduc field costs about $100,000.

SECOND, crude oil must be transported to a refinery. Tank cars, pipe lines and ocean and lake tankers are the vehicles. A large pipe line may cost $100,000 a mile; Imperial's largest tanker, just put into service, cost more than $5 millions.

THIRD, the crude oil must be refined into hundreds of useful products. Large and complex refining units are the workman's equipment here. To meet your increasing needs for more and better products Imperial since the war has added refining capacity to process an extra 31,000 barrels per day. The cost was more than $30 millions.

FOURTH, the products must be marketed—this means they must be made available to you when and where you need them. The tools of the marketer are such things as service stations, truck fleets, coastal ships, barges, oil drums and tanks. This equipment, too, adds up to millions.

Canadians are using twice as much oil as in 1939. To help meet your increasing needs Imperial has sought and found new fields, built ships and pipe lines, erected new refinery units, installed new marketing equipment. It costs more than twice as much to do these things as before the war.

The money we needed to do these things came from borrowing, from the sale of investments and from earnings put back into the business after paying dividends.

This money is helping to provide the tools to bring you all the oil you need—at the lowest possible price.

Bringing you oil is a big job—and a costly one.

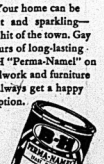
If you're Interested in facts . . .

The price of a gallon of gasoline today is about the same as the price of a gallon of distilled water.



For years before the war the wholesale price of gasoline dropped almost steadily and although it has been caught in the general upswing of costs it has not increased nearly as much as other commodities.

Since 1939 the general wholesale price index has more than doubled but the petroleum products price index has advanced by less than two-thirds.

On its 1940 operations Imperial earned a profit equivalent to less than one cent a gallon for each gallon of products sold.

Lonely Hearts Are Easy Mark For Murderers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

New York (AP)—The record shows that lonely ladies and gentlemen with money should be very, very careful about making friends.

Many times murder ends their loneliness. Lonely people are ideal victims, and murder for profit is a classic type of crime.

Law authorities of New York and Michigan currently are interested in a swarthy, tempestuous Latin and his 200-pound mistress. The pair has confessed, they say, to three brutal killings, the upshot of a "lonely hearts" racket they operated. They were arrested in Michigan.

Britain's Scotland Yard has in custody a dapper, debonair Englishman charged with slaying a well-to-do widow and almost completely disposing of her body. The Yard also is concerned about the disappearance of five other subjects of His Majesty who disappeared from the same general area.

The annals of violence are filled with many mass killings for profit, cases that have become classics of crime.

Police never found any trace of the more victims of the notorious French killer, Desire Landru—all of them women. George Joseph Smith had a way with unhappy women, and developed an interesting way of getting rid of them—but he forgot that English newspapers printed news.

Landru, a petty crook until the First World War broke out, was an undistinguished actor of a lower-middle class French family. Within a week after war started he switched on a career of wholesale murder. His first, victim was a 39-year-old widow with considerable savings.

Landru Kept Score

They set up housekeeping in a small house outside Paris. Then she disappeared. With a nation plunged into war, people were interested in things much bigger than what a neighbor was up to—and there was no comment even when he sold the furniture and moved on. From 1914 there was a succession of widows and disappointed admirers—with savings —in Landru's life.

It was his housekeeper's soul that trapped him. A sister of a woman who "disappeared" recognized him. Police found him in his apartment—where they also found a little black notebook in which this thrifty son of France had carefully listed ten of his victims and the expenses incurred in doing away with them. The fact police were unable to find any bodies was of some comfort, reasoned defense lawyers, but Landru went to the guillotine anyway.

George Joseph Smith was also a small-time crook until his specialty was making paper marriages to susceptible spinsters. He'd gather in the easy profits—usually savings—and go onto the next project. Finally Smith tired to murder, which was a mistake he never repeated. Several women kept silent. But then, in 1915, wanted Smith Mundy's $10,000 annuity and murder was the only way he could get it.

As Mr. Williams," he took his bride to an English boarding house and bought a bathtub. Then he escorted her to a physician, whom he told about Bessie's "fits". The next day Bessie was found dead in the bathtub. The coroner's jury, hearing about the trip to the doctor, found the cause was an epileptic fit. Smith received his money.

His next victim was a nurse. He married her in 1913, after he had insured her life for $1,000. A few days after their marriage, she was found dead in the bathtub of their new home. Then parties parting candidates in the field for the June 9 Nova Scotia general election have chosen their battle lines and are picking up reinforcements.

The C.C.F. and the Progressive Conservative parties have issued their platforms for the Apple Blossom contest. The Liberals are going to the people on the record of 16 years in government.

The election was dubbed the Apple Blossom contest when Premier MacDonald, several days before announcing the actual date, said it would be held when the apple trees were in bloom.

Both the older parties are putting candidates in the running for all 37 seats. The C.C.F. will contest the majority, with 33 candidates already nominated, the parties now are concentrating on campaigning.

Seven more seats than in the last house are being contested in this election. They were added under a partial redistribution passed in 1946. Liberals captured 20 of the 30 seats in the 1945 election and the C.C.F. formed a two-man opposition.

Premier Angus L. Macdonald said in his keynote speech that the "Liberal party stands to be allowed to complete the great tasks that it has in hand." The party wants to continue its program of stimulating primary and secondary industry, extending rural electrification and paving heavily-travelled highways and other important roads.

Robert L. Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, features ed development of the province's industries in his party's manifesto.

The party was pledged to a "concerted drive" to develop manufacturing and encourage small business.

Russell Cunningham, C.C.F. leader in the last legislature, issued a platform featuring a call for appointment of two additional cabinet ministers, one for education and one for co-operatives.

The party also promised expansion of power and telephone facilities under public ownership.

Now that the nominating conventions are about over, party leaders have headed for the polls in an attempt to get out the party vote.

J. A. SUPPLE, BARRISTER, DIES

Pembroke, May 16 (CP) —J. Alfred Supple, 76, a barrister and member of one of the first families to settle in this Ottawa Valley district, died yesterday.

Educated at Queen's University and Osgoode Hall, he had practised law here for close to half a century.

Surviving are his widow and a son, Allan, of Sudbury.

was found dead in the bathtub of their new home. Then the coroner's jury found.

Number three: Insurance policy was for $3,500—and her death was caused by an epileptic fit.

But that was the end of the "brides in the bath" cases, because the father of an earlier bride read about the death. The name of the bridegroom was different, the woman died of a different ailment, but the rest of the details were exactly similar. A George Joseph Smith was hanged by the neck until dead in 1915.

With Canada's Naturalists

Written For The Canadian Press By PERCY CREBER

Over - fishing, construction of dams, sedimentation of spawning-beds, pollution of streams, these were the enemies which drove Salmo salar, the fighting Atlantic salmon from Lake Ontario and the streams that fed it.

Down in the Maritimes, in Labrador, and on the eastern coast of Newfoundland, in Quebec's mighty Saguenay River the salmon still thrills fishermen. But the time when the Don, and the Humber and Credit rivers flowing into Lake Ontario were famous salmon streams is now a mournful memory. Last salmon caught in an Ontario stream was in 1896; last specimen from Lake Ontario was a 7-pound fish caught in a net off Scarboro Beach, Toronto, in April 1898.

But there's a bright hope that they will return. Each year from 1944 to 1947, 40,000 fry capable of taking their first food, were planted over an Ontario stream where the conditions were right. In 1948, the fry number was doubled, and this year probably a fry - planting even greater will be made.

Results have not been especially spectacular as yet but they are definitely hopeful. From extinction in those particular waters to opulence again, is a long, long trail. However, the experiment is on, and in the hands of scientific, enthusiastic men.

Flying flowers and jewels awing, are the romantic names often given to woodland warblers, those tiny birds which make the month of May a delight to all bird watchers.

In the woodlands, of South and Central America where many of them spend the winter, the popular name for the warbler is confidelita — a little torch, or candle. All the names are deserved, they are not exaggerated.

Whether mildly or keenly interested in birds, a study of these colorful birds never fails to bring thrills. And May time is the time to see them at their best, when their springtime plumage glows as at no other season. In May they are at the height of their migration to breeding grounds in Canada, practically all across Canada, many species can be seen.

So vivid and so varied is the coloring of these avian elfs that words are inadequate to describe it. It is much better to see the birds darting about the bushes of almost any woodland. But they need close and patient watching, for the warblers are only half the size of an English sparrow, and they move fast.

By their striking blue spikes, larkspurs announce that pollination by the higher insects — bees and butterflies — is invited, and the invitation is freely accepted, especially by bees whose favorite color, Sir John Lubbock proved, is blue.

Botanists see in the larkspur a highly specialized form of buttercup.

Its English, German, Scandinavian names all refer to the shape of the flower which suggests the spur of the lark. The Spanish and Italian names mean a horseman's spur. In ancient Greek mythology the larkspur was likened to a dolphin, hence its other name, delphinium.

White Sox, Senators Jolt Experts Who Predicted 2-Team Race for American Loop Flag

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chalk up another error for the experts who predicted a two-team race between Boston and Cleveland for the American League pennant.

The prognosticators failed to take into consideration the overall improvement of the so-called weaker clubs — particularly Chicago White Sox and Washington Senators.

First the Senators made the experts scurry by running up a winning streak of nine straight. No sooner had the Senators cooled off than the Chisox began to sizzle.

The Waite Sox turned in the eye-lifter of the season Sunday when they shut out the Indians in both ends of a doubleheader at Chicago, 10-0 and 7-0, before a record crowd of 53,325.

Bill Wight and Allen Gettel wielded the bats in the bonnet for the winners. Wight pitched a five-hitter in the opener for his fourth straight victory without defeat. Gettel doled out four hits in the nightcap.

The double victory boosted the White Sox into third place, 2½ games from the top.

Hammer Feller

The Sox hammered Bob Feller for four runs in the first two innings of the opener. Then Wight, the fireball ace his second defeat.

Coming through with a spectacular seven-run outburst in what proved to be the final inning of the second game, the Philadelphia Athletics overcame a 6-0 deficit to nip the New York Yankees 7-6 for a sweep of their doubleheaders. The A's had fought an uphill battle in the opener, winning 5-7 in 11 innings after trailing 7-3 going into the seventh.

Elmer Valo's fourth straight hit, a single with the bases loaded, drove in the tying and winning runs in the sixth off relief pitcher Joe Page. The inning proved to be the last because of the Pennsylvania curfew law.

Chapman Hero

Sam Chapman, whose bases - loaded double was a big feature in the upriser, was the batting hero of the first game. The veteran centerfielder cracked 3 homers and a double in the opener and drove in the winning run in the 11th with a long fly.

Joe Dobson posted his first victory of the season limiting the Senators to four hits as Boston Red Sox shut out the Senators 3-0.

The lowly Browns divided a double header with Detroit to make it five victories in their last seven games. After the Tigers had won the opener 9-3 the Browns came back to combine 11 hits and 14 bases on balls to win the second game 12-4. Vic Wertz hit a grand slam/homer for the Tigers in the opener, and Dick Kokos, Stan Spence and Sherm Lollar homered for the Browns in the second game.

Braves, Giants Tied

Boston's Braves and New York Giants continued in their first-place National League deadlock for the third straight day. The Braves split a three in a row over Brooklyn Dodgers with a pair of shutout triumphs, while the Giants whipped Philadelphia Phillies, 7-3, for a sweep of their three-game set.

Vern Bickford pitched the shutout for Boston, permitting the fourth-place Dodgers only four singles. Outfielder Jim Russell drove in three runs with a homer and double.

The Giants collected only eight hits but took advantage of seven bases on balls by Curt Simmons and Ken Trinkle, to hang the second defeat upon young Simmons.

Church Dierling's two-out double in the ninth drove in the tying run, and Red Schoendienst's single sent in the winning run as St. Louis Cardinals came up with two runs to nip Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3.

Cincinnati and Chicago divided a doubleheader, the Reds winning the opener, 6-5, and the Cubs taking the nightcap, 8-5.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

FOUR TEAMS IN COBL

There was a definite shake-up in Central Ontario Baseball League circles over the weekend and out of the partial chaos of disorder there emerged a four-team loop. Included are Peterborough, Oshawa, Batawa and Brockville. Kingston and Smiths Falls have definitely dropped out of the picture and the four above-mentioned squads will perform in the senior loop this season.

• • •

Kingston teams kept the COBL ganging at the end of the rope of indecision for nearly a week and finally decided that answer would be "No Soap." Smiths Falls then announced a team at the meeting held here a week ago Sunday were forced to drop out of competition due to the fact they could not get a grounds on which to play.

• • •

President Don Thomas of the COBL called what might be defined an emergency meeting in Peterborough yesterday and got some of the more important wrinkles ironed. Brockville had stated its willingness to play exhibition games with the other three COBL teams, but the league executive felt that if Brockville was willing to play exhibition dates, why not bring them into the league. This was done and at time of writing everything appears to be hunky-dory as far as the four teams are concerned.

• • •

Tentative dates were set for the opening games which see Oshawa at Peterborough on Saturday May 21 with Batawa going to Brockville on Monday May 23rd. The Peies will be guests of the Shoemen at the Fair Grounds here on the holiday, May 24th. The schedule proper will be drawn up sometime during the present week.

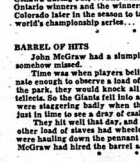
BARREL OF HITS

John McGraw had a slumping cure which Joe DiMaggio somehow missed.

Time was when players believed that, if they were fortunate enough to observe a load of empty barrels on the way to the park, they would knock all pitchers loose from their intellects. So the Giants fell into a slump up to their cowlicks—were staggering badly when they pulled from the streetcar just in time to see a dray of casks rattling past.



They hit well that day, and even better the next after another load of staves had wheeled by. It was not until they were hauling down the pennant that they learned how Mr. McGraw had hired the barrel act at so much an hour.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

When you look at these pictured hands you feel that they are designed to grip the golf club firmly, without tension, firmly, without wobble. In a golf club properly held, the club handle passes from the hook of the left forefinger diagonally across the palm of the hand. Now when the golfer stands in the address position, ready, to swing, the line formed by the thumb and forefinger of each hand will point up and over the right shoulder. The left hand grips the club handle about an inch from the top of the shaft and the right hand grips the club just below the left with the little finger of the right hand placed over the index finger of the left hand. This is called the "overlapping" grip. And is the most widely used grip. But if it feels better to let the little finger of the right hand interlock between the index finger and second finger of the left hand you will still be using a correct grip. This is the "interlocking" grip. The object of using an overlapping or interlocking grip is to make the two hands operate as one single tool.—(Copyright 1949, John F. Dille Co.)

Capot Must Rank As Colt to Heat In the Belmont

Baltimore, May 16 (AP) — The three-year-old racing spoils are split today and even the Belmont, last gem in the triple crown, may not decide which colt will pick up the 1949 championship marbles.

Besides the two different winners in the Derby and Preakness there are at least a couple of other colts which might have something to say about the New York classic June 11. The Preakness Saturday closed the Pimlico meeting and most of the starters have headed for other tracks.

Ivan Parke, trainer of Olympia, seems to have summed up the wide-open status among the turf sophomores when he predicted "they'll all be hustling each other."

That was after Calumet's Ponder won the Derby in which Olympia was covered and wound up sixth. Ponder got the same treatment in Saturday's Preakness, going off the favorite and finishing fifth while Greentree's Capot, ridden by Toronto Teddy Atkinson, took the honors.

Olympia is likely to return to the struggle in the Belmont after getting the rest trainer Parke said he needed following the Derby.

The long layoff between the classics makes it impossible to accurately guess the probable Belmont field. The distance of 1½ miles also is going to weigh heavily in the decisions of owners.

The distance brings you back to Ponder. In both the Derby and Preakness he showed he requires a long way to go to make his powerful late drive click. The Derby is 1/16th of a mile longer than the 1 3/16th-mile Preakness and that means a lot to Ponder.

It did to Capot, too, probably the difference between his second and the Derby and first in Preakness. The longer route also points up the chances of Isidor Bieber's Palestinian.

Palestinian missed catching Capot in the Preakness by only a head and if the wire had been a couple of yards away might have made it.

But on the basis of a first and second in the two classics, Capot must rank now as the colt for the others to best in the Belmont.

Locke Will Not Be Permitted To Play in PGA

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 16 (AP) — George Schneiter, tournament manager of the United States Professional Golfers Association, said today Locke was at his chance that the organization's executive committee would change its mind and permit Bobby Locke to compete in the 1949 P. G. A. at Richmond, Va.

This strict adherence to rules probably is all right with the players after what the South African did to a select field in winning the $15,000 Goodall round - robin event at the Wykagyl Country Club here Sunday.

Bobby shot a 66 for his fifth straight sub-par round to finish with a point total of plus 68, just twice that of defending champion Herman Barron, who finished in second place.

It was Locke's second victory in the event in the three years he has competed. He won two years ago and finished second to Barron last year.

Sixteen leading pros competed in the event. They played five rounds of foursomes so each player met each other player over the 18-hole route. His plus or minus total depended upon his medal score in comparison with the medal scores of each of the other members of his foursome.

Finishing third in this mathematical derby was Sam Snead with 36 points, with Byron Nelson fourth with 29.

Locke was consistency personified in turning in rounds of 71, 67, 68, 68 and 66 for a five-round total of 340, a stroke better than the 346 total of Cary Middlecoff, who smashed the competitive course record of 66 with a spectacular 63 Sunday but finished fifth in points with plus 37. Par is 72.

Intercounty Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Southpaw Carl Fischer, 37-year-old veteran of major and minor league clubbing, is pacing the Senior Intercounty Baseball loop to his liking.

The well-wearing Fischer Saturday hurled Kitchener Legion Panthers to a 14-3 win over London Majors in the opening game of the 1949 season at London.

In other Intercounty games, Galt Terriers batted out a 9-1 win over the Guelph Maple Leafs as they opened the season with a parade replete with Indians, cowboys and decorated vehicles. Meanwhile, Brantford Red Sox defeated Stratford 8-7 and Waterloo Tigers earned a 5-2 victory against the St. Thomas Legion.

In a Niagara District senior tilt, Niagara Falls Tyrds defeated Niagara Falls, N.Y., Buzays, 8-3.

In the Intercounty loop, Fischer displayed a particularly steady game before the record opening day crowd of 6,000 fans. He limited the Londoners to seven well-scattered hits.

The Majors, winners of every major baseball honour in their 40 years of play, failed to come up with an impressive game. They committed nine errors and showed little in the pitching department.

Dismal Opening

A fourth inning rally by the Panthers netted eight runs.

For London hurler Tommy White it was a dismal opening. White, always a slow starter, wasn't given his usual support and three first-inning errors cost him two runs.

At Galt, the Terriers were greeted by ideal weather and playing conditions. They were held until the sixth inning and then caught fire with seven hits, including two doubles, that were good for six runs.

Tommy Warren, ex-major leaguer, went the route for Galt with Manager Timmy Paddon catching for six frames. Martin Philp started well for the Leafs and held on for five innings. He was relieved in the sixth.

Centre fielder Verne Kaiser blasted a home run off a hard pitch in the eighth frame.

At Brantford, Coach Normie Hann's single in the ninth inning scored Tommy McGratton for the homesters' winning run.

It was a slug-fest from start to finish. The Brantford squad collected 18, including a home run by Art Hillman, two doubles by McGratton, a triple by Hann and two singles and a double by Lockington. Irish Mikkimmons had two doubles for Stratford.

Both starting pitchers failed to go the route. Angelo Torti was pulled for a pinch-hitter in the sixth and Nig Parker finished the game, getting credit for the victory. Lefty Price was the losing hurler.

Coasted to Win

At Waterloo, the Tigers garnered all their runs in the first and then coasted.

About 2,000 fans saw Lefty Cy Bricker, formerly with Hamilton in the Pony League, hold St. Thomas to six hits. His mouthmate, Frank Slack, settled down after a shaky first frame. He allowed two walks and two infield errors in the initial inning.

In the Niagara District League, the Falls, N.Y., Buzays failed to hold a two-run lead earned in six turns at bat and Fords' heavy batting rally in the last half of the sixth rolled the Canadian team into a two-run lead.

Johnny Kaiser, Buzay's starting pitcher, developed a wild streak in the sixth, walking Whitlet and Wodushi. Sindles by Hienzo and Mullican and a double by Harner pushed four runs across the plate to put Fords two-up. Fords added one each in the seventh and eighth and Buzays tallied once in the ninth.

New National Handicap System To be Used

(By The Canadian Press)

The Montreal Standard said Saturday a new national handicap system, affecting every golf club and golfer in Canada, will be announced shortly by the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Provincial and club handicaps as they now exist will be abolished and every registered golfer will carry a national handicap card.

Main feature of the change said the Standard, will be that a player will be able to raise and lower his handicap according to the fluctuations of his game.

Handicaps now are based on a player's five lowest scores. If he slumps and isn't playing to his handicap he can have it revised only by appealing to his handicap committee.

The new system, said the Standard, will be based on an average of 20 per cent of a golfer's scores, whether made on his home course or not.

One racing fan at Toronto's Dufferin Park race track cleaned up nearly $3,000 Saturday with an original investment of $22.

Handicapper Jack Hill tickets on Shelley B. winner of the first race. He sold two of them for $35 each and traded the remaining nine in for tickets on Tetrameron in the second, despite pleading from friends that he cover the hoard.

Tetrsmore won and the double combination was worth $318. This gave him $2,671 plus the $70 for the two tickets he sold — a grand total of $2,941 for his efforts.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Loser Weeper steamrolled home by 1¼ lengths in the 56th Metropolitan mile handicap at New York's Belmont Park track Saturday.

Vulcan's Force, winner of the Sarah Anita Handicap this winter, again came from away back, and Bert Bring Ranch's But Why Not, for second place. Loser Weeper covered the mile in 1:32.2-5 and earned a purse of $21,400.

At Toronto, Belfast Celtic, touring Irish soccer club, treated soccer fans to a fine display of their fast and open style of play Saturday night defeating Ulster United 5-0 before 10,000 paying customers.

At Kearny, N. J., the touring Belfast Celtic soccer team defeated All-stars 3-2 Sunday in an international soccer contest before 7,000.

At Lisbon, Portugal Sunday defeated Wales 3-2 in a soccer International after the Welshmen had established a 2-1 lead at half time.

The draw for the first round of the Dominion Cup has been completed and games must be played during the week of June 6, the Ontario Soccer Commission announced Saturday at Toronto. Twenty-three entries were received from Hamilton, London, Windsor, Sudbury, Brantford and Toronto.

San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League announced Saturday the outright purchase of outfielder Walt Judnich from Pittsburgh Pirates. The left - handed hitter is a veteran of six major league seasons. At 32, he has a lifetime batting mark of .283.

Toronto Leafs Tied for Second In Int. League

By The Associated Press

At-the rate Johnny Blatnik is punishing the ball for Toronto Maple Leafs, he'll be back in the majors with Philadelphia Phillies before long.

The young outfielder is hitting at a .400 clip with 20 hits in 50 trips to the plate. He has failed to hit in only one game since coming to the International League early-this month.

Blatnik paced the Leafs to a double triumph over Syracuse Chiefs Sunday. Blatnik doubled home two runs in the ninth inning of the opener to help the Leafs rack up a 7-5 triumph. He drove home, all three of Toronto's runs in their 3-2 nightcap victory with a pair of homers.

The outfielder homered with one on in the first inning and after the Chiefs tied the count and forced the game into extra innings, homered in the ninth to break it up.

The victory enabled the Leafs to tie Rochester Red Wings for second place, one-half game back of the leading Jersey City Giants.

Rochester divided a doubleheader with Newark Bears, winning the first game 8-7 and losing the finale 7-1.

Rookie first sacker Steve Bilko was Rochester's big gun in the opener driving home four runs on a homer and pair of doubles. Russ Derry hit his eighth homer for the Wings in the third.

Wally Hood stopped the Red Wings on four hits in the nightcap, the same number culled by the Bears.

Giants Lose Two

The Giants dropped both ends of a twin bill to Montreal Royals, 10-9 and 5-1. The Royals blew an 8-0 lead in the opener as the Giants scored five runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh. The seventh-inning bulge came on Wes Westrum's second homer of the season with the bases loaded.

Montreal, however, rallied and scored twice in the half of the lucky seventh with Bobby Addis scoring the winning run as George Schmees grounded out.

Bom Morgan drove home five runs to spark the Royals home in the finale. He homered with the sacks jammed in the fifth to clinch the game.

Buffalo, Bisons and Baltimore Orioles divided a twin bill, the Orioles grabbing the opener 7-2 with a five-run, ninth-inning rally that included homers by Frank Mancuso and Red McQuillen.

Buffalo bounced back and captured the finale 4-3 in 10 innings when George Byam homered in the second half of the overtime frame.

Junior Clubs Ready to Battle In Final Game

Winnipeg, May 16 (CP)—More than 5,000 fans will jam the amphitheatre rink to the rafters tonight for the eighth game of the Memorial Cup Junior Hockey Final between Montreal Royals and Brandon Wheat Kings—and just as many westerners will have to be content to listen to the game over the radio.

Originally scheduled as a best-of-seven affair, the series—unprecedented in number of games played and the late date of final game—will be extended to nine games if a decision is not reached before three 10-minute overtime periods. Each team has won three games, with another tied.

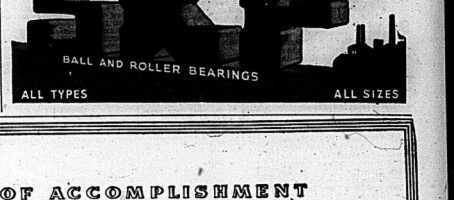
Al Pickard of Regina, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced Sunday night that if the teams are deadlocked at the end of the regular 60 minutes, they immediately begin the first 10-minute overtime. If no decision is reached, the clubs will go at it again following a 10-minute rest. A third overtime period will be played if necessary.

Tickets for the game are so scarce, scalpers are having a field day as they ask $6 for a regular $2 ducat—and it is expected none will ask $10 for a single seat before game time.

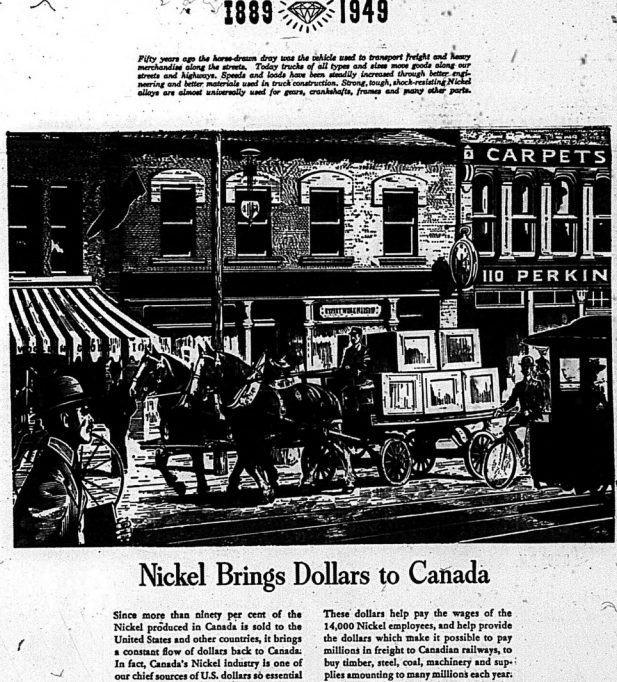
From Brandon, reports say hundreds of regular season ticket holders were bitter when they failed to obtain at least one of the 1,200 pasteboards allotted to the city.

One way, hearing on the radio that a body had been dragged from the river, muttered: "I wonder if they searched his pockets for tickets."

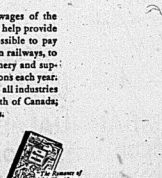
Both teams went through strenuous workouts Sunday—Royals at the amphitheatre and Wheat Kings at the Brandon arena.



The Royal practice, a closed affair, consisted of scrimmaging, shooting and stop-and-start skating.



Wheat Kings went through what fans said was "their best workout of the series."



Neither club will divert from their line-ups of the previous game.

60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT
1889 1949
Fifty years ago the horse-drawn dray was the vehicle used to transport freight and heavy merchandise along the streets. Today trucks of all types and sizes move goods along our streets and highways. Speeds and loads have been steadily increased through better engineering and better materials used in truck construction. Strong, tough, shock-resisting alloys are almost universally used for gears, crankshafts, frames and many other parts.

Nickel Brings Dollars to Canada
Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.
These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.
These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada; help create jobs for Canadians.

Will Not Discard Merlin Engines In North Stars

Montreal, May 16 (CP) — A Trans-Canada Air Lines official said today that T.C.A. definitely does not plan to discard the Rolls Royce Merlin, all-in-line engines powering its North Star aircraft.

He added that T.C.A. has had no conversation with Canadian Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Co., Ltd., regarding a possible changeover to American-built radial engines.

The official was commenting on a Toronto Globe and Mail story from Montreal today which says that T.C.A. has been "secretly" planning replacement of the Merlin engine. The newspaper story added:

"Officials of Canadian Pratt and Whitney admitted to the Globe and Mail that an installation has been developed which will permit easy replacement of Merlins with American Radial engines. . . .

The T.C.A. spokesman said the Globe and Mail story was "away off the beam."

"The North Star is a successful aircraft," he went on. "There have been some minor difficulties — the same difficulties any new aircraft runs into. These have been overcome. The only minor problem we still face is reducing engine noise. At present, a new type of exhaust is being tested in our shop in Winnipeg.

"The North Star is one of the only three new aircraft designs which have come into wide use since the end of the war on world airlines—the others being the United States DC-6 and Constellation. Both the DC-6 and the Constellation ran into much more serious problems than the North Star which caused their grounding for a time. So far, North Stars have not been grounded for any general mechanical difficulties.

"We intend to stick to the Merlin engines in the North Star and we have had no conversations with Pratt and Whitney."

Powell Workout

Robert Ryans wife is working on her third novel. She was an actress when they married, but Bob says, "I discouraged that" . . .

William Powell is set for three pictures in the next four years, but may do more. He says he'd have to see a world-beating script to get him to do another "Thin Man." . . . After years as a blonde, Gloria Dehaven is back to her own brown shade. She says it startles her every time she passes a mirror.

"HORSE SENSE BRIDGE"

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A squeeze in bridge is a pincers movement that makes opponents holler uncle. He can huff and he can puff. But down goes his house of cards despite any efforts he can put forth.

For a squeeze to work, keep in mind several important factors. An opponent must be trying to protect at least two suits. The one who is protecting such suits must be forced to unguard a suit.

The squeeze must have threatening cards that have a chance of being promoted into winning cards. One of these promotion cards must be handy for use when opponent is forced to unguard that suit.

To bring the hands to a position ready for squeezing, a number of earlier tricks must first be played. The idea is to reduce to a few cards each hand in preparation for the squeeze.

Discover which opponent is protecting the lead one suit. Assume he is also protecting another. Lead to the squeeze card. When he lets go of one protector your threat card in that suit will be good.

Opening lead from west is the club queen. You have 12 tricks in your own hand and dummy but are the six diamonds and three other sets of ace-kings. Your 13th must come from club or heart ten.

By the time you take trick one with the king you have spotted club lack in south. Assume he is also protecting hearts and squeeze him. First unblock the cards to the fewest possible.

Take tricks two and three with black aces, sluffing a dummy spade. Run five diamonds and spade king, sluffing a south club. By this time each hand is down to four cards.

Besides their original hearts, dummy has a diamond, south the ten and small club, west the club jack. Lead dummy last diamond and sluff a small south club. See what that does to west!

New York — (AP)—A 23-year-old brunette, arrested for displaying a nude female torso in her apartment, criticized police in court yesterday for holding her "thing" a joke.

Miss Rossetia Goldman told the judge a policeman entered her Greenwich village shop and said:

"Look, lady, I'm ignorant, but this ain't art."

She refused to remove it from her window, she said, the policeman left and came back five other officers.

The papier mache torso is being held at the police station where Miss Goldman was released after posting $300 bail.

Miss Goldman described the torso, which has a devil's head painted on it, as "an artists's representation" and advertised a French love story called "Devil in the Flesh."

"When are the cops to say what art is?" asked Samuel S. Goldberg, her lawyer.

The hearing was adjourned until today, when Goldberg said he would produce as witnesses art experts to testify in Miss Goldman's behalf.

Angels Camp, Calif. — (AP) — A Calaveras county frog, fresh out of Angels Creek, won the big jump — just 100 years after the original jump which inspired Mary Twain's literary masterpiece.

His name is "One Fifteen." He sailed 13 feet, six inches yesterday in three hops. He won $200 for the Bret Harte Frog Jumping Contest, formed by some Angels Camp high school boys.

That's five times as much money as the stranger won from Mark Twain's short story hero, a lanky personage Smiley. The stranger bet the $40 and Smiley went into the marsh to catch a frog. That's when Dan'l Webster, Smiley's trained frog, got filled full of buckshot by the villain—winning him a bet. How far that frog jumped after while Dan'l sat with his lead — neither literature nor legend tells.

"One Fifteen," jumped by Robert Leonard, went "whirling like the air like a spaghnutt." Some 3,000 fans watched from a grassy hillside.

Second - place frog was "T. W. A." — just an inch behind "One Fifteen." "T. W. A." landed "as solid as a gob of mud."

Jersey City, N.J.—Central Railroad of New Jersey ferry boats between here and New York have little boxes containing literature screwed to the walls.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, saying to me, I wonder if I did the rite thing.

How do you mean, when? ma said, and pop said, This afternoon by the buss. I gave my seet to a middle age woman with an arm full of bundles. She was wearing thick glasses to match her thick ankles, and she was one of the homeliest women I ever saw in a buss, but I gave her my seet just a same and totlly ignored a young and bewtiful, perfeckly glorious creature with glowing eyes and sparkling teeth. I wonder if I made a mistake? I keep asking myself, he said.

Pop, ma said, I am proud of you. You done the right thing. Any man would be proud of you for what you done.

Pop was looking very pleased with himself and he said, Well, I'm glad you feel that way about it, but I'm not so sure myself. I'm not so sure I done the right thing. I'm not so sure I done the right thing at all.

Pop, ma said, you

Chapman Finds Batting Eye

Philadelphia, May 16 (AP) — Did you ever lose something and find it again just as you were ready to give up hope? That's the story of Sam Chapman, veteran Philadelphia Athletics' outfielder.

Big Sam lost his batting eye several years ago. He hunted high and low for it trying everything he could think of to locate the lost art. He even took to wearing glasses on the ball field. But that didn't help.

Manager Connie Mack, coaches, teammates and friends of the Californian worked on his problem. There had to be an answer. Any guy who can hit big league pitching at a .322 clip, batting in 106 runs on 178 hits including 25 home runs, is worth working on. Chapman did all those things in 1941.

Then he went off to war as a flier in the United States navy. He suffered eye strain and when he came back to baseball in 1946 he just wasn't the same Sambo. His best average in the last four years was .261.

When the A's reported to spring training at West Palm Beach, Fla., Manager Mack indicated that this was the year Sam would have to find himself or else. In fact Chapman himself was about ready to give up.

Then it happened. He took off the glasses worn through the last half of the 1948 season and came out the various eye exercises he had been indulging in. Sam began to hit.

Since the season started Chapman has slugged for a .361 average.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting, Sam Chapman, Athletics — Drove in the winning runs in the first-game 8-7 victory over New York Yankees with a long fly after hammering two homers and a double earlier. He also doubled with the bases loaded to spark a seven - run sixth inning which gave Philadelphia a 7 - 6 eighth-inning triumph.

Pitching — Bill Wight and Allen Gettel, Chicago White Sox — Combined to pitch a pair of shutouts over Cleveland Indians.

Propose Change In Forward-Pass Rule in Football

Toronto, May 16 — (CP) — Coaches of football's future will be interested to learn that the next season's playing code at their annual meeting here Saturday and proposed a major change in the forward - pass rule that would further open up the attack.

The proposal is to lift the requirement that a forward pass must cross the line of scrimmage.

The amendment was not approved on the spot by the Canadian Rugby Union's eight - man rules committee — W. C. (Milly) Foulds, veteran chairman, announced that a sub - committee was set up to consider the possibility of putting it into effect. It was indicated unofficially, however, that most delegates favored the idea and it is merely a matter of fitting it into the rule book.

Foulds announced following the closed meeting that the rule-makers approved three playing-code changes. Two others were voted down when it was decided to leave the running interference rule unchanged and to continue using the horn to signal a rules infraction.

Rule changes:

1. On a kickoff, defending players are permitted to block or interfere in an area of 20 yards, instead of 10, from the line of kick-off to the defending side's goal. This blocking is legal only until possession of the ball is gained by either side, however, so there still is no running interference permitted on kickoffs.

2. If feasible, this blocked-kick rule is to apply on kicks, from scrimmage when the ball, before crossing the line of scrimmage, strikes an offside player of the kicker's side. Previously the ball was immediately declared dead.

3. In substitutions, one player only of each side may be given the right to enter on the field and report direct to the referee when the ball is dead. All other substitutes must continue to report through the headlinesman. Once these subs appear on the sidelines, they must enter the game immediately subsequent to the stoppage of play, otherwise their team will be penalized 10 yards.

Delegates felt this ruling will stop unauthorized players circulating up the sidelines. At the same time, by letting one player by-pass reporting to the headlinesman, a valuable kicker or passer can be shuttled in and out at crucial moments without delay.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — Big, gawky, flamboyant Frank Swift, who has kept goal for England in every major soccer international since the war, is retiring.

The Manchester City stalwart, 34, plans to devote all his time to managing a catering firm.

Swift has probably the biggest hands of any contemporary footballer. They engulf a soccer ball as smaller men's fingers would encircle a grapefruit, and have one of his greatest assets as the No. 1 netminder in the country.

The grinning giant has been in the soccer spotlight since the sensational cup final appearance in 1934. Fans still recall how his brilliant play helped Manchester City beat Portsmouth 2-1 and how Swift, as the final whistle blew, fainted dead away in the goal mouth.

England's bowlers can expect plenty of trouble from "New Zealand's greatest batsman," 23-year old Bert Sutcliffe in this season's cricket test matches.

Left-handed Bert showed the local experts plenty in his first innings of the new cricket season, whacking up a brisk 92 — including a six and 15 fours — in 2 1-2 hours against Col. L. C. Steven's XI at Eastbourne.

Commented cricket critic Charles Bray of the Daily Herald: "He produced all the strokes except the bad ones."

Tradition will be broken at the All-England Lawn Tennis championships at Wimbledon this year when women umpires mount the high chairs overlooking Centre and No. 1 courts.

The All-England Club and the Lawn Tennis Umpires' Association have agreed that in future there shall be no discrimination in appointing officials for the main courts on which the most important matches are staged.

Hitherto, women umpires have been restricted to officiating on the "outside" courts.

Charlie Adam, left-winger of Leicester City cup final squad, received a plea for a pair of discards to the soccer classic from an old school friend in Scotland.

"If there is anything I can do for you in my line, let me know" wrote the friend.

Bitterly Fought Campaign Ends With Vote Today

Little Current, May 16 (CP)—After a bitterly fought campaign, Manitoulin Island decides today whether it will retain the Canada Temperance Act or replace it with the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

The C.T.A., in force here since 1914, permits drinking in public places and supplying liquor to minors but forbids selling liquor or keeping it for sale on the island. The Ontario Liquor Control Act would permit sale of beer and wine in government stores—and in hotel beverage rooms if approved by a further vote—but carries stringent penalties for knowingly selling or supplying liquor to a minor, consuming liquor in public places, drunkenness, bootlegging and illegal possession.

Cool cloudy weather was forecast for today as the 5,383 eligible voters prepared to make their ballots. About 500 of the voters are Indians, war veterans or wives of men who fought in the Canadian forces, who are entitled to help decide the issue but not to consume liquor.

The 36 polls opened at 8 a.m. EST, and will close at 6 p.m.

Supporters of the C.T.A., including Temperance Federation speakers, have contended during the campaign that scrapping of the C.T.A. would open the way to increased sale of alcoholic beverages on this largest freshwater island in the world. Workers for revocation of the C.T.A. on the other hand, asserts that the existing regulations which enable liquor to be brought into the island from elsewhere and consumed without restriction have given rise to drinking in public places, to intoxication among minors and to bootlegging.

The C.T.A. of 1878 provides for country - wide decisions on whether it remains in effect. In 1913, residents of this island, the northern Ontario counterpart of a county, voted for the act and it went into force the next year. Besides applying to Manitoulin, the C.T.A. is in force in the southern Ontario counties of Peel, Huron and Perth (excepting the city of Stratford).

Brighteners

Los Angeles — It's surprising what a penny can get you, if you happen to be in the Westchester section of the city these days.

For example:

A bacon-and-egg breakfast, a quart of engine oil, a best selling novel, or 100 aspirin tablets.

But who needs the latter? There's no headache for the public in this other war.

It all started mildly a couple of weeks ago when a national chain opened a drug store across from an established California chain store. The stores started undercutting each other. Each sent spies to the other, to keep up-to-the-minute tab on current quotations.

Blackboards on the sidewalk advised the public. When they got to the point they couldn't cut ice cream, candy and magazines any lower, they gave 'em away—along with small sizes of various drug products.

The druggists say they're not losing money, on the long haul, because of the tremendous volume. But they admit they're not making any, either.

And by the time you get to the counter for that penny breakfast, it's apt to be lunchtime.

UNDIGNIFIED ENTRY FOR MR. EISLER

Gerhart Eisler, fugitive Communist, is dragged bodily from the Polish ship Batory by British policemen in Southampton. He stowed away on a ship in New York, jumping $23,500 bail, and was arrested by Scotland Yard at request of U. S. authorities. A U. S. State Department spokesman in London said Eisler would be taken to London to face extradition proceedings to the United States. He has two prison sentences hanging over his head there. — Central Press Canadian.

Former Patient Charges Hospital Conditions 'Filthy'

Toronto, May 17. (CP) — Insanitary, filthy conditions existed at Whitby Psychiatric hospital, operated by hospitalized for mentally ill Ross Mitchell, patient there charged at Assistant Deputy Minister of Health Dr. J. J. Heagerty on Monday night.

Dr. Fred Fraik, Ontario Deputy Minister of Health, declared today he was investigating Mr. Mitchell's charges "exaggerated" and said if they could be supported he would start an immediate investigation.

Mrs. Sherman, a nurse who spent six months at the hospital with a mental breakdown, claimed that by the time she was able to get out of the hospital she was almost recovered.

The sanitation at the hospital is "unbelievable" she said — it was in cottage 8. There were 70 patients in one bathtub, four sinks on the first floor and four on the second. "Another tub-ful," Mrs. Sherman said that from five o'clock at night until 5.30 in the morning no nurse supervised the cottage.

During the winter, said Mrs. Sherman, patients were required to walk through snow to the nearby dining room and "I've never seen a filthier place. China is chipped and broken, only a few of the cups have handles. The breakfast cereal is always lumpy and cold and the waitress in the bowl in which the soup is served at night.

Actual cruelty to patients sometimes takes place, Mrs. Sherman said, and she felt it was due in many cases to the hospital's practice of employing displaced persons.

"I don't know whether it's because of the treatment they received in Europe or not but they are unsurpassed for sheer cruelty." I saw one of them drag an old woman across the floor by her hair and another fall with her hair face down and blackened where she had been beaten by a fist. That girl was finally discharged but the cruelty is still going on."

Work' Treatment

Mrs. Sherman claimed the "pack" treatment used to sooth a frantic patient is often used as punishment at Whitby.

"The patient is stripped and wrapped in heavy tent canvas from the ankles to the neck. Only the head is left free, the face and I have seen patients left for hours from two to four hours out being given a drop of water," she said.

The eighth annual report of the province on mental hospitals shows there are 1,726 patients at Whitby and a staff of 270.

FIRE DESTROYS PLANING MILL, LOSS $14,000

Owned and Operated by Clarence Wasmund of Maple Leaf

Bancroft — (Special) — Damage amounting to an estimated $14,000 resulted Monday when a modern planing mill owned and operated by Clarence Wasmund of Maple Leaf, seven miles east of Maynooth, was destroyed by fire.

Explosion of the Diesel engine which operated the planing mill was stated to have been responsible for the fire which spread quickly completely destroying the planing mill and about 60,000 feet of new-sawed lumber in the nearby lumber yard.

The fire burned for three hours before it was brought under control by the Department of Lands and Forests staff at Bancroft who rushed their equipment 23 miles to the scene of the blaze.

The mill destroyed was the property and was not the large mill used for sawing lumber from logs. Four men were employed by the mill. It was reported there was no insurance on the burned mills.

FORD CO. ASKS UNION TO CALL BACK WORKERS

No Union Comment Concerning Proposal

Detroit, May 17 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company today asked the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) to call off their strike in all except one building of Ford's big Rouge plant and at the Lincoln-Mercury plants.

The one unit which would remain strike-bound along with the Lincoln plant under the company proposal would be the "B" building, centre of the production line speed-up dispute.

About 65,000 Ford workers walked out nearly two weeks ago and some 40,000 others have been idle indirectly as a result of the strike.

Ford handed the proposal to the union as soon as a long series of negotiations opened early today.

Ford said union acceptance of the new proposal would have the following effects:

1. Recall of more than 72,000 employees in the Detroit area, 50,000 of them at once.

2. Recall of another 25,000 Ford employees scattered outside of Detroit as soon as parts could be supplied from Detroit plants.

There was no official union comment concerning the Ford proposal.

Arthur C. Vick, Detroit regional director for the government agency acting on authority of Cyrus S. Ching, Canadian-born federal mediation director, met with Ford. He said:

"I have been in touch with Secretary-treasurer, and the union's national Ford director, Richard T. Leonard, and the exploratory conference" early today.

The U. A. W.'s "speed - up" walkout has resulted in idleness for more than 100,000 men.

Original suggestions for federal mediation met with a cool reception from the union leaders although Ford promised co-operation.

Previously U. A. W. president Walter Reuther had asked Ching to step into the fight.

F.D.Roosevelt,Jr., Battles Tammany And Labor Party

New York, May 17. (AP)—Wall Street Silk Stocking voters, aroused by a noisy and bitter campaign, decide today in a congressional election whether Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. gets power over the first hurdle in his ambition to follow his late father into the White House.

As F.D.R. did years ago, the younger Roosevelt left to a famous name was battling Tammany Hall, the Democratic organization. Court Justice Benjamin Shalleck supported.

Roosevelt's name was on today's voting machines as candidate of New York State's Liberal Party and on the ballots of the newly-formed group.

It was largely a Roosevelt-Shalleck fight. Republicans predicted the Democratic split would give them the election to the republican candidate, William H. Hesketh, in his insurance executive.

The left-wing American Labor Party also had a candidate in the field — Annette T. Rubinstein, head of a private school for underprivileged kids and the sister of Sol Bloom, Democratic congressman from the silk district.

Yesterday's primary campaign was the last of the season.

Hesketh and Shalleck both said they will get in touch with California authorities and investigate his claim.

Mitchell Attacks CSU Action In East Coast Strike

Ottawa May 17. (CP) — The Canadian Seamen's Union (T.L.C.) must accept full responsibility for the East Coast shipping strike, Labor Minister Mitchell said today in an open letter.

Mr. Mitchell attacked "misleading and incorrect" statements attempting to put responsibility for the strike on the federal government.

His 2,000-word letter again extended the services of his department to the disputing parties should they want to re-open negotiations.

The Minister declared the C.S.U. executive—alleged to be dominated by Reds—had committed an error in judgment in staging all-out strikes on the East Coast during March—a move that was followed by operators digging up with the rival Seafarers' International Union (A.F.L.).

He also said the C.S.U. would have been "well-advised" to accept the board's finding of a conciliation board— which included a C.S.U. nominee— recommending a new contract with major provisions differing from the 1948 agreement.

On the question of lawful striking, Mr. Mitchell again emphasized that striking Canadian ships in ports abroad is illegal.

The strike was limited in this country, Mr. Mitchell said, but this did not "justify the action of officers of the C. S. U. in counselling and encouraging seamen on ships at sea or in ports abroad to refuse to obey the Master's orders."

The minister hit out at statements concerning the strike which he called "extravagant, misleading and incorrect and clearly initiated from one source."

A few days ago, he said, Prime Minister St. Laurent received 85 telegrams on the strike purporting to be signed by different persons. Investigation showed all had been sent from Toronto by the same person.

Two or six long telegrams had been received from a Montreal source, signed with different names. They were identical word-for-word.

He said the strike of seamen on tugboats at Halifax — in sympathy with the deep-sea strike— is in violation of the Federal Labor Code, since provisions of the code have not complied with before the tie-up was called.

Communists Occupy Hankow, Central China Industrial Centre

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, May 17 — (AP) — A new Communist threat to nerve-raced Shanghai developed today as pressure mounted on the city's industrial gateways. In central China, the Reds occupied Hankow, the country's greatest inland port.

A Shanghai garrison command communique said the more than 100,000 Red troops in Hankow drove to Chowpu, less than 10 miles southwest of Shanghai's International Settlement.

The U. S. "speed - up" walkout has resulted in idleness for more than 100,000 men.

Original suggestions for federal mediation met with a cool reception from the union leaders although Ford promised co-operation.

Previously U. A. W. president Walter Reuther had asked Ching to step into the fight.

Another Red force of 3,000 Reds pushed to Chawanshan, 15 miles south of the city of the Bund, the Nationalist communique said.

Thus it appears the Communists, held off at the Woosung shipping gate to the city on the north and balked at Lunghwa international airport to the south, are concentrating on a "sort spot."

This is Pootung, the dock and industrial area just across Shanghai's Whangpoo River.

The occupation of Hankow was reported in a dispatch from Communist Yenan Pao from the public mid-Yangtze industrial centre. It said the Reds marched in yesterday at 4 p.m.

Nationalist reinforcements were being rushed to the Shanghai front. Government spokesmen said the Communist mistakes are made," could hold out indefinitely. The morale of troops was described as high.

Shanghai's shipping and aerial links with the outside world still were operating. Chinese planes, although their crews admitted the Communist threat, continued to fly from Lunghwa to Canton, Formosa and Hongkong.

Attacks Repulsed

Fortified Woosung, which commands the Shanghai sea lane, was reported in the hands of government Nationalist attacks with great success.

The Communist radio in Peiping said Red forces were within 10 miles of the city of Shanghai and would be taken in due course.

Reports from Hankow said Red Gen. Lin Piao's Manchurian veterans was taking over the big cotton city. Lin Piao's force of 600 miles west of Shanghai and about the same distance south of Peiping.

Other reports said the Communist Second Field Army's southeast drive brought Red troops within striking carried to Liuchin, 225 miles northeast of Canton. Reds Tsady of Gen. Chiang Kai Cheng's 70,000-man army was reported to be defending the Nationalist Canton.

If the reports about the progress of the Red Second Army are correct, indications are it is trying to encircle Hankow in northern Kwantung Province and the Red Fourth Army which is interested in local Communists. They may eventually join the Second Army's drive down the railway from Hankow to Canton.

Living on Relief, Mute Claims Bundle of $12,000

New York, May 17 — (AP) — A man who described himself as a deaf-mute living on relief had a bundle of some $13,000 in cash found last Tuesday.

A radio patrolman found the money in a paper bag he picked up from the gutter to wipe his windshield.

The claimant, who said he is Herbert Ellenbogen, 40, refused to say questioned in writing for two hours before police released his claim.

Since losing the money, Lator said, he has been on relief in Brooklyn.

Police said they will get in touch with California authorities and investigate his claim.

Abattoir Worker Knocked Into Vat

Brantford, May 17 — (CP) — Bowled over by a pig he was killing at the Procter Packing Plant late Monday, Hilton Reeder, 35, of suffered a broken neck and died when he fell into a vat of boiling solution of water and caustic soda, who lives at nearby Mount Pleasant; was reported in fair condition in hospital Monday night.

ENAMELLING ROOM DAMAGED

Guelph, May 17 (CP)— A $3,000 blaze damaged the enamelling room of the Guelph Manufacturing plant here Monday night. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated enamelling oven.

MANITOULIN IS. VOTES OUT C.T.A. IN FORCE 35 YRS.

Sale Now Permitted Under Provincial Act

Little Current, May 17 (CP) — Manitoulin Island is coming under provisions of the Ontario Liquor Control Act after 35 years under the liquor-handling regulations of the Canada Temperance Act.

Residents voted nearly 2-1 yesterday to scrap the 1875 federal legislation.

The provincial regulations will permit sale of liquor under government control but another vote will be necessary to decide whether residents favor opening of hotel beverage rooms. The C.T.A. prohibited sale of liquor on the island but left consumption of spirits unrestricted.

It will be at least another 30 days before the C.T.A. becomes inoperative on the island. That period must elapse between voting day and passage of a federal order-in-council making the vote effective. The order takes effect on publication in the Canada Gazette and Ontario liquor laws then would apply.

W. J. Patterson, editor of the Manitoulin Expositor, which campaigned editorially for repeal of the C.T.A., said the voters' decision will bring control to drinking on Manitoulin.

"Our main aim (in urging spoil) was to bring control and decency to the island," he said. "All the hypocritical way we have been handling our liquor problem up to now," he said.

Law officers said introduction of provincial liquor laws will enable them to crack down on bootlegging, drinking by young people and illegal consumption of liquor in public places.

Nearly 4,000 Vote

Close to 4,000 of the 5,582 eligible voters cast ballots. Their decision was announced less than an hour after the last ballot was entered across the island closed at 8 p.m. EST.

The complete vote was 2,472 for revocation of the C.T.A. and 1,284 for its retention.

Little Current, Killarney, Manitowaning and Gore Bay voted for repeal of the C.T.A. In Mindemoya, Silver Water, Barrie Island and Sheguiandah voters voted to retain the C.T.A.

Manitoulin is the largest island in the Ontario coalition of Huron, Peel and Perth (except for Toronto Island) by a narrow margin. Peel voted two years ago against the revocation. The act is not in force anywhere else in Canada.

Earl Carroll Planned Bas-Relief of Chorus On Marble Wall of Tomb

Los Angeles, May 17 — (AP)— Showman Earl Carroll, who died in an aeronautics plane crash last June, planned to be surrounded in death, as he was in life with "the most beautiful girls in the world," a court witness testified Monday at the court contest over Carroll's $1,000,000 estate.

Carroll had commissioned and planned to have an ornate bas relief of chorus girls on a marble wall of the tomb which would include a niche for his remains.

Reds Are Shocked As 33.9 P.C. Vote 'No' in E. Germany

Unexpected Snub is Dealt, Reds Cry 'Double Cross'

Berlin, May 17.—(AP)— Eastern Germany has dealt Communism an unexpected blow in Soviet-controlled territory, Official figures in the People's Congress election today showed a surprising swab by a third of the voters.

Of 12,034,221 valid ballots, 4,080,272 were marked "no."

The Communists had hoped to roll up a virtually solid "yes" vote for their hand-picked single list of candidates, so that they could go to the Foreign Ministers Conference in London today showing with a government for Eastern Germany which would match that of the West.

So shocked were the Communist officials that election returns were withheld in Berlin after the polls closed, and the Soviet-controlled press in the Soviet zone cross it their political allies in the Eastern zone.

There were 13,235,971 persons eligible to vote. Of these 12,987,-234 cast ballots, or 98.1 per cent. 221.

This was the vote:

Yes: (in favor of the handpicked single slate) 7,954,001 or 66.1 per cent.

No: 4,080,272, or 33.9 per cent.

The Communist election bureau announced the figures.

Communists have charged upon German nationalism, had thrown heavy propaganda artillery into the campaign to give them a virtually unanimous endorsement in the "yes or no" vote for the screened slate of 2,000 delegates to the Congress.

Soviet policy was the only issue in the election. All the candidates had been selected by the Social Unity (communist) party and splinter elements of the Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats, all welded into a People's Congress front with Russian blessing.

Ex-Nazis Allowed to Vote

Ex-Nazis even set aside denazification laws in order to get former Nazi votes to swell the total.

The obvious evidence of protest in Eastern Germany could possibly compel the Russians to change their policy and demand strategy for the foreign ministers meeting in London. They are expected to present the People's Congress — with 500 hand-picked delegates — as proof that Germany — as a government for the whole country.

Theglache Rundschau, long before the figures were known, put the blame squarely on the backs of the U.S. and Britain for the unexpected size of the bag. It accused the Christian Democratic and Liberal Democratic parties of running front of a "double game" — of swearing allegiance to the People's Congress "and ill secret" against it.

The two-day balloting for the Congress ended Monday night. The Communist-controlled Berlin radio broadcast complete charge of issuing a final count, expected later today. The result will be put to the Congress of 2,000 members, all hand-picked and put over by the Reds. There will be no room for a choice of voting "yes" or "no."

Just before the bid was made for the results, the main election committee of the Congress for Unity and Justice announced the breakdown of the first 7,000 votes counted.

Unexpected Snub is Dealt, Reds Cry 'Double Cross'

Berlin, May 17.—(AP)— Eastern Germany has dealt Communism an unexpected blow in Soviet-controlled territory, Official figures in the People's Congress election today showed a surprising swab by a third of the voters.

Of 12,034,221 valid ballots, 4,080,272 were marked "no."

The Communists had hoped to roll up a virtually solid "yes" vote for their hand-picked single list of candidates, so that they could go to the Foreign Ministers Conference in London today showing with a government for Eastern Germany which would match that of the West.

So shocked were the Communist officials that election returns were withheld in Berlin after the polls closed, and the Soviet-controlled press in the Soviet zone cross it their political allies in the Eastern zone.

There were 13,235,971 persons eligible to vote. Of these 12,987,-234 cast ballots, or 98.1 per cent. 221.

This was the vote:

Yes: (in favor of the hand-picked single slate) 7,954,001 or 66.1 per cent.

No: 4,080,272, or 33.9 per cent.

The Communist election bureau announced the figures.

Communists have charged upon German nationalism, had thrown heavy propaganda artillery into the campaign to give them a virtually unanimous endorsement in the "yes or no" vote for the screened slate of 2,000 delegates to the Congress.

Soviet policy was the only issue in the election. All the candidates had been selected by the Social Unity (communist) party and splinter elements of the Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats, all welded into a People's Congress front with Russian blessing.

Ex-Nazis Allowed to Vote

Ex-Nazis even set aside denazification laws in order to get former Nazi votes to swell the total.

The obvious evidence of protest in Eastern Germany could possibly compel the Russians to change their policy and demand strategy for the foreign ministers meeting in London. They are expected to present the People's Congress — with 500 hand-picked delegates — as proof that Germany — as a government for the whole country.

Theglache Rundschau, long before the figures were known, put the blame squarely on the backs of the U.S. and Britain for the unexpected size of the bag. It accused the Christian Democratic and Liberal Democratic parties of running front of a "double game" — of swearing allegiance to the People's Congress "and ill secret" against it.

The two-day balloting for the Congress ended Monday night. The Communist-controlled Berlin radio broadcast complete charge of issuing a final count, expected later today. The result will be put to the Congress of 2,000 members, all hand-picked and put over by the Reds. There will be no room for a choice of voting "yes" or "no."

Just before the bid was made for the results, the main election committee of the Congress for Unity and Justice announced the breakdown of the first 7,000 votes counted.

ORILLIA STRIKE CONCLUDED, GOES TO ARBITRATION

Cases of Discharged Workers Will Go Before Body Chosen by Labor Board

Orillia, Ont., May 17 (CP)—The strike at the Heywood-Wakefield baby carriage plant is over.

Labor Minister Daley announced Monday night that officials of the plant had signed a four-point agreement with the Orillia General Workers' Union, a CCL body, which called the strike 16 days ago.

The cases of the 18 discharged workers which precipitated the strike, the first in this Simcoe County town's history, will go before a board of arbitration with County Court Judge, to be chosen by the Labor Department.

All the others on strike are to return to work at once.

Brief skirmishes between strikers and non-strikers last Monday resulted in 26 Ontario Provincial Police being called to the scene at the request of Mayor W. G. Secord. Three arrests were made at the plant last Wednesday to keep order after five firemen were reinstated.

The settlement was seen as a compromise between the union's demand for plant manager A. J. Lloyd and union organizer George Brough.

Body of Missing Woman Snared By Fish Hook

Kingston, May 17 (CP)—Trolling for pickerel in a rowboat about 75 feet out from the Fort Frontenac wharf, south of the Cataraqui bridge Monday evening, Mrs. William J. Tankard snared the body of Mrs. Ethel M. (Cassidy) Kenehan, 25, of Verona who had been missing since May 6.

Mrs. Kenehan left Hotel Dieu Hospital with her first child, Iris, in the arms of the baby's father a few days after the birth of her daughter. She, her husband and infant were found in a cabin on Amherst Island, 12 miles Canadawards Monday evening. Mrs. William J. Tankard snared Mrs. Kenehan's body as that of Mrs. Kenehan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Kenehan, Verona, were disappointed at not finding their daughter.

Condition of the body indicated that Mrs. Kenehan had drowned eight or 10 days ago. Her street watch had stopped at 9.15 a.m. which led to the conclusion that she drowned shortly after leaving the house.

Falls 52 Feet From Scaffold

Falling 52 feet from a scaffold on the framework of a new addition to the dry-in-theatre being constructed on Marshall Road, Jo-Jo Cummings, 25, of 205 Station Street, is in Belleville General Hospital with undetermined injuries.

The man was rushed to hospital in Dr. Jim's ambulance where he was attended to by Dr. J. Russell Scott.

The accident occurred just at the noon hour, the worker falling the hill's ride on the ground.

Dr. Scott stated the man suffered a dislocated hip and dislocated elbow and possible other injuries. It was too early to determine if there were internal injuries.

Dr. Scott said the man told him he remembered falling and had a sensation of being hit by a car himself. The physician said had the worker been struck he would have been killed when he struck the ground.

Doctors, Hypnotist, Faith Healer Leave London Boy Still Sneezing

London, May 17 (AP)—The London schoolboy who can't stop sneezing left it to stop.

But a chiropractor has him in hand and says he can cure the school's fun disease.

Michael Hippisley, 14, has sneezed almost every three seconds for 10 days, except when he's asleep from drugs or exhaustion, Leslie W. D. Jelfs, the chiropractor, entered the case Monday night.

He said today he has already eased the sneezes.

Michael wandered around Jelfs' apartment and office, sneezing frantically and regularly into a series of white handkerchiefs.

Jelfs was invited, expressed to a reporter while Jelfs was out of the room: "I think I'm a little jealous."

Mike's parents called in Jelfs when doctors, a sympathist, a faith healer and sundry telephoned suggestions from well-wishers had left Mike still sneezing.

Jelfs said Mike has had sneezes and has fever since he was three.

"Probably he's had a fall or severe bump when he was small," he said.

"That, said Jelfs, has knocked his neck joints of his spine too far to the right, pinching some nerves and causing the sneezing fit. He says X-ray pictures prove the point.

To cure the sneezes, he will have to get the neck bones lined up straight. It probably take how long that may take, because, he says, the muscles have shrunk on one side and stretched on the other. To cure the sneezes, they'll have to be trained properly again to hold the bones straight.

"It probably take several months" a reported suggested.

"Don't say—you're not take that long," Jelfs answered.

Universities Must Maintain Tradition, Give Future Cultural Values of Life

—VISCOUNT ALEXANDER

Sackville, N.B., May 17 — (CP) — Canada's Governor - General said today C.nadian univ.rsities will lose much of their unique value if they become "mere further step in school education" and if degrees become something needed to get a good job.

The Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, spoke at the annual convocation of Mount Allison University, where he received an honorary Doctorate of Laws.

The result of several years spent at a university, he said in a speech prepared for convocation, "is the development of the cultural side of life, and I cannot believe that this will continue to be true if the universities thousands-of students are working to obtain degrees in subjects which could just as well, if not better, be obtained at a commercial school designed for speciallized knowledge."

Outlining the history of universities, the University's chancellor, Viscount Alexander said Canadian universities now were greatly overcrowded.

But by making university education available to a wider section of the Second World War "we have given to a small part of that debt we owe these young warriors who fought for us and to the generous approach to the problem will not only pay a good dividend in the future but that these young people are today amongst the best of your students."

If universities expanded to meet Canada's growing population, he said he hoped "that the great universities of Canada will maintain their traditions, prestige and position, and continue to give to future generations the cultural values of life which are the heritage of a great people."

Residents Wanted Street Wiring Put Underground

Residents of the new Parkwood Heights housing subdivision are disappointed that wiring for street lighting was not placed underground and thus rid the area of unsightly overhead wiring.

This point was pointed out this morning by Mayor D. L. Storey at the regular meeting of the public utilities commission when he stated he had received several complaints regarding the overhead wiring.

Chairman of the commission, Russell Wotten replied, however, that it was the practice in new sub-divisions to place wiring underground. It was pointed out that the cost of underground wiring would be considerably above that of overhead wiring. New sub-divisions in all parts of the province are being wired by overhead wiring, it was stated.

Kiwanis Club Scores Another Hit With Fourth Production Of "Pack Up Your Troubles"

For the fourth year in succession, the Kiwanis Club's musical revue "Pack Up Your Troubles" scored a smash hit before a large crowd of "first-nighters" at the production's 1949 debut in the Collegiate Auditorium last night.

The production, while not having the comic antics of its predecessors makes up for any loss, if any, along attraction lines by the sheer force of its musical beauty in the variable sequence of performance, the charm and skilful personality of its mixed chorus, the vocal and histrionic ability of its individual stars, and as a stage presentation as a whole.

"Pack Up Your Troubles" will do, if last night's first performance is a criterion. It ran smoothly, with number following number in a clear pattern of rhythmic sequence. There were encores, it is true, but these fitted into the scheme of things as easily and with no more effort than the programed numbers.

The show is cleverly, beautifully staged. The colorful setting easily one of the features of the production and the flawless work of forty voices form a melodic background to the efforts of the featured artists.

Chorus, Music Features

The music is under the direction of E. Reg. Hinchey, well-known conductor and musician of this city and to him must go credit for a splendid job of production not only in the choral work but in the fine performance of the orchestra under his baton. Both chorus and orchestra in this first-night performance gave evidence of hours and weeks of careful training and rehearsal and their work is easily one of the outstanding features of the production.

Hilarious comedy skits intersperse the program proper in a delightful variation, while the antics of the comedians form a humorous background to some of the vocal numbers.

"Old Man River"

Harold Carruthers, perennial star of the Kiwanis productions, again shone as his role of baritone soloist. The mixed male chorus he offers "Chasing Rainbows" to open his series of numbers. Later in the first part of the show he leads Marion Dove and Jean Bevis and Eddie Waterhouse. The sextet staged a very effective lighting skit with Carruthers "rocking the house" with his rendition of "Old Man River" and Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante. There's a catch to it, but you find out when you see it. Carruthers' Indian trick and also do a funny army skit fitting and his make-up for the clothes. "Dr. Kildare" portrayed by Bankier is hilariously funny and the "Nurses" chorus is a riot that is until the climax when he makes an abrupt exit. Bankier is the better part of valor.

The entire ensemble is heard in the Kiwanis revue numbers at the end of each act. "Hungarian Rhapsody" sends the first act with a lovely arrangement "A Tribute to Irving Berlin" opens the first second act and the show to a close. In this arrangement are heard such numbers as "Say It With Music"; "Remember"; "Easter Parade"; "Blue Skies"; "All Alone"; "Russian Lullaby"; "This is the Army, Mr. Jones", "White Christmas" and "God Bless America". Old Carruthers, Barbara Kyle and Barbara Jean Williamson in the closing solo roles. The cast responded to several curtain calls at the conclusion of the show.

The entire show is produced and directed by Ted Schwab, who has been mainly responsible for the success of the productions predecessors.

It is gala entertainment and should be seen by a capacity audience Wednesday and Thursday nights when performances will be given.

Following is the cast and orchestra personnel:

Musical direction by E. Reg. Hinchey, C.B.A., C.A.P.A.C.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 17 — (CP)
Prices backed down under mild selling pressure in moderately active dealings on the Toronto stock exchange today. Industrials and base metals eased quietly from yesterday's advances and junior gold producers continued to show strength. Several western oils were quietly lower.

Volume for the first three hours was 411,250 shares, about 145,000 shares more than yesterday's similar period.

Changes were held to fractions in the industrial groupings where many of yesterday's gainers weakening. Losses were lower and several steels and utilities eased.

A few small golds attracted a large bulk of the trading activity for small changes. Junior producers showed losses ranging up to 25 cents.

Consolidated Smelters added ¾ at 97¼ in base metals.

Footbills Petroleum and Pacific Petroleum were down 10 cents in an easier western oil list.

Low Prices Hurt Northern Manitoba Trapping Industry

By BERNICE REDFATH MacIVER
Church Bay, Man. May 17 (CP)—The bottom has fallen out of the trapping trade in this Northern Manitoba outpost.

Veterans of the trapline have been forced to sell their dog teams, holding that trapping no longer is a profitable venture because of the combination of low fur prices and high cost of living.

Art Anderson, fur buyer, sheds light on the situation. Five years ago he paid as high as $25 for a red fox pelt. Last year prices ranged from 75 cents to $3. Out of that the trapper pays a government royalty of 25 cents.

"This is surely a very small return for trapping the animal and skinning, stretching and bringing the pelt to market," said one trapper.

Although this is fox country, trappers say that they have seen few fox tracks this past winter. Anderson feels that the fall-off probably can be ascribed to a rabies epidemic among the animals two years ago.

Anderson disclosed that he also has taken only half the usual quantity of mink in his fur room. There has been a big price drop for mink pelts. Anderson has paid $65 for a single mink skin. Today the same skin would be worth only about $12.

Trappers have reported to Anderson that virtually the entire west coast of Hudson Bay, stretching from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, has been washout this season for quantity of fur.

Another trapper, who had been accident of making a good mink catch, since he had not disturbed them on his trapline for several years, brought 18 mink to town and collected slightly more than $200 for them. This would constitute only a fraction of his winter's grubstake.

This trapper faced other difficulties. He found himself unable to obtain wolf, fox or deer meat to feed his dogs. Several of the animals died of starvation and the others were too weakened by hunger to pull his weight. When he returned from his trapline he was forced to break trail for the dogs for 40 miles.

Boy's Condition Greatly Improved

Although suffering the loss of all the fingers of his left hand and three fingers of his right hand when a dynamite cap exploded Saturday, the condition of William Creighton, nine-year-old Flinton boy, was improved today.

His attending physician, Dr. G. S. Crook, stated the lad was able to sit up in bed. Fortunately the boy's face and eyes escaped injury in the blast although his one shoulder was injured.

The blast late Monday afternoon the nine-year-old lad said he had not known what it was that had exploded. "They told me today that it was dynamite," he said. He did not like to stay in the hospital but would rather be at home.

William was injured Saturday afternoon when he was playing with dynamite caps which had been found in the attic of their house.

Church Has Something to Say To Distracted World, Declares Archbishop Lyons to Synod

Kingston, May 17 (CP)—A world "distracted and in distress" confronts the Christian Church with "a challenge that must not at all costs go unheeded," Most Rev. John Lyons, Archbishop of Ontario, said today in his charge to the first session of the Fourth Anglican Synod.

"The struggle today is the age-long one between the forces of good and evil," said Archbishop Lyons, who is Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario. "We must take stock of our resources and potentialities; lay our plans and shape our strategy, not only to consolidate what we possess but to advance in making the Christian way of life known and accepted among men."

Commenting on the Lambeth Conference in England of Anglican Bishops last year, Archbishop Lyons said the Conference was one of encouragement to the people of God all the world over and called to remembrance the fact that the church discharges its mission "in the world, through the doctrine and work of its members." He added that the conference was a recognition of the church's determination to "think out afresh the Christian ideal of work . . . in terms of modern working conditions".

In reference to the World Council of Churches meeting in Amsterdam this year, Archbishop Lyons expressed pleasure at the harmony and frankness of the meeting.

"The achievement of the conference at this short range cannot be fully appraised yet, its future is full of hope and in our hands."

Archbishop Lyons welcomed Newfoundland to the Dominion "not only for what it will bring materially into the union but also because of what it will bring our church." He announced plans to unite the Anglican churches of the rest of Canada and Newfoundland at the Halifax General Synod this autumn.

Concluding his charge Archbishop Lyons said: "The church has something to say, and must say it, concerning the application of the Christian ideals to the problems of life."

POLICE COURT

Liquor Control Act offenders predominated in city magistrate's court today as no less than five such offenders were sentenced to jail terms by Magistrate F. Y. Wills in default of payment of the customary fines.

Three men were given jail terms for being "drunk" in a public place, while two others, charged with having illegal possession of liquor were assessed $100 fine, or two months in jail in default of payment. In all instances the fines were levied by the offenders.

Two local young men were sentenced to one day in jail on vagrancy charges. The men were picked up Sunday as they were loitering in the horse barns at the fair grounds but were later given their freedom to appear in court.

"Let this be a warning to you," stated Magistrate Wills as he pronounced the one day jail terms. "Visit our jail once and you will not want to become a permanent guest. I consider only a fraction of his winter's grubstake.

Police Blotter

A four-year-old lad locked in the cab of a truck parked on Pinnacle Street, while his father employed a few beers at a local hotel, drew the attention of police officers Monday. When found by police the young boy was giving vent to his feelings at being locked in the truck and his father at the hotel turned up the father.

Theft of a watch at Rutter's Coffee Shop on Dundas Street, East, was reported to police. The watch was made the complaint stated two unknown men had taken the watch and had disappeared north on MacDonald Ave.

A search by police officers failed to turn up any suspicious characters.

Police attention was drawn to a leaky water main on Campbell Street which was oozing water through the sidewalk and was running along the curb and down a catch basin. Police informed the public works department.

A St. Paul Street woman complained that a bonfire in a neighbor's yard was destroying the whiteness of her newly hung clothes. Police investigated and reported the fire was 100 feet from the wash and the wind was blowing in the opposite direction.

Springer Family Enjoyed Winter In Florida

Tanned by Florida suns, and looking a picture of health Mr. William C. Springer, 103 Dundas Street, returned recently from a holiday in the sunny south. Mr. Springer, who is being joined by daughter, Helen, spent the holiday in Augustine, where another daughter, Mrs. D. R. Dunham and her family, reside.

"Florida, despite its fist terrific rain is still the mecca for those seeking a large number of them Canadians," Mr. Springer said . . . "and I livin' it easy parable to that of Canada although though the temperature is higher. Togrande oranges can be purchased for one cent the dozen. Housing is a problem, too, although Mr. Springer finally found a cozy apartment after a week's search.

Highlight of the Springer's stay was the invitation to a barbecue in a 5,000-acre ranch owned by a friend just outside St. Augustine. A whole beef carcass is lowered into pits and wood fires kindled under the cooking vessels. "That meat is out of this world" Mr. Springer said.

Another favorite dish at the barbecue is a sauce which is called Brunswick stew. This is cooked in large copper containers and the mixture is stirred with big paddles for hours.

Disaster nearly overtook the Springers and Dunhams while enjoying the barbecue. Their car was struck by a hit-and-run driver, a Negro, who forced them into the ditch. Fortunately all escaped with a shaking up.

Later State police caught up with the errant hit-and-run driver, who stated that he thought he had driven over a stump in the road. However, as good as Florida is, Mr. Springer says the new splendor of Belleville looks pretty good after all, especially when you have been away from it for awhile.

Now he is back home and contented. He will devote his time to the cultivation of mushrooms in a special motor-driven lawn mower, controlled by "strings" from the cellar and powered by means of a hundred feet of wire from an electric outlet.

Mrs. Mary Deacon Hears Composition Sung by School

An assembly of especial interest took place on Monday morning at King George Public School when Mary Connor Deacon heard her patriotic composition, "Beautiful Canada" sung for the first time.

Richard Moore acted as director of ceremonies and opened the assembly by calling upon Barbara Bennett to read the scripture. This was followed by the Lord's Prayer.

After the singing of the hymn "When Morning Guilds the Sky", Principal E. G. Fairman called upon Miss May, Supervisor of Music, to introduce Mrs. Deacon. The entire assembly rose as Mrs. Deacon was seated at the piano and sang as one voice the very fine composition "Beautiful Canada."

Mr. Fairman called upon Mrs. Deacon to speak to the assembly. She complimented the children upon their fine singing and expressed her pleasure that they liked her song and hoped to be able to write other things that they would enjoy.

Mr. Deacon then delighted the children by singing in most appropriate solo "Be the Fellow That Your Mother Thinks You Are", accompanied by Mrs. Deacon.

Mr. Fairman expressed his thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Deacon for coming. The assembly closed with the pupils repeating "The Pledge to the Flag" and the singing of the National Anthem.

THEN AND NOW

Turning time backward a few decades to the early era of the automobile a writer in the Hamilton Spectator catches glimpses of travel in those days along highways which were not highways but macadam roads with all the weaknesses these arteries of limited traffic offered the public that dared to drive automobiles. He says:

"Highways, as this age knows them, did not exist. They were simply roads that became rural quagmires in spring and dust bowls in summer. Drivers wore special caps and goggles; women tied their hats on with ample veils usually green in color. Both wore dusters. They needed them, too, tearing over the countryside at up to fifteen miles an hour, terrifying livestock, setting horses to leap fences and infuriating people who spoke of cars as those 'plagued things.'

Breakdowns were frequent and their causes baffling. Something, sometimes in the carriage's innards, would go off with a bang or a string of firecrackers and the peaky thing would stop dead. The driver, with more tools than a steamfitter and the chief engineer of a luxury liner, would have to crawl under the chassis and there, on his back, toy and tinker, fume and fuss, until he could coax a cough out of it. Meanwhile his wife would sit patiently in her seat and nonchalantly read a book."

These were some of the drawbacks of early travel by the old style road when autos were young and drivers very few. Today the finest roads with the passing throng of cars form another picture —a world that has changed greatly in locomotion.

Today there is an army of drivers on the roads, the cars are smooth-riding and the last word in comfort and in ease of operation.

Romance possibly has escaped out of motoring in some respects but others there is an expanded interest which knows practically no bounds. The car has transformed the face of the earth. It is found in all the accessible parts of the globe among every race and community of people.

This is the true romance of the development of the motorcar and highway and of the change of the public from a settled society of men and women and children to a restless moving throng of human beings, finding relaxation in new journeys and over new or old roadways.

There have been times of great changes in history but few more drastic and few in which so many are able to take part as in the rise of the automobile to its place of preeminence in the family life and in the business world.

TOURIST OUTLOOK

Reports continue to be received that the outlook for the tourist season during the coming months will be beyond expectations. The trade will bring in as well as tourists a large amount of money which will be expended in the Dominion.

Inquiries are a good index of the interest which has been aroused in the United States by publicity which has been given Canada's attractions for the American visitors. The fact that there is to be a record summer season is proved by the twenty-five million who last year it is estimated spent their vacations or other trips in different parts of the Dominion.

What they will bring in will possibly be close to the three-hundred-million-dollar mark.

Some will visit their way into every part of the country from coast to coast and from the international boundary to the farthest north. This part of Canada receives from the visitors year after year the highest praise of what this country has to offer in appeals to the visitors.

Out of the annual visits of tourists across the line will come increased understanding and appreciation of the life of the people of the United States and Canada. International relations of good will are always much to be desired. Fortunately those of these two countries are the most cordial possible and the two peoples are real good neighbors.

The art of flatterers is to take advantage of the foibles of the great, to foster their errors and never to give advice which may annoy.—Mollere.

The current of tenderness widens as it proceeds; and two men imperceptibly find their hearts filled with good nature for each other, when they were at first only in pursuit of mirth or relaxation.—Goldsmith.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1949, Edgar A. Guest)

"I AM FOUR"

Little Jane called me to say,
"I have cowboy boots today
And a cowboy costume, see,
Toys to play with in the sand,
It's my birthday come once more
And this morning I am four!"

"Last night when you went to bed
You were three years old," I said.
"I was three!" I heard her
"But I'm four years old today!"
Just as proud as proud can be
To be four instead of three.

I have wondered, now and then,
What rewards life offers men
If for disappointments great
There are charms to compensate!
But to live such joy to see
Makes it all worth while for me.

Just to hear so blithe a voice
Makes this heart of mine rejoice
Worth the waiting down the years;
Worth the heartache and the tears;
Just as proud as proud can be
To be four instead of three.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

Water in the bay continues to rise and conditions are distressing along the bay shore area. Besides the many fishermen the people who live near the water's edge, the effect on summer resorts will be bad. High water will prevent the use of the beaches. High water is killing the fresh fish business this season. Hoop-net fishing was a failure. Though the season was extended fifteen days the catch was small. Many fishermen hardly made sufficient to pay for their license. Fishing in the creeks and rivers is not up to average owing to high water.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

UNFAIR

I am accused of being anti-Jewish by a New Orleans reader because, I am informed, I do not quote from Jewish writers in this column. This was a strange accusation to find out to a lover of books, for such a one is no respecter of race, color, or creed when it comes to the love of fine literature.

The very author that this correspondent takes me to task for not quoting I have already quoted from and with warmth. On my writing table and all through my library are books by Jewish writers that I love and respect—hundreds of them. Jewish authors are among the most brilliant in all literature. I would be a fool not to recognize this fact. And eminently unfair I am "anti" neither writer nor human being, who is honest and high minded.

Every race, color and creed is represented in all my writing habits and I am enriched by them all. I wonder why my reader gets the impression he has received — and used, perhaps, a fictitious name? Time and again I have quoted from Jewish authors in this column, as well as from scores of others—Roman, German, French, Catholic — but why enumerate? Above all, I only hope that I am you can place before intolerance, wrong and war.

I have been writing this brief column for thirty years and many of the kindest and most appreciative letters I have received have been from my Jewish readers. In every one I am most grateful for their encouragement and appreciation. My first secretary was a Jewish lady, and the salesman who has been longest with me in my business is a Jewish gentleman. I never look upon my Jewish friends as Jews — only as friends —often I prefer to call them foes.

Only through an inbument of tolerance can we be universally happy and co-operative in the many activities of this life. Said Joshua Loth Liebman, one of his widely read, and inspiring little book, "Peace of Mind," which I read when first published: "Society is God's gift to this earth, and our mutual involvements may yet be made His supreme benediction."

Mackenzie's Column: Western Allies, Russia Preparing For Biggest Battle

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Analyst)

Under cover of the "peace" brought about by the lifting of the Berlin blockade, the Western Allies and Russia are preparing intensively for what could be the biggest battle of the cold war —the struggle for control of Germany.

The conflict will be joined again next Monday in Paris with resumption of the Big Four Foreign Ministers' Council. And German leaders, anxious to see the Reich reunited, look to former premier Stalin as a great power, are weighing the odds in the political gamble they must make in pledging their co-operation.

West Stands Pat

The western democracies are standing pat on carrying out their program for creating a federal republic comprising their three zones occupation. It is their hope that Eastern Germany, now under Communist control, will join federal government.

Premier Stalin is to create a strong but peaceful nation in the heart of central Europe as a barrier against war.

Russia on the other hand is against a federal government. She wants a unified country under a Communist regime.

Kinsmen Clubs Spread Rapidly In West Ontario

London, Ont., May 17 (CP) — Kinsmen Clubs have spread and expanded so rapidly in western Ontario since World War II that district governor, Don Cecil Reid of Windsor to Niagara Falls and Owen Sound) was broken down into districts to come under a deputy-governor at the Kinsmen Convention Monday.

The new system of zone administration will come into effect Sept. 1, when governor-elect Don E. Patterson of Hanover, deputy governor last year, takes office.

The new zones will be as follows: Northern, from Stratford north; western from Wardsville west; central from Stratford to Lake Erie; eastern from Stratford to Hamilton.

By a change in the constitution deputy governors will be elected for each zone at the May next spring. Niagara Falls was decided on as next year's convention city.

attraction for some Germans. However, the German leaders are aware that Russia is thoroughly the threat of Communism — which they definitely don't want.

Moreover, they are not overlooking that, on the insistence of Moscow, Poland was permitted to annex 38,000 square miles comprising the former German provinces of Silesia, Pomerania and West Prussia. This rich area was given Warsaw by Stalin plus the 69,860 square miles of Eastern Poland which was ceded to Russia.

In any event the Germans can't play "neutral" successfully between the East and West. They have to pick and stick.

Indications in Washington are that United States Secretary Dean Acheson and his assistants will want actions rather than words at the Paris talks. They undergone any change of heart along with the lifting of the blockade.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

One of the curious things about infantile paralysis or polio is that it rarely if ever attacks a homely child. There is not, in the whole world record of polio, a single instance of a Hollywood Gretin child being paralyzed by polio.

The disease chooses children of highly developed nervous structure whose fineness in that respect is manifested in their looks, their beauty, their delicacy. One sees the shattering effects of visiting the convalescent of a children's hospital is the course of piny. Still overwhelmed you as you look upon perfect little angels with arms wrecked and broken by the disease.

Medical science is making tremendous strides in its attack on polio. They have discovered the virus and have identified in the neighborhood of thirty types of virus. They have found, as polio is not a seasonal disease. It is with us all the year round and is carried and kept alive amongst us by flies, mosquitoes and adults too, in the form of what is mistaken for flu or colds or mild fevers. Statistics prove that more than twenty or forty children can be infected with the polio virus without suffering any paralysis. But the one child, or being infected by these others, suffers paralysis and there are exceptions, the children who are so selected, are high-grade, finely-constituted children whose nervous system affords the virus its full and best chance.

All over the world, and particularly in Canada, medical research scientists are closing in on polio. What they are hoping to do is to isolate one of the many strains of the virus and make a vaccine from it which can be used exactly as the vaccines are used, so triumphantly, against diphtheria and whooping cough.

It may be too soon to expect; but it does seem worth hope and prey. Science has all its weapons trained on the new visible enemy.

THE TAPERING OFF PLAN.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Weight Lifting

I am 17, 65 inches tall, weigh 110 pounds. Would you advise weight lifting (40-pound weight) two or three times a week as a method of developing muscular proportions and good health? Exercise period are about one-half hour. (G. K.)

Answer—No. Much better to get advice from the physical director at school. that is the physical education teacher, if you are out of school, then ask the physical director at the Y.M.C.A. If you are unwilling to seek professional advice, regular daily stints of walking, running, high jump, long jump, swimming or other athletics or contests of skill and agility would be better for your physical development and your health.

Shower Versus Tub

Rhinbad takes only showers because he says that the tub tends to remove too much of the natural oil from the skin. I do not feel quite clean because I have a hot tub bath at least... (Mrs. M. T. L.)

Answer—I agree with your husband, Ma'am. Just between ourselves perhaps a little sentry about soaking. You want to keep a good complexion, don't you? Then don't eat too much fat, but cut potatoes in the bathtub and don't use a loofah and does. A bath tub is a relic of the nineteenth century, like long underwear and handlebar mustaches.

Pepper

Meats, vegetables etc., have always been unpalatably seasoned with peppe in our house, but I find pepper irritating. My wife and fiance would not have pepper in his home—he says it irritates the stomach lining and that I am cutting years off my life by using it as a seasoning. (E. S.)

Answer—If I liked pepper on my food I'd have it as I liked it, it might cheer your fiance up if he would read the red book What Pepper Does to You and send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

City Has Contract to Supply Water to Sidney and Thurlow P.U.C. Manager Points Out

The public utilities commission does not require sanction from city council to give approval for the extension of water services in Thurlow township and for the supply of water for the additional services.

This was emphasized at the regular meeting of the utilities commission Monday afternoon when the question was raised by Mayor D. L. Money when he asked, on behalf of city council, if proposed extensions to the city filtration plant would be necessary if it was not planned to supply water for additional water services in the township.

At the previous meeting of the commission members voted tentative approval for Thurlow township to construct an additional 14,000 feet of water mains.

Public Utilities Manager O. H. Scott pointed out that the city has a contract with both Thurlow and Sidney townships to supply water. He said the city had signed contracts for the supply of water both with Thurlow and Sidney.

Do Not Require Approval

The extensions to the water filtration plant would be necessary whether or not water was supplied to the neighboring municipalities, it was stated.

"The commission does not require approval of city council only for the borrowing of money," pointed out Chairman Russell Wotten. "City council does not seem to understand that the commission runs the utilities—that we were put here to do that job."

Mr. Scott pointed out that under the water agreement with the rural municipalities, the commission was to do all "reasonably" necessary to supply an even flow of pressure water, but if the township desired greater pressure, it was up to them to install a booster pump.

May Have to Install Pump

The plan of Thurlow township to extend their water mains was given final approval by the commission, they to be advised of the contract clause regarding the installation of a booster pump, if it was deemed necessary.

Mayor Money complained of the condition of city streets as left by contractors following the installation of sewer and water services. He said that consulting engineers, Gore and Storrie were negligent in their duties when they did not require contractors to live up to their contract in returning the streets into good condition.

"Excavation fills keep sinking and the contractors do very little about it," he said. "I have had many complaints from all over the city, but from Queen Street in particular."

Tenders Received

Tenders for the proposed extension at the filtration plant were opened, two tenders being received, one from the St. Lawrence Contracting Co. Ltd., at $88,525.25, and another for $97,525, from the Ramsay Contracting Co. Ltd. of Toronto. The tenders were referred to Gore and Storrie for recommendation.

Commission members voted to move a light pole at the corner of Coleman and Water Streets to permit the city public works department to widen the curve at this point.

It was also voted to send delegates to the Annual Conference of the American Waterworks Association being held at Chicago from May 29th to June 3rd.

Policemen Must be Shining Example of Public Service Inspector Hayes Tells Rotarians

Police officers must in emergencies act as doctor, lawyer, consultant, fireman, scientist and at all times be an example of courtesy, a Lord Chesterfield in manners, a model of deportment, big brother to all kinds and shining example of public service, Rotarian Police Inspector Clare Hayes said here yesterday.

Speaking to the Rotary Club in a classification address, the inspector said that the policeman's work has many extra bits of service such as helping the halt and the blind, soothing the feelings of the bereaved, aiding the destitute, walking into dark alleys at night as a public servant who renders a great service to society.

"Police officers are obligated by law and their oath of office to protect the lives and property of the citizens. If we protect them to the best of our ability there will be no need for the doctor and the lawyer."

In training, Inspector Hayes pointed out, "we were once weak but we are improving. Training of police officers is something which has come in the last 25 years. The ultimate success of any police department depends on the acts of the individual officer."

Great Need For Training

Respect and observance of the law will come only with the full understanding of the underlying principles and purposes of the administration of justice. Many people do not understand what the law is—or why it is. There is a great need for training in citizenship not only for police officers but for all members of the community, the speaker said.

"When one considers the amount of abuses a police officer is called upon to accept from the public, one wonders how they hold their tempers as well as they do and how seldom persons taken into custody are 'roughed up'," he went on.

"It should be remembered that the officers are sworn to enforce the law. For that reason it is rather disgusting to see crowds standidly by while hooligans do their best to beat up a policeman. These men are only human and we know what restraint it must take on occasions to hold their temper."

Not Enemies of Public

Declaring that police officers are not the enemies of the public, the inspector pointed out they have a duty to perform and in these days of widespread gangsterism, they take their lives in their hands every time they don a uniform. For that reason they are due the respect which their duties demand.

Referring to the activities of the Belleville Police Department, the speaker stated it has a strength of 19 men. During the year 1948 the department handled 5,030 occurrences. Constables on duty at night found 243 properties insecure. There were 851 breaches of the Liquor Control Act, the main item being drunkenness which amounted to 557 cases. There were 1586 cases in the city court during the past year. Many of these were for minor offences, but 221 of them were criminal offences and each one passed through the hands of Magistrate T. V. Wills.

Inspect Property Nightly

Inspections of property are made nightly. A cruiser car manned by two constables patrols the properties not covered by the men on the street beats. This car visited 61 properties on three different occasions nightly and covers an average patrol of 85 miles. The cruiser on day duty checks traffic, attends accidents and conveys prisoners to and from the county jail.

The speaker dealt with various phases of general police work and quoted several cases which he had investigated.

In conclusion he said that in every street and alley, in every rural community and on every highway, in every court, the police officer stands as the exponent of good citizenship in compliance with law and order.

Inspector Hayes was paid fine tribute by Rotarian Judge J. C. Anderson who introduced him. Club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian McLean Haig.

The Women's Institutes of Ontario, an organization that had its origin in 1897 and grew out of the old "Farmers' Institutes" has just published a valuable booklet for use of Federal Women's Institutes of Ontario. Miss Anna P. Lewis, Director of the Women's Institutes Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, is head of a committee which had charge of its publication.

Not only does the booklet, contain a wealth of information on constitution and by-laws for branches for the Junior Institutes, District Womens Institutes and Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, but there is considerable historical material in it also. It contains a complete record of the early history of the movement with dates and figures on its growth.

In her recent report to the Spring meeting of the Board of Directors at Guelph, Miss Lewis disclosed that WI movement in Ontario has grown until today at it has an active membership in the province totalling 4,150. There are 1,327 Senior Institutes and 74 Junior Institutes. The latter takes in young people of Junior Farmer age.

A section of the book deals with "Procedure in Women's Institute meetings." It contains advice on the "Duties of Officers," as well as "Good form in procedure, on the part of the member, the president, the secretary and the auditors."

Proper parliamentary procedure in introducing motions, rescinding, resignation and adjourning and closing a meeting are also included.

The book may be obtained from the Women's Institutes Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Ina McCauley, of Toronto, kindly showed moving pictures in technicolor, of some of the beautiful spots in Canada. The pictures were shown in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge St., Church, and were in aid of the Albert Colleg Women's Guild.

Mrs. Northcott, the president, with Canada. She spoke of the beauty of nature, and of how it interprets the love of God to those of us who study it.

ice drift which had broken off from a glacier and was floating in the ocean, fairly close to the ship's course. It was raining when the picture was taken, but the ice drift showed clearly. It reflected beautiful shades of blue and green from its icy depths and one can imagine how it must have looked when the sun was shining on it.

Lovely Scenery

Miss McCauley's first pictures were taken near Banff and in Jasper Park, in Spring and showed masses of poppies and other wild flowers making a flame of color against the stark background of the pines which stood at the foothills of the mountains. Far above soared the mighty peaks, their snow-capped summits glittered in the sun.

High waterfalls leaped downward over out-cropping ledges of rock, and below, forests of wild flowers spread through narrow gorges, between high rocky walls. Placid lakes some sapphire blue, some emerald green mirrored on their surface the surrounding pine trees. Here and there the shadows were broken by red canoes, gliding out from strange, hidden on the shores. An atmosphere of peace lay over the whole landscape.

Ice Drift

In her next picture Miss McCauley showed scenes taken on a trip from Vancouver to Alaska. She succeeded in getting a picture of an

White Robin

The next picture was taken in Ontario, the Niagara district in Spring, and showed masses of peach blossom against a set blue sky. Here Miss McCauley showed also a beautiful picture of the white robin. This beautiful bird is very rare, and few people have seen it. The pictures showing it in spring time in its routine duties, quite unaware of the glamor it was adding to the scene. Robins are well known to be very friendly to humans, and this white robin was no exception to the general rule, as it allowed itself to be photographed at close range.

Deer Family

The next picture was a study of animal life, in Algonquin Park. Miss McCauley had succeeded in getting some very fine pictures of a family of deer. They appeared quite fearless, as here, and the pictures were taken at close range. There was also a picture of a moose engaged in his usual pursuit of pilfering.

Gorgeous Sunset

The last picture was taken on an island near Sudbury. It showed the sun sinking behind the surrounding hills, and spreading a ray of crimson light over the dark, purple waters. It was a fitting climax to the beautiful scenes in "This Canada of ours."

During the evening, while the reels were being changed there were musical numbers all of which were appreciated. Mrs. Hubbs played a piano solo, Mrs. Mitchell sang, and Mr. William Connor and Mr. Alec Gordon played a duet.

All present united in thanking Miss McCauley for her kindness in showing her pictures and the other artists for their assistance in making the evening so pleasant.

Mrs. J. A. Lole an earnest W.A. worker for 17 years, was a guest at the meeting and in a few remarks said, "The aim of the W.A. was to make the women more Christian and to always choose good Christian women as leaders."

Two cot quilts were completed during the day for the missionary bale.

Mastin at the death of her aunt's death. Mrs. James Vesterfelt sent a letter stating she would be unable to attend as she was leaving for England to visit her parents. Prayer for safety was requested to send a letter to Mrs. Vesterfelt expressing best wishes for a "Bon Voyage" and a safe return.

A letter was also read from the Salvation Army and it was decided to help in their work, and the same amount to be sent to the Bible Society.

The hostess was thanked for opening her home, for the dainty refreshments, and a social time enjoyed by all.

SCOTT'S W.A.-W.M.S.

On Wednesday last, an extra large crowd took dinner at the home of Mrs. Ken Faul at the W.A. dinner.

At Mrs. Faul was hostess, Mrs. M. Sine took charge of the meeting.

Mrs. H. W. Rose gave a reading "Your Money or Your Life", showing it is either Giving of it self or deliver Christ's message, or the furnishing of money for some one else to go. Mrs. Croft read the story of the good neighbor from Luke 10, verses 30-37. It was pointed out that in order to have a successful auxiliary the three "ins"—indecision, indifference and intolerance must be eliminated. Mrs. Scott stressed the responsibility of the home to the Christian steward.

Mrs. Neelands gave a talk on "Communism in China". As the Nazis advanced so fast as a weapon, so do the Communists. Two questions were asked, "How did Communism come to get it started?" and how has it gained?

China's immense area teems with millions of population. Poverty is the lot of over half the people. Child labor is prevalent as in Hankow where children from 6 to 14 years from four in the morning to 8.30 p.m. About half the people die before they reach the age of 30. Illiteracy is rife and education is only for the wealthy. Inflation has been another disaster. Disease, filth and a great deal of graft and corruption is practised. Means of transportation were inadequate.

The Communists came along and offered bread and land, so the people joined them. The Communists had discipline and devotion. A lesson from them could be learned. Be devoted to the cause; have more discipline in the life; be more concerned with others; have more discipline in the church; and seek unity of action.

There is no retreat in China, but W.M.S. Slogan "Advance" must have meaning. The Christian Church has "love" which is mightier than the sword.

Miss I. McCauley Shows Lovely Technicolor Films

A large number of citizens in Belleville enjoyed a treat last Wednesday night, when Miss Ina McCauley, of Toronto, kindly showed moving pictures in technicolor of some of the beautiful spots in Canada. The pictures were shown in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge St. Church, and were in aid of the Albert College Women's Guild. Mrs. Northcott, the president of the Guild, introduced Miss McCauley, to the audience. Miss McCauley, a former resident of Belleville, a graduate of Belleville Collegiate and an honor graduate of Toronto University. She has travelled extensively in Europe and in England, but she said that, in her search for beauty she had found no other country that could compare with Canada for beauty. She spoke of the beauty of nature, and of how it interprets the love of God to those of us who study it.

"Are You Fully Covered?"

Lovely Scenery

Miss McCauley's first pictures were taken near Banff and in Jasper Park, in Spring and showed ranges of poppies and other wild flowers making a flame of color against the dark background of the pines which stood at the foothills of the mountains. Far above soared the mighty peaks, their snow-capped summits glittered in the sun.

Highway after highway led downward over out-cropping ledges of rock, and beyond, torrents of water surged and foamed through narrow gorges, between high rocky walls. Placid lakes some sapphire blue, some emerald green mirrored on their surfaces the surrounding pine trees. Here and there the shadows were broken by red canoes, gliding out from camps, hidden on the shores. An atmosphere of peace lay over the whole landscape.

Ice Drift

In her next picture Miss McCauley showed scenes taken on a trip from Vancouver to Alaska on the inner route. She succeeded in getting a picure of an ice drift which had broken off from a glacier and was floating in the ocean, fairly close to the ship's course. It was raining when the picture was taken, but the ice drift showed clearly. It reflected beautiful shades of blue and green from its icy depths and one can imagine how it must have looked when the sun was shining on it.

Whale Alaska

The next picture was taken in Ontario, the Niagara district in Spring, and showed rows of peach blossom, with a sun blue sky. Here Miss McCauley showed several lovely pictures of the white robin. This beautiful bird is very rare, and few people have seen it. The pictures showed it going about its spring-time duties, quite unaware of the glamor it was adding to the scene. Robins are well known to be very friendly to humans, and this white robin was no exception to the general rule, as it allowed itself to be photographed at close range.

Deer Family

The next picture was a study of animal life in Algonquin Park, Miss McCauley had succeeded in getting shots of five pictures of a family of deer. They showed quite fearless, as here, also, the pictures were taken at close range. There was also a picture of a bear, engaged in his usual pursuit of pilfering.

Gorgeous Sunset

The last picture was taken on an island near Sudbury. It showed the sun sinking behind the surrounding islands and sending a ray of crimson light over the placid waters. It was a fitting climax to the beautiful scenes in "This Canada of Ours."

During the evening, while the pictures were being changed there were musical numbers all of which were greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Hubbs played a piano solo, Mrs. MacDonald sang, and Mr. Willard Connor and Mr. Alec Gordon played a duet.

All present united in thanking Miss McCauley for her kindness in showing her pictures and the other artists for their assistance in making the evening so pleasant.

Mrs. Neelands gave a talk on "Communism in China". As she said "Nazism appeared to fear as a weapon, so do the Communists. Two world Wars have resulted. How did Communism come to get a hold? Fear!, and how has it gained?

China's immense area teems with millions of population. Poverty is the lot of over half the people Child labor is prevalent as in Hankow where children from 8 to 14 work from four in the morning to 8.30 p.m. About half the people of China die before they reach the age of 30. Illiteracy is 80% as education is only for the wealthy. Inflation has been another disaster. Disease is rife and a great deal of graft and corruption is practised. Means of transportation were inadequate.

The Communists came along and offered bread and land, so the people joined them. The Communists had discipline and education. A lesson from them could be learned. Be devoted to the cause; have more discipline in the life; be more concerned with others; have more discipline in the church; and seek unity of action.

There is no retreat in China. The W.A.'s slogan "Advance" must have meaning. The Christian Church has "love" which is mightier than the sword.

Teaching Art To Two Sons

Toronto, May 17 — (AP) — Some 19 years ago slender Jack Guest vowed himself to fame by winning the Diamond Sculls for Canada. Today, still in good physical form, he teaching the art to his two teen-age sons.

Off the boom at the Don Rowing Club here, Guest frequently has John Jr., a 190-pound, 16-year-old student, and slim, 14-year-old Donald go through the fundamentals of stroking a shell through the water.

Any hopes of his sons winning the Diamond Sculls?

"I've thought about that," he said, "but it's too early yet to tell what the boys will be able to do in a boat. John hasn't been in actual competition yet."

Bishop Points Out Needs of New Suburban Areas

London, May 17 (CP)— Noting the growth of "Gospel Hall sects" Bishop G. N. Luxton told the opening of the 73rd Anglican Synod of Huron that the church should give immediate and more active attention to the religious needs of new suburban areas.

It was his first charge to the Synod since his election six months ago to succeed the late Archbishop C. A. Eager. Bishop Luxton formerly was a prominent Toronto rector. The synod continues until Wednesday.

If the church does not follow its adherents into new districts, he said, "other religious bodies with greater zeal and determination than we usually display will take advantage of our sloth and draw our children, and later our adults into their own assemblies

"I have remarked particularly" he declared "the mushroom growth of the gospel hall sects in these new areas.

Bishop Luxton said he surveyed new areas around Windsor and Sarnia, and the church extension committees there "have demonstrated what can be done when clergy and laity stress their community comradeship and community responsibility."

In the Sarnia area, "a site has been bought on London Road East, and H. R. Monigomery will take charge when he receives his deacon's orders. Committees are at work on plans and finances for a new church in the Grand Bend Summer resort area.

Policemen Watch As Government Passes Bill

London, May 17 — (CP)—The House of Commons rose early today after completing the committee stage of the controversial Ireland bill as police in plain clothes watched from the public galleries.

The session was completed without incident and the bill emerged from committee virtually unaltered. During the debate, 40 amendments were disposed of.

During the sitting, policemen in plain clothes sat in the public galleries. Visitors were scrutinized and armed detectives were on duty at strategic points.

These precautions were taken to guard against possible "incidents" while the debate proceeded. The bill, which received second reading last week, provided that Northern Ireland will remain a part of the United Kingdom and of the Commonwealth unless her own parliament decides otherwise. In other words, it continues the partition of Ireland to which the government of the newly - created Republic of Ireland strenuously objects.

Last week during debate on the bill a spectator in the galleries shouted "Up the republic!" There was no such scene Monday.

Armed police were posted last week around 10 Downing Street, residence of Prime Minister Attlee, as an added precaution in connection with the Irish bill.

The only sign of tension in the debate Monday came in an emotional speech by Jack Beattie, Labor member for Belfast West.

Door Slammed on Republic

Beattie, first Labor member for a Northern Ireland constituency, said the government bill "slams the door" in the face of the Republic of Ireland.

"Every other government left the door wide open for the two parts of Ireland to get together," he said. "If anybody can tell me where there is a glimpse of light in this bill let him do so.

"All I can see is darkness — darkness for the Irish nation; darkness for the government."

He warned the government that the bill would destroy the friendly feeling that had been building up between Ireland and England. Then, in a quick change of tone, he glared across at the Conservative benches and said feelingly:

"I would suffer my penance before I would ask anybody to vote against my party."

He said he hoped the Irish people, too, had more sense than to support the "deep - dyed villains" of the other side of the House.

Lancashire Miners Go Back to Work

Manchester, England, May 17 — (CP) — Striking Lancashire miners went back to work today ending a walkout started nine days ago. The walk-out involved 52,000 men and stopped production of 50,000 tons of coal daily.

The wildcat strike started over the miners' demand for free or cheap coal for their own use, such as is provided by most of Britain's nationalized fields.

Sixty-five Lancashire collieries were made idle.

Negotiations between representatives of the N.U.M. and the national coal board on the miners' demand are expected to begin soon, the board announced.

Liberals mean what they say. Look over the record of the last five years — the most impressive period of prosperity and growth in our history. It shows that Liberal performance exceeds Liberal promises.

Under Liberal policies, Canadians can be confident that this forward march will continue — that Liberal promises will again be carried out.

More Jobs—More Income

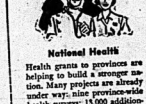
More people are working than in any previous peacetime period — nearly a million more than in 1939. National income is three times as high as in 1939, is more widely distributed than ever before.

More Savings

People have nearly 2½ million more bank accounts than before the war. They have put aside more than 4 billion dollars in personal bank savings.

More Production and Trade

The products of our farms and forests, factories and mines and fisheries are worth twice as much as ten years ago. And Canada's exports are more than four times greater. Canada is the world's third largest trading nation.



More Family Allowances

The federal government has, since 1945, invested one billion dollars in Canada's children. Four million boys and girls in 1½ million families are receiving a better start in life. Benefits are being extended this year.

More Old Age Pensions

Federal payments have been twice increased since 1945. The new pension basis is now increased to $40.00 a month, providing greater comfort and security for the aged and blind.

National Health

Health grants to provinces are helping to build a stronger nation. Many projects are already under way; nine province-wide health surveys; 13,000 additional hospital beds; training for health specialists; increased health services and research.

Aid to Home Builders

Close to 500,000 dwellings have been built since the war. More homes have been built in Canada, in proportion to population, than in any other country; and more were built last year than any time in our history.

And lowered taxes as well!

By careful administration the Liberal government has established these records and been able at the same time to cut the national debt by 1,625 million dollars.

And every budget since 1945 has announced lowered rates of taxation.

Stiffen Penalties in Cases Where Children Badly Treated

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 17 (CP)— Public opinion in Britain has been roused by a number of cases in which children have been cruelly treated or neglected by their parents.

The immediate reaction has been legislation to stiffen the penalties now provided by law.

Home secretary James Chuter Ede told the House of Commons, however, that the existing law is adequate. It provided a maximum penalty of six months imprisonment and £25 ($100) fine or two years and £100 fine if a magistrate sends the case to a higher court.

National Disgrace

Earl Winterton, Conservative member for Horsham, said cases of "Belsen-like" cruelty to children should be punished more severely.

Newspaper reports recently have told of children who have been cruelly beaten or otherwise hurt or left untended in filthy conditions for long periods.

The Torture

One case which roused the indignation of the London Evening Standard was that of a seven-year-old girl who had been deprived of food and clothing and was burned on various parts of her body. Her mother by adoption was fined £25 with costs and given three months in which to pay.

"This sentence was woefully and grossly inadequate," said the Standard.

Hundreds of readers wrote a letter of approval, many of them pointing out that technical offences against the state often drew far heavier penalties.

Protest 'Light' Penalties

On the same day as the case in question, said one writer, "it was reported that an ex-service-man who built two houses without a licence was fined £50 with £10 10s costs. Is not the contrast incredible."

When the matter was brought up in the Commons, Brigadier F. Medlicott, Liberal member for east Norfolk, asked if the government would not confer with religious, education and social workers "to find out the reason for the growth of this unhappy crime."

Ede replied there was no evidence that the number of cases was increasing "but a quickened public conscience has made cases of more news value."

Oleo May Become Another Victim Of Senate Log Jam

By GEORGE RONALD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 17 (CP)—Oleomargarine may become another victim of the Senate Legislative log-jam.

Backers of the butter substitute doubt there will be time this year for consideration of their bill to repeal federal taxes on Oleo.

Also awaiting Senate action are a half-dozen major matters which may take up most of the remaining 10 weeks of the session. That could mean a repetition of oleo's fate last year, when a similar pre-adjournment pile up sidetracked the margarine bill. Pro butter forces, of course, are shedding no tears.

Newspapers are receiving a steady flow of advertisements and arguments in favor of the dairy cause. The same "public service" barrage is being carried on by radio. The margarine industry is reported to be planning a similar campaign of its own—just in case the Senate should get around to a vote on the repeal bill.

But in that event, Senate dairy leaders probably would resort to a filibuster. And, if they can't talk the margarine bill into the ground, the big stick of amendment still is available.

Senators Edwin Johnson (Dem. Colo.) and Alexander Wiley (Rep Wis.) have introduced amendments which, if adopted, would all but nullify the tax -repeal effort.

The margarine bill, however, way passed by the House of Representatives and has been okayed by the Senate Finance Committee. These are the taxes the measure would eliminate:

Colored Margarine—10 cents a pound, plus a $480-a-year levy on wholesalers and $48 on retailers.

Uncolored margarine — one-quarter cent a pound, plus a $200-a-year tax on wholesalers and $6 on retailers.

Both types —$600 a year on manufacturers.

Royals Give Montreal First Memorial Cup After Longest Hockey Season on Record

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 17 — (CP) — They may not go down in the record books as the best junior team in history, but Montreal Royals, newly - crowned Memorial Cup champions, can lay claim to having won the hardest - fought final series.

It took Royals eight games to dispose of Brandon Wheat Kings Western champions, in the longest series in Memorial Cup history and send the cup east of Ontario for the first time.

Another record was set in that May 16 is the latest date to which a junior final has extended. The thermometer registered between 70 and 80 degrees through the drawn - out affair, which was played between the Winnipeg and Brandon rinks.

In gaining Montreal's first Dominion junior title in 32 years, Royals had to come from behind Monday night before downing Wheat Kings 6-4 in the eighth and final contest. The teams had split even with three victories apiece and one game tied in the originally - scheduled best-of-seven final, necessitating an 8th game.

Royals took the opening game 3-2, but Wheat Kings returned the score in the second contest. The third game went to a 5-5 overtime. Montreal then won the next two 1-0 and 7-4, but Brandon captured the fifth and seventh games 2-1 and 5-1.

Scored Four in Row

In the eighth game Monday night, the Royals, working in front of the steady goaltending of Bobby Hiesn, built up a 2-1 first - period lead, but were behind 3-2 at the end of the second period. After giving away another goal near the start of the third session, the speedy Easterners came back with four straight counters.

Playing his best game of the series, Bert Hirschfield, flashy winger, topped the Montreal scorers with three goals and one assist. His linemate and team captain, Bob Frampton, was right behind with two markers and one assist. Gordie Knutson bagged the other goal and assisted once.

Brandon's three goals were split evenly among Joe Crozier, Bob Chrystal, Jack McKenzie and Reggie Abbott.

After Brandon had taken a 4-2 lead at 2:30 in the third period, Royals' cause was helped by two successive penalties to Wheat King defenceman Bill Allison. Taking advantage of the extra man, the fast - breaking Easterners scored two goals to even the count.

Broke their Spirit

Loss of their lead seemed to break Brandon's spirit, and they were no match for Montreal from there on in, getting caught on breakaways for Royals' winning and final goals.

Frampton's second goal was the winning counter and came at 11:13 of the third period, when he outraced the Brandon players, caught Goalie Montreal tender, Jerry to the Wheat King goal, where he outgussed Ray Frederick. Brandon netminder. Hirschfeld's third goal and the clincher came about two minutes later and it was only a matter of time until Wheat Kings were counted out.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

As pictured here, the left hand should point to the left, or possibly two below the top of the handle. It is important to notice that the club is gripped in the fingers and not in the palm of the hand. Control lies in the finger grip. Not in the palm grip. The reason for what seems to be a rule not to be the peculiar grip used on a golf club is that the ball at which you're going to swing is resting on the ground. And you could hold a golf club in a palm grip — which is a baseball grip, because of that fundamental difference between golf and baseball. Now notice that the left forefinger is extended a bit down the shaft. The reason for this is that it provides club control and leverage at impact because the heel of the left hand on the shaft and the forefinger of the right hand on the shaft put while opposite to the club, as you'll see if you try it. The heel of the left hand, by lowering the club handle opposite to the force applied by the looped forefinger of the right hand, provides the golf club with the whiplacker effect.—(Copyright 1949, John F. Dille Co.)

Lou Boudreau Still Thinks His Team Will Repeat

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 17 — (AP) — Lou Boudreau, shortstop-manager of the world champion Cleveland Indians, is more than a little perturbed about his team but he thinks they'll repeat.

"Once the warm weather sets in, we'll be okay," Boudreau said Monday night before an exhibition game with Pittsburgh. Trying to shake off a hitting slump he started his regular lineup and the Indians eked out a 4-3 victory.

Sunday Chicago White Sox shut out the Indians twice. Frank Lane general manager of the Chicago nine, Monday sent Comiskey Park's home plate to the Indians' front office — saying he wanted President Bill Veeck to see what it looked like.

Boudreau smiled — a little weakly — when told of the gag but he declared:

"We're not hitting, but we will."

Boudreau picked up a newspaper, studied the American League standings and said:

"Look, the Red Sox were seven or eight games out a few days ago. Now, they're only five games back of the Yanks. We've played fewer games than the rest and the weather has hampered us. Most of the teams have played 25 games or more and we've only played 20. Once the warm weather sets in we'll be okay."

It's going to be a little closer race this year, he thinks. The Yanks are a lot tougher than some people think.

In addition to his team's poor hitting, Boudreau has had plenty of trouble with an ailing mound staff which was expected to be tops in the league. But here, too, Boudreau thinks warm weather will help his pitchers.

The Indians now are in 6th place, 3½ games back of the Yanks.

U.S. Owners Taking Crack At Famous Prize

London, May 17 (AP)—United States owners intend to make the biggest raid since the war on the world's most famous turf prize, the English Derby.

Seven Derby-bound colts are entered in the 170th renewal of the historic three-year-old classic on June 4 at picturesque Epsom Downs.

The odds likely will be withdrawn when the last half of the $450 entry fee is due May 26. But enough should have their fare paid to exceed the previous postwar record of two American runners last season—Citation, Turquino and the Senator II, both of which finished out of the money.

Another invader, an 18-1 chance in recent London betting, is Brown Rover. He was bred at the Belair, Md., farm of William Woodward, chairman of the Woodward Trust, City.

The colt proved his stamina by winning over the derby distance of 1½ miles early in May. He has trained alongside another illustrious Woodward colt, the four-year-old Black Tarquin.

Another Woodward nominee, Lone Eagle, may not go to the post. He was active in the betting market for a week after winning a 1¼-mile tune-up race. But he blotted his record by running second in a 1½-mile classic trial stakes.

If one of the Americans can nab the rich stakes, it will be the first time since Herman B. Duryea did it with Durbar II in 1914. Durbar was a French-bred.

Only one American-bred and owned colt has landed the prize. That was Iroquois in 1831, carrying the silks of Pierre Lorillard.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There's going to be plenty doin' at the Fair Grounds here come Saturday afternoon when the lid will be officially pried off the Belleville and District Baseball League. Chief actors in the first baseball drama of the season will be the 1949 editions of the Northern Electric and Trenton RCAF Flyers squads. And there will be plenty of pre-game dideos to help usher in the season.

The opening ceremonies will begin at 2 o'clock sharp and will feature the fine music of the Collegiate Band all dolled up in their brand new uniforms presented a few months ago by the Kinsmen Club. The young musicians will precede the Belleville and District baseball executive staff and should make an attractive picture.

There will be a parade and present will be Mayor D. L. Storey and officials of the City Council. Representing the Northern Electric Company will be Messrs Brewer Hunt and J. G. Little and it is quite likely that high ranking RCAF people will also be among those in attendance.

A program has been prepared and the ceremonies will be specially aired over a public address system installed for the purpose.

Baseballically speaking the Northern Electric squad looms up as a strong contender this year. They will carry the intermediate banner of the city in the league and also in the Ontario Baseball Association playdowns, so we are informed. Frank Cowan and Ken Ellis will handle the mound duties while Bert "Cuffer" Noakes will again do the coaching chore.

Left over from last year's squad and forming the nucleus of the 1949 edition are such veterans as Noakes, Ken Barrett, Jack "Chuck" Chuckerbutty" Barriere, Bob Benson, Jim Rutherford, and Bill Cane. Bolstering the squad behind the plate will be Jack Sutcliffe and Jack Elliott of last year's Kenner Cup team. Sutcliffe is a brother of James. Taking care of the flinging team behind the receivers will be Bill Bunton, Dick Fitzpatrick, Noakes and Chuck Barriage.

Peter Jones, sturdy young first baseman with last year's Kiwanis Juniors, will hold down the job at the initial sack. Jackie Wardhaugh will cavort around the hot corner while "Red" Cousins and Jackie Barriere will alternate the duties at second base. "Huck" Reeves will do the shortstopping.

In the outer gardens, Donovan, formerly of the Juniors, Don Barrett, Cane, Rutherford, Jones and Barriere will patrol the Fairs centre field stuff. Efforts are being made to obtain Keith MacDonald, Prince Edward County flinger, for relief but all this depends on whether baseball authorities bet all this depends on whether baseball authorities bet all this depends on whether baseball authorities will grant him a release. It is doubtful that they will. The club will carry eighteen players. It is likely that another will be added to the list to get the opening day mound assignment, although nothing definite has been released as yet by Manager Grandahm.

The Trenton Flyers, by the same token will not be any weak sisters of the diamond. Although we have nothing concise on the lineup, we are told by an authentic source that Trenton will be stronger than that of last year. Some of the veterans are still playing, but the team has been strengthened by a lot of new and efficient diamond performers.

SOCCER GETS UNDER WAY

Through the efforts of Mayor Storey and Ex-Mayor Bellins, the parks commission has granted use of the Fair Grounds to the Bay of Quinte Association Football League for a soccer pitch. All home games of the two Belleville entries, Belleville United and Northern Electric will be played there. Belleville United and the Northern ladies have been plitting Speedy St. Louis and the Northern ladies have been plitting the field to shape. Cement goal holes have been made for the goal posts. The posts will be removed after every game, leaving the big field fully clear of any obstructions. The schedule was published yesterday.

All soccer referees are reminded of a special meeting to be held at the YMCA in Belleville tonight at 8.00. This meeting has been called at the request of Lawrence Wood, Leo Dicky so that preparation might be made for the forthcoming season.

BCI CROSS COUNTRY

The Belleville Collegiate Institute harriers race gets under way on the school campus tomorrow (Wed.) afternoon starting at 4.30, a warm time of the afternoon so that the starting field should leap away on the milled and cross country field again. The school's cross country five-mile jaunt with the student's gym. Those who finishes at the head of the pack will be awarded and the winner will receive the Ken Colling Trophy at the school's next commencement.

A real battle of giants will take place in the Memorial Arena on Friday night, according to an announcement by Manager Walt Grew. Wladyslaw "Tren" Talon has been signed to meet Jimmy Hall, the Cork Giant, in the main bout. That means that something over six hundred pounds of human power will be unleashed when these two six feet-eighters rumble into the Arena ring.

Hi Lee earned the ire of the fans here last week when he forced the well-liked Pat Flanagan to submit by use of a murderous leg-hold. The referee-promoter Flanagan and Dan O'Connor and also gathered in a lusty amount of boos for his unorthodox activities. In matching the two huge matmen Walter Grew put them in the ring as any number of fans who asked him to promote a test between the two. When you get a six-hundred pounds like the two hundred and forty pound Ozark Giant bumping head-on into the Pole That Walks Like a Man something is bound to give way.

If the ring holds up it is a cast-iron cinch that either the bread-basket-like Pat or the rib-busting Talon will blow his top and that could mean a disastrous night for one of them.

Art Brady, clever youngster from Colorado who created a favorable impression here a couple of months ago will meet Dangerous O'Connor in the semi-final while Frank Valois "bad man" from Montreal who ruffled Pat Flanagan's thinning locks and his dignity a short time ago will clash with Frank Stack, who is a favorite with fans hereabouts.

Halifax, May 17 (CP)— Sammy Keller of Toronto, portly manager of middleweight boxer Pete Zaduk, figures he has licked the cut jinx—bugbear of all fighters.

Sammy dropped in for a chat with Alex (Halifax Chronicle-Herald) Nickerson after Canadian middleweight champion George Ross successfully defended his title against Pete here. He told Nick he didn't "believe it possible to send a fighter into the ring with four fresh stitches on a cut—and have him finish without them breaking open."

But that's what happened to the Guelph boxer who stayed 12 rounds with the champ. He opened a three-week-old cut while training at the navy gym only a few days before the big bout. A couple of navy doctors put four silk stitches in the cut, then put a "mattress" over it.

Nick continued Sammy's story: "Then I had a brainwave. I remembered that earlier in the week I had been talking with Dr. S. H. Keshen, the Halifax Athletic Commission physician. He mentioned a drug—sounded like trombone to me—but warned me that only an experienced man could handle it. Seems it could be shot into the cut with a spray gun."

Sammy explained that the dope "is something like the stuff you put on your face when your razor nicks you. Only it has to be very powerful, because most cuts especially over and under the eyes —are at least ½ half inch long."

The navy doctors said if Zaduk's cut split during the fight nothing could stop the bleeding, the cut was so deep, Sammy told Nick.

But the doctors "agreed to fix up a solution for me, and to administer it we had a former boxer, a navy man, who was a first aid expert.

"...I'm sold on the stuff. All I need now is a course in how to use it."

Alan McFater Wins Decision Over Lacelle

Toronto, May 17 — (CP) — Alan McFater, tough little Toronto lightweight, hammered out a five round decision Monday night over Ottawa's Ronnie Lacelle in the main event of an amateur boxing show at Maple Leaf Gardens.

It was McFater's third win over the scrappy Lacelle, who represented Canada at last year's Olympic Games.

McFater forced the fight from the second round when a burning left hook sent Lacelle to the canvas. Although the Ottawa boy fought back gamely, McFater repeatedly battled him up on the ropes and stung him with short rights and lefts in the in-fighting.

In a 165-pound bout Bob Hesson of Stratford, won a five - round decision over Al Hogan, Toronto and in a 126-pound bout Tommy Bragan of Toronto outpointed Gordon McIntyre of Stratford in five rounds.

Sports Diary

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The financial and other details of Sudbury Wolves' 65-game tour of Europe over a three-month period will be given at the Ontario Hockey Association annual meeting in New York June 2-4, it was said by supplied by Bunny Ahearne of London, the able Irishman who, as C.A.H.A. overseas representative, planned the jaunt.

Bunny has been directing traffic of Canadian clubs in Europe for years—at a profit. He has a flourishing travel agency, hooked up with practically every European National Hockey League operator could do.

You must get up a day early to keep pace with this trigger-tempered 46-year-old Irishman.

Bunny, Secretary of the British Ice Hockey Association and General Secretary of the In-ternational Ice Hockey Federation, got into plenty of trouble—and he loves it. He's been called a "racketeer," a "dictator" and a "sharp operator" but he takes it all in his stride.

He doesn't try to screen the fact he gets a commission when teams are on the move under his direction. His salary as B. I. H. A. Secretary is around $4,000 a year and Bunny, who likes to live high, needs something to supplement this.

Handled Olympic team

Bunny is "Mr. Hockey" in Europe. He couldn't stickhandle his way around an eight-year-old on the ice but his verbal poke-checks at the conference table against hard-headed hockey-wise men give him all-star rating.

The extra-curricular activities of other hockey officials around the world probably would make interesting reading—if people were allowed in on them. But Bunny makes no bones about his travel-agency connection — he says it's his living and blandly asks those who criticize him if "where's anything wrong about wanting to make a decent living."

He has lots of friends on this side of the Atlantic and among the stauncher are the B.C.A.A.U. Olympic team. Bunny handled their exhibition games across Europe in 1948 and they all felt they got a "good deal" out of it.

18,000 SWEEPS TICKETS SEIZED

London, May 17 (CP)— Police seized 18,000 Irish Sweepstakes tickets ready for mailing to Canada, it was disclosed yesterday.

The disclosure came in court when Joseph Lynn, 37 was fined £35 ($140). Prosecutor C. W. Simpson said Lynn was a "fortunate as "a veritable post office for forwarding Irish Hospital Sweepstakes tickets."

The tickets were on the Derby to be run at Epsom Downs une 4.

Junior Goalie Joins St. Mikes For Next Season

(By The Canadian Press)

Lorne Howes, 17-year-old netminder who starred for Porcupine Combines during the all-Ontario junior hockey final against Barrie, will play for St. Michael's College in the Junior O.H.A. next season, it was announced Monday night at Toronto.

Sought by several junior A and senior clubs —including Barrie—Howes is reported to have also turned down an offer of $150 a week from a Western Canada senior team. He has already enrolled at the college here.

Rev. T. Flanagan, athletic director at the college, said he did not approach Howes to play for the college. He said that, when St. Michael's played a post-season exhibition tour in Northern Ontario Howes' father asked if Lorne might be admitted to the college in order to be assured of "good discipline, good teaching and good coaching."

W. C. (Billy) Foulds, chairman of the Canadian Rugby Union's rules committee, said Monday at Toronto it is a "open question" whether football's forward pass rule will be liberalized before next season by lifting of the requirement that a forward must cross the line of scrimmage.

The rules Committee's annual meeting here Saturday decided to refer the proposal to a sub-committee for consideration. Foulds disagreed with the version of one delegate attending the closed meeting, who reported most committeemen favored the amendment and it was merely a matter of how to fit it into the rule book.

Davis Cup tennis teams of Czechoslovakia and Hungary Monday moved into the quarter-finals of the European zone eliminations, leaving only one bracket unfilled. Chile and Egypt are still scrapping for the two-cupied round of eight spot, with Chile leading 2-1 on the strength of a straight set doubles victory Monday. The favored Czechs Monday at London eliminated Great Britain by adding a doubles triumph to the two singles victories procured Sunday. The Czech doubles teams of Jaroslav Drobny and Vladimir Cernik merely toyed with Britain's Tony Mottram and Geoffrey Paish, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

At Toronto the Ontario Municipal board Monday reserved judgment on an appeal against the city's 1949 assessment of $1,587,633 for Woodbine Park land and racing buildings on the grounds it was served three weeks late. The previous assessment of $577,808 had stood from 1932 until last fall.

At Chicago, Brooklyn Dodgers Monday announced that Gerome Podbielan, rookie right handed pitcher, has been optioned to Montreal Royals of the International League. Podbielan, who came up to the parent club in the National League this year from the Royals, was knocked out of the box in his first start.

New York Giants, slicing their roster as they start on their first western trip, Monday optioned infielder Jack Lohrke and pitcher Andy Tomasic to Jersey City of the International League. Both are subject to 24 hour recall.

The champion Boston Braves, deadlocked in first place with New York Atlanta, continued for their first long western swing Monday without Earl Torgeson, their bespectacled first base star. It is likely that Torgey will be forced to sit out the remainder of the National League season. He suffered a shoulder separation in a game here Saturday night.

The world lightweight championship fight between title holder Ike Williams and Enrique Bolanos has been postponed indefinitely because of Williams' shoulder injury, Clayton Frye, chief inspector for the California State Athletic Commission, said Monday at Los Angeles. The fight was scheduled for May 26. He described the ailment as bursitis of the right shoulder joint.

At Pittsburgh, outfielder Allie Clark drove in all of Cleveland Indans' runs Monday as the world champions edged Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 in an exhibition game witnessed by 33,038 fans. The Clevelands outfielder drove in a 2-run triple in the second, came through with a fifth-inning homer with none aboard and then batted the winning run home with a single in the seventh.

Toronto Leafs Beaten in Eleventh By Jersey Giants

(By The Associated Press)

Wesley Westrum, hard-hitting catcher for the Jersey City Giants, is using his big bat to pave the way back to the big leagues.

Westrum, who showed somewhat of a flop with the parent New York Giants last year following a big buildup, has been the leading light in Jersey's climb to the top of the International League pennant race.

The 26-year-old received walloped a grand-slam homer Monday night to lead the Giants to a 7-6 victory over Toronto. The triumph enabled the Jersey City to retain their grip on first place. They now lead Rochester Red Wings by a full game, with Toronto and Montreal in third place, a game-and-a-half behind.

The grand-slammer was Westrum's second in two days and his third of the year. It also was his ninth home run of the campaign.

The Giants won in the 11th when Monte Irvin's fourth hit of the night drove in Rudy Rufer with the ice-breaking run.

Ed Sanicki banged a pair of homers for the losers, his 11th of the season coming in the last half of the ninth to force the game into overtime.

A ninth-inning three-run blow by pinch hitter Kermit Wahl drove in the tying and winning runs as Montreal defeated Syracuse Chiefs 7-6. Trailing 5-1, the Chiefs had shelled Frank Lagi from the mound with a five-run rally in the top of the ninth to take a temporary 6-5 lead.

The victory moved the Royals into third place, 12 per centage points over the Maple Leafs.

Club Undecided What to do With Dimaggio

New York, May 17 — (AP) — The major league ball clubs are rushing to get their rosters down to the 25-man limit by Thursday, but the big question is: What's to be done with Joe DiMaggio?

The New York Yankees' batting outfielder, out of uniform since the season's start, still is on the sidelines with an ailing heel. The New York club, meanwhile, must lop off four surplus players.

Will DiMaggio be placed on the voluntary retired list for 60 days or will he be retained in the active ranks, probably for pinch-hitting duty until he can get full speed?

The answer to this puzzler, general manager George Weiss says, will depend on a new x-ray examination of Joe's celebrated heel tomorrow.

Today we Live in a Greater Canada

They Drained a Lake to give Canada a Great New Industry
IT HAPPENED in Ontario's Rainy River District. Steep Rock Lake — fifteen miles long and ranging in depth from 40 to 265 feet — was emptied by batteries of giant pumps. Finlayson Lake was lowered by draining it from the bottom. The colour of the Seine River was completely changed. And one of the richest bodies of iron ore on the continent was uncovered.
Providing millions of tons of ore a year — with enough uncovered for years to come — Steep Rock's development has been spectacular, but it is only ONE of many examples of Canada's tremendous modern advance.
Today we truly live in a Greater Canada — one with productive capacity vastly increased and diversified, offering to young Canadians greater opportunities than ever before in every field of endeavour.

The iron and steel manufacturing industry presents another spectacular example of development: productive capacity and number of employees have been doubled since before the war, striking indication of Canada's new position as one of the world's great industrial nations.
SO MANY OPPORTUNITIES
"Australia and the International Nickel Co. are only two of the many companies that are reporting to Canada today its success in seeking out interesting opportunities in search of many different kinds of activity" — says Mr. Lazar Burcsas, manager of Mr. Butcher, Ont.
Mr. Butcher — member of Canada's 1936 Olympic basketball team — after returning from college in the U.S. and being manager of a paint factory, started his own business. Today Butcher Enterprises, Ltd., has developed many examples of this type of enterprise. Their unique and speedy service in the stripping of paint from automobiles, and the manufacturing of products for shipping, are but two instances of the Windsor firm's enterprise. The modernization of entertainment areas with great success.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 17 (AP) — From "Forever Amber" to a female Dillinger. That's where three years in Hollywood have taken a little Irish girl named Peggy Cummins.

It was three years ago that I first met Peggy when she was to play Kathleen Winsor's free-loving heroine. Petite and plyrish, she was fresh from Britain and we pondered on what the future would bring her.

I saw her again this week while she was making "Gun Crazy." I doubt if she could ever have foreseen herself playing a murdering gun-moll.

No Years

I asked Peggy if she ever sheds a tear over losing the amber role.

"Not so much anymore," she said. "But it's not too easy to forget. Especially when people say, 'Peggy Cummins—oh, yes, aren't you the girl who was supposed to play Amber? What happened?'"

Peggy's view on that is philosophical: "I guess if you aren't right for a role, that's all there is to it."

In 1946, she arrived here a wide-eyed lass of 21 and projected almost instantly into Amber. After a few weeks of filming, the picture was halted.

The studio indicated that Peggy was not suited for the part. But some insiders pinned her portrayal and said the stoppage was due to poor writing and direction.

Big Loss

Anyway, the Cummins footage was scrapped at a loss estimated at $700,000. The unhappy film resumed with Darnell as star.

She then was starred with Ronald Coleman in "The Late George Apley." It wasn't a box-office hit. Nor was "Moss Rose," with Peggy the unique casting of Vic Mature as a British nobleman.

And, considering how "Forever Amber" turned out, maybe it's just as well she didn't get the job.

SCIENCE EDITOR DROWNED

Horse Sense Bridge

The tall end is the best place to see the devastating result of a squeeze. It shows you what happens to a player who is trying to protect two or more suits.

In the earlier stages of play, a number of tricks are taken. These reduce the number of cards in each hand. To squeeze a hand you must find it with no surplus cards.

When a player has no surplus cards, suppose he is protecting two suits. On the next trick he must play a card. The card he then plays must unguard one of the suits he is protecting.

	NORTH
	♠ None ♥ 10 4 ♦ 7 ♣ None
WEST		EAST
♠ None ♥ Q 7 ♦ None ♣ 7		♠ Q ♥ K 8 6 ♦ None ♣ None
	SOUTH
	♠ None ♥ K 5 ♦ None ♣ 10 3

South was declarer at a contract of seven no-trump. He and West had agreed that have taken the first nine tricks. What you see are the four cards remaining in each hand.

Notice that west is protecting hearts and clubs. His club jack is keeping south from making club ten. His three hearts are there to keep dummy from making the heart ten. Or so it seems.

Dummy is now in the lead and sends forth his final diamond. On this is stuffed a small club from the short ten. Or so it seems. Dummy is now in the lead and sends forth his final diamond. On this is stuffed a small club from the short ten. Or so it seems.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit this morning and pop was finishing his soft boil egg, saying, By gollies, my dear, this is absolutely the best egg I ever ate in my life.

Now William, how good can an egg get? ma said. After all, I spesn after all, a perfectly fresh egg from a well travl up hen can se so good and no better, she said, and pop said, That may be true for the common run of eggs, but the hen that laid this egg must of gone to finishing school. She turned out an exceptional job. She had more mind in each egg. I believe I'll have as this, I'll be convinced the same hen layed them both, he said.

And I'm convinced you'll complain bitterly of a heavy feeling if you re much as touch another egg, ma said. You know what I mean by you, she said, and pop said, Oh well, I guess I'll lite up a cigar and let it go at that.

Why is one thing, that would be worse than a 2nd egg, ma sid. Do you want to be dizzy all morning, smoking a cigar so early in the day? she said, and pop said, if I had more practice I'd stop getting dizzy. Winston Churchill likes up his first cigar even before he eats his breakfist, and that's over 70, and you know how much you admire him, pop said.

Winsten Churchill has an intirely different constitution, he be even more wonderful if he didn't smoke at all.

By gollies that's rite, he mite of been 100 by this time if he didn't smoke, pop said. Well, I'm a reasonable man, I'll only smoke the cigar half way down, he said, and ma said, Oh keep quiet and eat another egg and take a pintch of bicarbonate.

DREW SHARPENS ATTACKS ON FEDERAL GOVT.

Claims Budget Presented is Nothing but an Election Manifesto

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, May 17 (CP)—George Drew, national leader of the Progressive Conservative party, sharpened his attacks on the federal government yesterday and said that the budget presented by it for 1949-50 is nothing but an election manifesto.

Addressing a political rally in this city, represented in the last Commons by Liberals, Mr. Drew warned that a budget cannot become effective until it is passed by parliament. The 1949-50 budget was "deliberately" not passed by the government.

Mr. Drew speaks today in Truro, N. S., and Amherst, N. S., as he continues his east-coast-to-coast federal election campaign tour. Yesterday he spoke at Mahone Bay, Lunenburg, Chester and Bridgewater.

There was no reason, he said, why the budget should not have been passed by parliament before the election.

Now that a new government takes office after the June 27 election a new budget will have to be presented, he said. That budget when presented and passed would be the budget that would be effective for 1949-50.

Urged to Vote

At Mahone Bay, Chester and Lunenburg, Mr. Drew urged his listeners to get out on election day and vote according to their conscience. He reminded them that one of the freedoms in a democracy was the right to make a choice in an election according to one's own conscience.

At Bridgewater, where he made a major speech, he charged that the government has power to seize farm products and to nationalize the steel and lumber industries.

In acts passed by the government there was power to go on farms and take products on terms fixed by the government. There was power to take complete control of the steel and lumber industries.

The government had stated that the Foreign Exchange Control Act would be used to restrict trade. The government went ahead and used it to enforce the restrictions on trade with the United States.

He stated the government had refused on several occasions to give information to the people's representatives in parliament.

PRIME MINISTER ANSWERS CHARGES OF PC LEADER

Terms Drew "Self-Appointed Saviour of Confederation" in P.E.I. Address

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Charlottetown, May 17 (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent indicated Monday night his feeling that the June 27 election might pave the way for a financial agreement between the federal government and all the provinces. Ontario and Quebec are the only provinces which have not entered separate agreements on tax sources with Ottawa since collapse of the 1946 general conference.

"I believe," he said in his first public address in this cradle of Confederation, "that it won't be very long after June 27 when the people choose once and for all of this charge that the Liberal party is trying to destroy provincial rights and it may not be very long before we are able to reach tax agreements with all 10 provinces.

His main theme was an answer to an address here last week by George Drew, national leader of the Progressive Conservative party who accused the Liberal government of centralizing power at Ottawa and proclaimed a "fight to keep Confederation."

Mr. St. Laurent said: "I should be very much surprised if many people in the Maritimes were much impressed by this self-appointed effort to save confederation."

The government had tried to turn back as much to the possible those provincial tax fields it had taken over by necessity in the war. He suggested that since all but two provinces had entered fiscal agreements, it might be the other two and not Ottawa which did not want agreements.

Conservative leaders had been saying that those agreements were destroying provincial autonomy. But the premiers of the three Maritime provinces had all testified that they now were able to provide services for their voters which otherwise have been denied them.

Those agreements allowed the signatory provinces to share in the revenue from tax sources that tapped businesses in the central provinces. The central regions benefitted from doing business all over the country. It was not right that only those provinces which contain head offices should tap such sources.

C.C.F. NATIONAL PARTY LEADER OPENS CAMPAIGN

Accuses Govt. of Dodging Responsibility With Respect to Marketing

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Summerside, P.E.I. May 17 —(CP)— The big campaign guns of the C.C.F. party rolled into action Monday night as national party leader M.J. Coldwell opened a cross-Canada tour in Prince Edward Island with a volley of political fire at the agricultural policies of both the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

Mr. Coldwell told a public meeting in this western P.E.I. centre that the C.C.F. alone has shown itself to be in favor of the measures farmers want.

He accused the Liberal government of dodging its responsibilities to failing to bring in uniform marketing legislation by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

The C.C.F. would remove speculation in sale of coarse grains and enable farmers to market them through the Dominion Wheat Board.

The C.C.F. at the last session of parliament had asked for this change in an amendment to the Wheat Board act but Liberals and Progressive Conservatives had both voted against the C.C. F. despite the fact that farmers had asked for the change.

Mr. Coldwell moved into New Brunswick today to deliver an address at Moncton.

The C.C.F. leader mentioned the Asbestos workers' strike in Quebec and described aid given the men and their families by the Roman Catholic Church as a "great humanitarian gesture."

Criticizing speculation on western grain, Mr. Coldwell said Mr. Drew, the Progressive Conservative leader, had gone on record as saying his party would not only leave feed grains out of the speculative market but would add wheat.

He declared that every C.C.F. member elected to parliament will be committed to support the national marketing legislation proposed by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

Liberals had ignored the wishes of the Federation and had passed a bill investing its Federal powers with the provincial governments.

The result was that Canada now had 10 marketing acts, with each province seeking to organize inter-provincial and export trade.

71 Persons Left Homeless By Forest Fires

Winnipeg, May 17 (CP)—Charred tree stumps and blackened shells which once had been homes dot hundreds of thousands of acres of the northern prairie provinces today as forest fires continued their crackling advance.

Blazing yesterday in Alberta and Northern Saskatchewan aided thousands of firefighters somewhat in their struggle to stem advance of the flames, and Manitoba lodged few complaints today.

There are no official estimates yet as to extent of damage caused by the fires, described by forestry officials as the worst in many years. But observers said the damage easily will reach into millions of dollars, estimated in terms of the years it will take to substitute for present fire-scarred timber stands.

For 71 persons in Northern Alberta's Assiniboa district the forest fires have taken on a more personal aspect. They were left homeless when flames swept through their dwellings. Blazing along a front 40 miles long in Lesser Slave Lake area about 120 miles northwest of Edmonton, the fire has kept volunteer and professional firefighters busy since last week.

Another Alberta fire, in the Chip Lake area about 90 miles west of Edmonton, also is reported serious. But other blazes scattered across northern sections of the province are said to be under control.

In Northern Saskatchewan, forest fires are said to be at their worst along a heavily-treed area extending south from Prince Albert to the Carrot River Valley near the Manitoba border.

In Manitoba, the Interlake region between Lakes Winnipeg, Winnipegosis and Manitoba is described as the most seriously threatened. Most of the conflagrations are believed under control, however, after having swept a logging camp and five homes.

Dutch Housewife May End Career On Cinder Paths

New York May 17 (AP)— The 31-year-old Dutch housewife who reputedly can outrun any female who ever laced on a pair of track shoes— Mrs. Fanny Blankers-Koen —may retire next year.

"I think I'll quit after the European championships next year," she said today before leaving for Los Angeles where she will run in the West Coast relays Friday and for the Modesto relays Saturday.

"There is no particular reason for this year's relays to get to quit," the mother of two youngsters with ten three Individual titles and helped The Netherlands to one team championship at the Olympics last summer, said. "I have to quit sometime. But it is not so easy to stop."

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Jean wrote that it was all a mistake and how lucky they were to have found it out before it was too late. Theirs was a boy-and-girl affair—puppy love, she called it. She'd met the most wonderful man, a colonel in the Marines, and it was a case of love at first sight. This was a mature passion (the colonel's fine Italian hand—he was 42—showed clearly all the way through the letter).

"Now do be a good boy, dear," she wrote, "and forgive me. It's going to seem awfully strange keeping house with another man and using all of the things we collected for our home, but I know you'd want me to be sensible and not throw them away just because of a little change in plans. I'll always love you, dear," she wrote. "It isn't that I love Herbert more." She added with: "How fortunate we are to have found out before it was too late."

Rollo read the letter three times before he crushed it in his trembling hands. He walked back and forth across the kitchen floor a few times. Then he dropped limply onto a chair. "I think it wouldn't hurt so much," he said rubbing his throat, "if I could cry."

Roger stuck his head in the door to ask if he could—no, to tell me he would—stay home for dinner. Since he had been commissioned, he ate a good many meals at the Officers' Club.

"Not tonight, Roger," I said. "Rollo's in trouble. I want him to stay."

"What's up?"

"His girl is marrying someone else."

"She loves me," Rollo said, hanging onto that comfort.

"Yeah, I know," Roger laughed. "She's a sister."

Rollo looked as though he'd had his face slapped. He bolted upstairs to his room and I ran after him. "Rollo! Rollo!" I called.

"Rollo, don't give up yet. Maybe she isn't married after all. Maybe her parents wouldn't let her. If Jean'll just wait a little while, she will see how foolish it is to give up a man she knows for one who has had only time to fascinate her. He's too old for her. Tell her. Call her long distance, now. Talk to her. Make her promise to wait a while. If she'll wait, you'll come home tonight."

Rollo put in his call, but it was Jean's mother who talked to him. Tearfully she told him that Jean had eloped the day before.

A few days later Ben Woodworth, a cattle buyer friend of ours, proposed we make up a party and go with him and his wife, Sandra, to Oswaldo, a wide spot in the road situated on the shoulder of the Rockies. He was due to oversee a large shipment of cattle.

I couldn't bear to leave Rollo home in his unhappy state of mind, and so I invited him that he invite him to go along. It wasn't difficult to sell the idea. We, Ben and Rollo and Sandra and me into the back seat of Ben's car—and Den—and Dot sat up front. Sandra and I did a lot of visiting together—we hadn't seen each other since the day before—and in our preoccupation with ourselves, we paid little heed to Rollo. He must have had a bottle in his pocket fitted with a straw, for by the time we reached Oswaldo, Rollo was listing.

Since it was still early in the afternoon, Ben suggested we by-pass the hotel and take a drive to-ward the Main Range in case Rollo time to sober up. Mr. Hinky who owned and operated the hotel was a valuable client, we dared not until dinnertime and still Rollo hadn't shown a glint of interest in the mountains we had to of-fer.

Back in Oswaldo, Ben said, "Food's what he needs."

We drove to a little cafe and the men, as inconspicuously as possible, propelled Rollo in and to an out-of-the-way booth.

Rollo sat blinking, each blink lowering his eyelids a shade more permanently. "Fresh air's what he needs," Ben said. "How about that, Rollo? Want to sit in the car?"

"That's a good idea," Rollo said. "You fellows don't need to help me. I'll make it okay."

* * *

We ate our dinner quickly, for by the time we finished a crowd had gathered on the sidewalk before the restaurant and we didn't want to hold up traffic.

In Oswaldo the curb is high, two good city blocks from the street, possibly to keep mud from sloshing onto the sidewalks. Rollo had got as far as the curb. There he had evidently sat down to take the air. And then lain back to rest. And fallen asleep.

A circle of mouth-open people were gathered around the peaceful young aviator, and some little children were amusing themselves by running the length of his recumbent form. The more venturesome began at the head and jumped from his knees to the street below; the less daring began at his knees and jumped off his head to the sidewalk close beneath.

"Here! What's the idea!" Ben demanded. "Can't you see this fellow's sick?" He shooed the children away like flies off a piece of pie.

"He's drunk, that's what he is," said Hinky, who had joined the crowd. His voice was brimming with outrage. "He can't stay in my hotel. I run a decent place."

"But he's a soldier," I said, sure as always that that made it all fierce.

"I don't care if he's an admiral," Hinky answered angrily. "He ain't agunta sleep in my hotel. If I let one drunk in, particularly a soldier I'd have a virtyl madhouse on my hands intitd of a decent, law-abiding hotel."

Even if Hinky relented, I wondered how, short of block and tackle on a fireman, they could hope to get Rollo up that ladder of a staircase.

"Let him sleep in your car," the obdurate Hinky suggested.

"He might open the door and wander out and get hurt," Sandra objected.

"Lock the doors, then," Hinky said, giving some measure of the size of the intellect we were dealing with.

Rob and Ben, reinforced by some stalwart country boys, managed to get Rollo onto the back seat of the car, no mean feat since it was a two - door sedan, and we all repaired to the telephone office to call the dude ranch.

But the place was closed for the season. We must have looked desperate, for the operator took her headphone off and said she couldn't help overhearing the conversation and knew a hospital camp on the outskirts of town that might still have a vacancy. She'd sorecty finished telling us this when there was a call on the switchboard. It was a woman to say she couldn't help overhearing the conversation and she was calling right back to tell us her husband had a place for the soldier and if we'd just wait, he'd meet us at the telephone office.

Mr. Harris appeared within a matter of minutes. He had a little place over yonder in a horse lot where he could put up a man occasionally when he was in a pinch.

The men bedded Rollo down in the little shack.

"He'll be in fine shape tomorrow," Mr. Harris assured us. "Won't know where he is. Can't get a drop to drink."

When we called for Rollo next morning, he had just slept it off. Mr. Harris spied the bottle. "Evening Jehoshaphat!" he exclaimed. "He's went and drunk up Old Everlasting." He picked it up, empty bottle lying on the floor beside Rollo's bed. "Yes, sir, went and done it!" He looked at us in bewilderment and surprise. "Why, I never did that stuff in over a year ago. Brought it home as a present for the boys. Why, I ain't found a cow poke yit could git a swaller down." He looked at Rollo with awe. "Yes, sir," he repeated, admiration tingling his voice, "he's went and done it."

Montana has two seasons: winter and July. Unless there is rain some part of 20 of the 30 days of June, there is no crop; and in August, though the days are sunny and warm, the nights are chilly. But July is usually hot. The sun rose hot and set hot and stored up enough heat on earth during the 15 or so hours it shone to keep us nicely warm all night. On the morning after a particularly mellow night, a harried young girl rang our door bell. She understood that our basement was empty — Pat had left the day before — and she wanted to rent it. "There are three of us," she said, indicating a parked car from which peered the anxious face of a young officer who was holding a tiny baby in his arms.

"You have a baby!" I exclaimed. "That settles it. You couldn't possibly live in our basement." I was talking fast, always hopeful of scaring if I could hold the other side from making a point. "It's too dark in summer. The leaves on the trees and bushes shade the windows. It would be a dreary place for you to spend the day."

TWO WAR ACES KILLED IN CRASH NEAR TRENTON

Two British M.P.'s Are Expelled By Labor Party

Stern Purge Hits Five Others As Parliamentary Secretaries

E. GERMAN VOTE MAY PUT GRAVEL IN RUSS STRATEGY

Reds May Revise Plan Of Action at Paris Meet

By WES GALLAGHER

Berlin, May 18 (AP)—Eastern Germany's 4,000,000 votes against Communism may have thrown gravel into the gears of Russian strategy at the four power talks in Paris opening Monday.

The fact that one-third of the voters went against them clearly was a staggering blow to the Communists as it was a surprise to everybody else.

As a result the Soviet Union may pause, stop, and reappraise its plans of action in the Paris conference.

In the voting Sunday and Monday in the Russian zone, 66 2/3 per cent cast valid ballots, according to the chief of voting officials. Added to that 33 per cent who voted against the single list of candidates for election to a "People's Congress" (Soviet-style parliament) of the eastern German zone, or voting against the ticket. Yet only 2% per cent "no" votes is evidence that they didn't want Communist rule.

The one-third "no" vote strengthens the hands of British, French and American delegates at the Paris meetings.

Walter Ulbricht, a top eastern German Communist leader, clearly stung by the voting result, told Socialist Unity (Communist) party officials and told them: "we must make every effort now to win a majority of the 'no' voters for German unity."

A majority of the people of all Germany, he claimed, oppose the occupation statute and want an early peace treaty.

He instructed the leaders to try to win over all Germans, "from worker to industrialist."

The Russian themselves had supplied a similar keynote yesterday through the Soviet army newspaper Tsegliche Rundschau.

London, May 18 (Reuters)—The Labor party today announced the expulsion of two members of parliament. Five other members of the House of Commons were relieved of their posts as parliamentary secretaries to various ministries.

The members expelled were Konni Zilliacus, member for Gateshead, and Leslie Solley, member for Thurock. Both are persistent and severe critics of the government's foreign policy.

The parliamentary secretaries disciplined were:

Fit.-Lt. Frank Beswick of the Air Ministry; William R. Blyton of Civil Aviation; Robert J. Mellish of the Admiralty; George H. Rogers of the Ministry of Supply; and Joseph P. W. Mallalieu of the Food Ministry.

In the sternest purge of its rebels, the government relieved the five parliamentary secretaries because they defied the strict order to vote with the government on the controversial Ireland bill.

The government's action came as a shock because parliamentary observers who had expected that a disciplinary talk to the "rebels" would be the only punishment meted out following the Ireland bill voting.

Aitken's Viewpoint

In the case of the parliamentary secretaries it is understood Prime Minister Attlee felt more severe punishment was needed. He wrote to the five individuals ordered by the secretaries saying he did not see how their misconduct could be squared against the government yet continue to hold their posts.

The decision to expel Solley and Zilliacus from the party was made today at a meeting of the national executive committee of the Labor party.

A consequence is that Zilliacus himself had just been nominated as the Labor candidate in the party's national executive.

It is possible he may be allowed to remain on the Labor party's annual conference in two weeks' time and appeal to the several thousand delegates present against the decision to expel him.

Foreign Secretary Bevin Removed

The five secretaries included Mr. Beswick, government spokesman on promising young men, all high on the promotion list.

Behind the start of the cold war between Russia and the western democracies, he has consistently urged friendship with the Soviet Union and has outspokenly criticized Foreign Secretary Bevin.

Last month he attended the Communist-sponsored "peace conference" in Paris.

The another United States State Department last month restued Zilliacus a visa to enter the United States.

Solley usually is classed as staunch physicist. He is a barrister and honorary secretary of the League for Democracy in Greece.

SENTENCED FOR MORAL OFFENCE

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—George Glazer, 24, of Toronto, Tuesday was sentenced to four years in penitentiary for what Judge Forsyth called "a heinous moral offence" against two sisters, aged 13 and 14. Glazer is the father of an 18-month-old child.

512 Candidates Nominated to Date Across Dominion

(By The Canadian Press)

A total of 512 candidates has been nominated to date across Canada for the federal general election Monday, June 27, it was shown today in an unofficial compilation by the Canadian Press.

It is expected that possibly as many as 1,000 candidates will be in the field when nominations are closed Monday, June 13—six weeks from now in the country's 25 constituencies.

Two of these constituencies — Halifax and Queens, Prince Edward Island — return two members each, bringing to 263 the total number of seats to be filled.

The federal election returned 245 members. The total has been increased by 18 to 263 — for the addition of 5 members for the new province of Newfoundland and 13 by the present-new ridings created in a redistribution of Commons seats enacted in 1947.

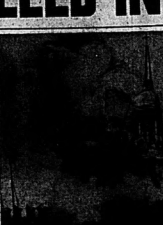
The Liberals lead the nominating race, with 174 candidates named so far. There are 148 Progressive Conservative standard-bearers, C. C. F., 38 Social Credit, 17 Labor-Progressive, six Independents, one Independent Liberal Credit and one Labor.

FORMER MATRON CITES REASONS FOR RESIGNATION

Inquiry Into Windsor Hospital Under Way

Windsor, May 18 (CP)—Mildred Mayhee, former superintendent of nurses at Metropolitan General Hospital, testified today before a Royal Commission conducting a probe into hospital administration that "certain implications" were the reasons for her resignation in February.

Probe into the affairs of the hospital resumed today before Judge Eric Cross, one-man Ontario Royal Commission. It was Miss Mayhee's resignation and subsequent rumors of lack of discipline which resulted in the inquiry.



Enumerating the reasons for Miss Mayhee's resignation, counsel for Commission Counsel George L. Mitchell of London, Ont., Miss Mayhee said there was dual control at the hospital and "one man knew the big boss."

Miss Mayhee said she did most of the hiring and firing but that there were implications that nurses would be dismissed over her head by Horace E. Aikin, business superintendent.

The former nursing superintendent said she recalled a case where she had suspended a nurse but that the nurse was not penalized or docked any income at all as was placed with Mr. Aikin.

She said that four nurses had visited her at a Detroit hotel, on the invitation of Mr. Aikin, and that they were all married men whom she considered "not proper company . . . because they had young girls."

Miss Mayhee said she had heard about girls going to parties before but when she spoke to Superintendent Aikin about it he discredited the stories, termed them rumors and said "I just laugh it off and pay no attention."

COMMIES DRIVE SPEARHEAD THRU TO WHANGPOO

Reds Almost at Back Door of Shanghai and in South Make Progress

Shanghai, May 18 (AP) —The Communist drive is spearhead through Shanghai's "back door" almost to the Whangpoo River today.

In south China the Reds ranged within 31 miles of the port of Foochow.

Reds encircling Shanghai from the southwest drove to Chwaho 12 miles east of the city, then struck back westward against Pootung. This guerilla-infested dock and warehouse area lapses across the river from Shanghai's famed Bund.

Central News said Nationalist reinforcements were rushed i the China sea coast east of Shanghai, and these troops were tryig to hit the attacking Reds from the rear.

Another Red force, the communique said, was moving toward Santiliang, about five miles from the big Lunghwa international airport, but also across the Whangpoo.

It is not easy to assay accurtely the situation around Shanghaibut no longe is there any question that the Reds are getting a ram for their money here.

(A Hong Kong dispatch tothe Christian Science Monitor aid Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek secretly is Shanghai, apparently commanding the Nationalist armies. It said Gen. Chen Chihli and Adm. Kwei Yung-Chia, commanders-in-chief of the ally fres and navy, are with Chiang.)

None of the dogged Nationalist resistance being shown around Shanghai was in evidence in South China.

The Central News Agency report that the Reds were only31 miles from Foochow even put the thrust closer than the Communist radio did Tuesday night. The fighting broadcast said the Reds had taken Nanping, 87 miles northwest of the Foochow port.

It was reported in Canton dispatches yesterday the Reds were only 225 miles from the provisional capital.

Goods Production In U.S. Takes Another Dive

Washington, May 18 — (AP) — Output of goods and services in the United States took its biggest postwar dive in the first quarter of 1949.

The output dropped $9 billion from the previous quarter's record high. It fell down to a $270,900,000,000-a-year level, the Commerce Department announced today.

One reason for this decrease in the dollar total was that prices were lower. But even so, consumers and the government bought less while retaining more in savings than they had been doing. There was been mild postwar declines before, from one quarter to another. But the biggest previous quarter-to-quarter decline of any kind was $5,000,000,000, and that came in the first three months of - 1946 when industry was converting machine was shifting from war to peacetime goals.

Among significant items in the opening quarter there were these changes:

Private domestic investment dropped $5,100,000,000 to an annual rate of $37,700,000,000. A slow-up in inventory accumulation by businessmen accounted for more than half of this drop.

Huge Figures of Forest Fire Losses Serve as Warning to Campers

Ottawa, May 18 (CP)—The Resources Department today warned campers, tourists, prospectors to be careful about forest-fire hazards, and backed up its plea with figures on fire damage to Canada's forests in 1948.

Fire-fighting costs last year amounting to more than $2,500,000, were blamed on record, the Department said. This figure, added to damage caused by forest fires, brought the total 1948 loss to the second highest point in history, the statement said.

The amount of merchantable timber on lands burned over in 1948 was equal to that used by all the pulp and paper mills in Canada for a 7 1-2-month period, based on the average mill consumption from 1937 to 1946," the statement said.

Actual figures for the rest of Canada showed that the total burned area was 8,240,000 acres about normal. However, the total area burned amounted to 18,115,000 acres, an increase of 70 per cent over the average for the last 10 years.

Exceptionally dry weather over wide areas in the Great Lakes region and in Central Canada during the early summer and autumn months contributed to the increased damage in 1948 the report said. And in several campers and smokers that serious moisture deficiencies are reported this year in many forested areas of the country.

FLOODS LEAVE SIX DEAD AND MANY HOMELESS

Thirteen Killed, Damage in Millions in Three Days of Flood Violence

Fort Worth, Tex., May 18 (AP) —Flood waters which swirled over great chunks of Fort Worth slowly receded today. They left six known dead, damage in the millions, and estimated 13,200 homeless.

Thirteen persons were killed and more than 100 injured in three days of turbulent weather that hit parts of west and north Texas and Oklahoma.

The count was the drowned and a dozen in hospital here; five dead and 83 injured from a tornado at Amarillo Sunday night; one dead and nine injured from twisters in Oklahoma, and one dead and 31 injured in west Texas tornadoes.

At Fort Worth struggled back to normal it faced this situation:

Areas west, north and east of the business district under water; all schools closed; snarled traffic, blocked highways, powerline breaks, a flooded water plant and a water supply that officials say will take three days to make normal.

Warned Not to Drink Water

Residents were warned not to drink water unless it had been boiled.

Cattle itself watched the biggest flood since 1908 swelling in its Trinity River lowlands. A crest of 46 feet is expected today, 20 feet above flood stage.

Fort Worth, with a population of more than 300,000, was one of the places hardest hit by the storms.

The homeless were quartered in schools, clubhouses, the city recreation building and the Carswell Air Force base gymnasium.

One woman was killed by the tornado which struck here and injured 10 homes were smashed by the twister, one of a series in the Texas panhandle.

Others hit Memphis, Southland, Rochester, Silverton, Dansberry and in Floyd County in the rich wheat and cotton belt of the south plains.

BRITISH-ITALIAN PLAN REJECTED BY UN ASSEMBLY

Pre-War Colonies Centre of Dispute

New York, May 18 (CP) — A British-Italian plan to split up Italy's pre-war colonies was rejected early today by an upset vote in the United Nations General Assembly.

Latin-American countries revolted at the last minute to bring thumping defeat to the measure which had been designed to Arab and Russian blocs as a "deal" to strengthen Anglo-American control over the Mediterranean.

Delegates gather again for what was expected to be a final meeting at 3 p.m. to arrange details for continuing study of Colonial problem at the next assembly session in September.

The Latin-American revolt came after the assembly overrode, 47 to 7, a key section of the proposal which would have placed Tripolitania under Italian trusteeship.

The vote on Tripolitania during the tense assembly meeting was 33-17 in favor one vote short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

After the crucial vote on Tripolitania, Argentina's Jose Arce shouted that a "spirit of evil" had broken loose, and that Argentina would vote against the entire proposal on getting problems right back where it was when the assembly opened debate May 2.

Other Latin-American delegates followed his lead.

Final vote on the British-Italian plan was 14 for, 10 against, 14 as the same proposal had been approved in committee 36 for and 18 against.

The defeated plan provided: Italy would receive all of Libya after 10 years under the U.N. trusteeship.

2. Italian administration of Italian Somaliland.

3. Eventual freedom of eastern Eritrea to Ethiopia.

Italian ambassador Alberto Tarchiani had pleaded Italy's case before the assembly committee meeting. "It is unfortunate that we must start again from the beginning to solve this problem."

Crippled Youth Makes Valiant Efforts at Rescue

Bodies of Squadron Leaders Soon Recovered From Plane

Trenton, May 18 (Staff)— The story of the heroic but futile attempt of a one-legged teen-aged youth to rescue two Royal Canadian Air Force officers trapped in their partly submerged plane, was unfolded here late Tuesday afternoon.

Kenneth Brooks, 17-year-old resident of 187 Marmora Street, was the eye-witness to an air crash that cost the lives of two officers in Muskrat Pond, a sluggish stream that borders the northern outskirts of this town.

The dead are Sqdn. Ldr. H. G. Kellor, staff officer at Central Air Command here, and Sqdn. Ldr. J. E. Mcdurg of the Central Flying School here.

Bodies Recovered

The bodies of the officers were later recovered from a semi-sunken plane by employees of the Central Bridge Company situated a short distance from the scene of the tragedy.

Kenneth Brooks, who lost a leg while playing twelve years ago, was fishing with two companions, Earl Way and Don Aldridge on the west bank of the pond, when the plane, flying low, made a steep dive flash over a wooded thicket on the east side of the water.

"It came out of the east," Brooks said, "and burned straight for the Central Bridge Company plant. It headed towards us and started to bank when directly over the water. Its undercarriage was down.

"As it reached a stiff turn, the motor suddenly stopped. The plane seemed to hang in the air for a moment, then it turned completely over and dropped like a stone into the water. The boys who were with me, immediately jumped into the boat and rowed out to the plane which was half-floating out of the water," Brooks said.

Says Brooks Dove in

But another of the teen-aged eye witnesses tells a different story. He stated that Brooks, who was sitting on the bank staring at the plane, dove into the water in the pond, did not hesitate. He threw aside his pole and plunged fully clothed into the water.

He swam to the plane and dived. He attempted to open the "window" but his strength was not sufficient. A few minutes later Brooks arrived but the combined efforts of the trio were not sufficient to extricate the two occupants of the plane.

Brooks immediately swam to shore and told his mates to rush for help.

In the meantime James "Scotty" Thompson, Marmora Street, Trenton, yard foreman of the Central Bridge Company, had seen the plane flash downward out of sight while he was working. With several of his fellow workmen, Thompson rushed to the scene of the crash.

With Wilfred Lemoine and Howard Tuckahoney, Thompson waded arm-pit deep in the water to the wreck. But the efforts of the three men failed to have any effect on the plane. They could not budge it. Minutes later Albert Blight, Clarence Whitney, Earl Armstrong and Roy Laurence, all Central Bridge employees arrived on the scene. The seven men finally succeeded in raising the plane and extricating the bodies from the wreckage. But all the implicated officers had suffered severe injuries including the head and face. There were no apparent marks on the other body, although it was believed internal injuries had been caused.

Engine Torn Loose

The plane flashed downward into the water from an altitude estimated at 300 feet, according to the youthful eye-witnesses. Engine is said to have been torn loose from the craft by the force of the crash.

Nearly twelve inches of mud at the bottom of the pond hampered the rescue crews, so according to Thompson.

The plane was an Auster aircraft in which the flyers were making a routine training flight.

Shortly after the bodies were extricated from the wreckage, military authorities and ambulances arrived on the scene and removed the bodies to the Trenton Air Force.

Dr. J. Russell Scott, Belleville, was called in, it was learned, but his services were not required shortly after 3.30 p.m.

Sqdn. Ldr. Kellor, who held the Distinguished Service Order and the Distinguished Flying Cross, served during the Second World war with the RCAF's 418 Squadron. He is survived by his widow and a two-weeks-old son live in Trenton.

Said to be one of the most experienced pilots in the RCAF, Sqdn. Ldr. McDurg had enrolled with more than 3,000 hours' flying time. During the war he flew with the Mosquito Squadron. He returned five months ago from England, where he took a course at the Empire Flying School. He was qualified on 60 types of aircraft. His widow and an 11-year-old daughter are in Trenton.

Dionne Quints Prepare to Celebrate Their 15th Birthday on May 28th

Callander, Ont, May 18. (CP) —From the highway, the buff-colored brick mansion stood out against a background of rough countryside studded with birch and spruce trees.

But once the brown red front door was reached, the shrill voices of children could be heard from within. . . Someone was playing the piano, thumping on a piano. All this behind the locked doors, screening the front building.

"Yes, Annette is playing," said a pert, chipper Olivа Dionne as he led the way into his panelled study.

It could have been Yvonne, Emilie, Marie or Cecile, the Dionne quintuplets who will celebrate their 15th birthday, Saturday, May 28, all are musical. And all play the piano.

"They are good housekeepers too," said Mr. Dionne, chuckling a little and settling back in his chair. Behind him hung a photograph of the family.

Mr. Dionne spoke again. "Why, their mother was in Ottawa a week ago they did most of the housekeeping," he said.

Just like most fathers, this twinkling-eyed head of one of the best known families in the world, is proud of all his children.

"They all like to bake—and especially to make cakes" he added, laughing at a question. But when pressed as to which Quint is the best baker, he hastily grinned and indicated he doesn't know himself.

Between helping their mother and keeping up with their correspondence, the Quints are leading a busy life these days.

The Dionne triplets would balk at the prospect of getting up at 6.30 a.m. for school, preferring to attend Mass at seven and be in school by 8.30. But this is the daily routine for the five girls.

As far as birthday celebrations are concerned, they haven't even thought about any birthday cake or candles, so Mr. Dionne said.

Mr. Dionne only grinned and shrugged a non-committal shoulder when asked which lake they would visit. He wasn't telling the answer to that one. It was a mean crowds of autograph-seekers would come scurrying to the spot, and Mr. Dionne wants his daughters to have a holiday away from the public eye.

Fire in Bushland North of Norwood Out of Control

Norwood, May 18 (CP) — A bush fire which has been raging 10 miles north of here since Sunday, is out of control and threatening a hydro development and extensive timber areas, Norwood is 20 miles northeast of Peterborough.

Hundreds of 100 acres of bushland are burning despite the efforts of local fire crews and 50 volunteers to check the blaze. The lack of roads in the area prevents use of fire trucks and high pressure hoses. A nearby creek is the only water supply.

Parking Meters Of Little Help To Delivery man

Installation of parking meters in the business section of this city has done little to assist local deliverymen in their many and varied problems of getting merchandise into stores.

At least this is the complaint of the local retail merchants who in a resolution to Mon. Council have urged that something be done to provide parking facilities for delivery men and make deliveries.

The story is that in parking meter areas in the business section of the city, practically all parking spaces are taken up by motorists. When the deliveryman driving along looking for a parking spot to unload his merchandise, there are no spaces available.

The result is that truckers make two or three trips up and down the street and still finding no parking space, gives up the ghost to try again the next day. But the final outcome is that deliveries are not being made on time and merchants have raised a rightful squawk.

The point out that truckers are compelled to pay an annual fee to allow them to park in front of meters without putting in their nickel. But there are no parking places for the trucks, it is said.

So the merchants have asked council to designate a delivery parking area in each downtown business block, the areas to be staggered on each side of the street. Privately - owned autos would not be permitted to park in these areas, it was suggested.

Council turned the matter over to the traffic committee for consideration.

Lieut.-Gov., Albert Hinton, Pays Official Kiwanis Visit

Members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at Kiwanis Centre on Tuesday greeted Lieutenant Governor, Albert Hinton of Trenton, on his official visit, International Vice President William Colbourne of Toronto and Lieut.-Governor Arthur of the Kingston Club, and a large delegation from that club. A number of Shaw's Men's Wear shop was introduced by Bert Shaw as a member of the club.

Jack Pritchard, chairman of Inter-Club for the Kingston Club presented to Warren Jones, chairman of the same committee in the local club a travelling gavel. It is understood that the gavel will be taken to Ottawa on May 27th for an Inter - City meeting at which the International president Adelstein of Kiwanis will be the principal guest. Kingston also attended their intention of making the trip to the capital for this important meeting, a number of cars from the eastern district. Leo Hall, president of the club in the absence of Mon Hinton, spoke on the subject "What did I inherit when I became a Kiwanian" and he answered the question by stating that membership in a Kiwanis Club was way of acquiring knowledge.

All Helping Along

He showed the system under which Kiwanians worked and stated that 70,000 men were working as Governors, District Governors, Lieutenant - Governors, presidents, executive committees and committee chairman and were giving a helping hand. He mentioned the cinderella committee of a club who do a job for 52 weeks out of every year and yet receive little praise for their labors. Mr. Hinton stated that in 1923 a number of men gathered in Chicago and represented more money and time to the United States treasury yet these men did not get suicide, in prison or lived in destitution. "Not one of them was a Kiwanian. They had learned how to make money but had never learned how to live. Success makes failures of so many".

"In Kiwania," said the speaker, "members learn how to use their time usefully and one great principle they learn is that Christ represents in guidance. The real happiness is not of the body but of the mind." He stated that the older teen-ager was not the one that Kiwania clubs should go after but they should take to his younger brother and see that he did not make the same mistakes that had been made by the older one. In speaking of the coming election, Mr. Hilton stated it was the duty of every Kiwanian to exercise his franchise and help clear the world of this communistic tendency that is creeping bers would undertake a trip to Madoc on Friday night, when the Kingston Club makes an official visit to that northern club.

Member Introduced

Ray Grant introduced the new member and he was initiated by Jack Pritchard. Mr. Grant stated that the Kiwanis Club had emerged from the depression years and two Great Wars in better condition and stronger than before. He told Mr. Shaw he would get out of Kiwanis exactly what he put into it and hoped for him fine fellowship among a grand bunch of fellows. The attendance prize was donated by Bill Doyle Jr., and was won by Vic White. No it was not an electric washer. Charlie Cawker, in the absence of the regular pianist, Phil Huddleston, presided for the community singing which was led by Vic White.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Past Lieutenant Governor Fred Sarsgar and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Past President Mark Carew and Hon. Hinton is no stranger to the Belleville Club, for it was mentioned that the first Kiwanis Club he ever visited was this city. He took the members of the club to task for the poor meeting before the principal address and stated that it was unnecessary. He also congratulated the club on their activities of last year and knew that Notated Edwards and his officers would live up to the record set. Mr. Hinton spoke on the subject "What did I inherit when I became a Kiwanian" and he answered the question by stating that membership in a Kiwanis Club was way of acquiring knowledge.

Record House Greets "Pack Up Your Troubles"

The tuneful Kiwanis Club musical extravaganza "Pack Up Your Troubles" broke all attendance records at its second-night performances in the Collegiate Auditorium last night.

According to show officials, the "house was packed to the rafters" and the figures reveal the best attendance since the inauguration of the production 12 years ago.

What few performances "workers" to be ironed out after the first night, production were done so, and the cast, principals and chorus alike, performed as though it was near perfection.

Applaud Singers

Applause for individual stars singing Harold Carruthers, Arthur Duby, Sharon Kerr, Barbara Joan Houston, Alice Vandervoort, Mona Hartley, Terry Meagher and Gordon Shore, with the fine xylophone and dance performances of Miss Helen Grant and the Donovans respectively stood out with sterling performances.

The comedy outdid itself with Bill Bankier, Bud Cavanaugh, Gwen Bowen, Don Hagan, Eddie Waterhouse and Percy Marcus as the audiences in stitches with their hilarious skits and pantomomic backgrounding soloists, chorus and dancers.

The choral work was even better than in previous years in the opening presentation with of course, the fine orchestra under Jack Lennox standing out in its particular phase of the show.

Many audience comments were heard after the performance was over, to the effect a public had definitely placed its stamp of approval on Maestro Fred Hamilton's fourth effort in producing "Pack Up Your Troubles."

The show will be presented again tonight with the closing performance scheduled for tomorrow night.

It is swell musical entertainment, and those who have not seen the 1949 edition of the tuneful stage presentation, should not miss an evening's grand entertainment.

Fire Destroys Pleasant Bay Home, Contents

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Walsh at Pleasant Bay, Hillier township, one and one half miles south of Consecon village was destroyed by fire late Monday morning. Only three pieces of furniture were saved.

Wellington fire equipment was called to the scene and stood by to keep watch on the barn. Fortunately the wind was blowing from the opposite direction.

Mr. Walsh is a former chartered accountant from Toronto who moved to the country for health reasons. Credit was given to the Consecon telephone operator who did good work in calling volunteers.

ENTHRONEMENT OF METROPOLITAN

Enthronement of the Most Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of the diocese of Ontario and Archbishop of the ecclesiastical Province of Ontario, as Metropolitan recalls the years in which he served in Belleville in St. Thomas' parish and in which he became known to very many residents of this community and the district surrounding. His associations with the people everywhere whether as parish priest or bishop and now as archbishop have been such as to bring him very close to their thoughts and hearts. His labors in his calling in the local parish of St. Thomas were years of rich service benefiting the lives of great numbers of people. His rise in the counsels of the Church has been the matter of much happiness and satisfaction to those among whom he has labored tirelessly and patiently and who appreciate the fact that they were privileged to have come under his ecclesiastical care. The recognition which has been accorded his service by the church has been won by his devotion to the many high and responsible offices he has held in his communion.

It is a matter of deep interest for the people not only of his own communion but of other communions that his devoted service has received this evidence of the unanimity of feeling of the success of his ministry.

WINDMILLS AND ELECTRICITY

Scotland will investigate the feasibility of generation of electric power by windmill, a contract having been placed in the North of Scotland Hydro Electricity Board with John Brown and Company for the design and construction in the Orkneys of an experimental windmill to develop power. This will be the first of its kind in Britain. The diameter across the blades will be about 60 feet. The Board is in association with the Electrical Development Association, which at the request of the Government is studying the practicability of generating power on a large scale from the wind. Preliminary work was done in the Orkneys last year, recording wind speeds on the exposed northwest coast of the mainland and the design of the mill can now be put in hand.

Use of the forces of nature is more and more being exercised by man. With the development of electricity and the need for power it can readily be understood that every means possible will be taken to create power so much in demand in the world today.

While Scotland is looking to the possibility of the development of electric energy by means of one of the oldest instruments of mankind to help man do his work, modern science is working relentlessly on the possibilities of harnessing the power of the atom and use of mysterious forces of nature.

FRONTIER COLLEGE

Frontier College has been carrying on a work for half a century on behalf of the men of whom many are foreign born who spend their labor in the woods, industries and construction camps of Canada. Its record is a proud one.

69,000 workers have learned basic English from the Frontier College primer. Discussions of an impromptu nature have been held which have been heard by a quarter of a million workers in matters relating to the sciences, the history, and communications of Canada with the thought of citizenship foremost in their minds. Four million magazines have been provided and distributed for the use of these campmen. This is a phase of the work which continues to expand. 100,000 have at last enlightening character to help develop their gifts and expand their interests have been placed in the hands of these men, the books consisting of such interesting studies as biography, travel, history, fiction, poetry and standard works.

One of the features of the work of the College is the spirit which has been shown by young men, 2,500 of them who are graduates and undergraduates of colleges and universities with a fine home background, who have served as laborer-teachers in the isolated camps where they have been able to do a notable service to the newcomers. Proof of the manner in which the men have benefited through the training they have received. 15,000 letters and notes of appreciation are the proof of the advantages which have been placed in the hands of the men who owe so much to the College.

The present time offers a fine opportunity to carry on this noble work of building up the finest type of citizenship and of revealing our conceptions of freedom and justice and government.

BEST OF LANDS

Behind the curtain do they know	Behind the curtain have they learned
In countless gardens tulips grow,	That here life's comforts can be earned?
And here along the countryside	That toiling fathers can provide
In easy, they own, the workers ride	Is by some tyrant rule denied
On Sunday mornings through the city	That in their seasons, as they wish,
To look at orchards blossoming	Workers have time to hunt and fish?
Behind the curtain have they heard	Where else, in such a world of strife,
What here on Easter they observed?	Is there so free a way of life,
In every church and every pew	Where education is allowed
Where families in garments new	And none by fear or force is cowed;
And millions in their chosen place	Where every springtime tulips grow
Rejoiced on resurrection day?	In countless gardens, row by row?

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BEGINNING WITH AUDACITY

Winston Churchill tells of his beginning to paint, in his little book, "Amid These Storms." He tells of how he first got his equipment, and hardly knew just where to begin. Then a lady friend came up, the wife of the noted artist, Sargent, and how she took his boldest brush and dashed, with great confidence and color, the paint on the clean canvas. That gave Churchill his start in the world. "This beginning with audacity is a very great part of the art of painting."

Beginning with audacity is a very great art in the inception of anything! It's taking risks, starting off with confidence" even though you have no idea in the direction or destination. The boy who saw a sign "Boy Wanted," and who removed it and took it into the office, saying that he was ready to begin, had the audacity that nothing can defeat.

It is the inspiring audacity that made Gen. George S. Patton the great leader that he was. The unexpected always attracts attention. Alfred Harmsworth (later Lord Northcliffe) got to a position where his answer to "Answers," where he had to have additional assistants, to turn the tide. One morning London was aroused by lurid posters offering a goodly sum each week, for fill in the one guessing nearest to the balance in the Bank of England on a certain day. People had to sign three coupons from his publication in order to enter the contest. The result was a tremendous circulation and power right then and this was the foundation of the Northcliffe fortune. Audacity did the trick.

The best definition of audacity, I believe, is this — the will to win! That's what makes people demonstrate it. We see it all about us, pioneers a debt of gratitude for their assistance and courage, and the privations they endured that we might enjoy the fruits of their toil and faith. To daring and audacity we owe the democracy and free way of life which are ours in this Western continent.

People who strike out boldly with a good idea, and who begin with audacity, no matter what the task may be, usually take many others along with them.

Kremlin Shocked By Adverse Vote Against Policy

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The Kremlin must have been set rocking by the election in the Russian zone of Eastern Germany, where more than a third of the votes were cast against hand-picked Communist-approved candidates for the new "People's Congress".

The Red command had anticipated the usual favorable vote of virtually 100 per cent in such elections. This was to be a triumph for presentation at the forthcoming meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers' Council in Paris.

The "People's Congress" was to have been put forward by the Russians to represent all Germany.

What Now?

What line of strategy the Russians will pursue to meet the upset is a matter of keen speculation in western diplomatic circles.

This revolt of the German voters in the Soviet zone is in itself a momentous development, but it seems to me to fit into a picture of much broader significance. Last week I myself have analyzed the statement by Paul G. Hoffman, director of the economic co-operation administration, that "one way of life in the secure if Europe is strong and free in 1952."

That time of development could alter the European picture! Well, it would be time for the Communism to hold the peoples of the various countries which had been absorbed into the Soviet orbit. That is, if Communism is rejected by these peoples.

Now comes this rebuff to the Russians from Eastern Germany which was supposed to have been thoroughly communized.

Tito Balks

Then take a look at Yugoslavia. This Balkan State was supposed to be completely Communized. Its army was supposed to be completely communized of all the satellite states. But Moscow's order to attack cracked up on the rocks of Yugoslavia. Premier Tito and Marshal Tito and his followers rejected the Communist doctrine doggedly clung to nationalism. Yugoslavia remains Moscow's bete noir as the best of sovereignty.

In neighboring Bulgaria there seems to be a strong movement Communist. Bulgarian political leaders have been troubled.

Reds Revolt

There also have been many reports of dissatisfaction in other satellite states, including Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Numerous prominent citizens from satellite nations have been given refuge in western democracies.

All in all we have an interesting picture of anti-Kremlin discontent behind the iron curtain. I don't know what the Soviet will be developing conclusions, but it is interesting to speculate. It's not all honey and flowers in the Bolshevist empire.

Russ Patrols Said Molesting Fishermen

Stockholm, May 18 (Reuters) — The Governor of Sweden's Gotland Island in the Baltic, Sven Wannstedt, today complained that Russian coastal patrols were molesting fishermen in the Baltic. He reported to the Swedish Foreign Office that Russian patrols had come alongside Gotland fishing boats well outside Russian territorial waters, searched their nets, and made off with them.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

If you or I got into trouble with the police, with the game wardens and conservation officers in our favorite holiday district, what would we do? We would move to some fresh territory, I imagine.

Among the throngs of American tourists who annually Canada each year, it stands to reason there are a number of so-called refugees. They have been discredited in their own home states. Some are fugitives who go to Canada to enjoy themselves in the open country.

How to deal with these characters presents a curious problem. Canada's tourist policy—and the tourist policy of each province — is very much dominated by not only the popular, but the national, demand for the American dollar. If anybody attempts to raise any question as to our attitude towards the American tourist, he is instantly whisked and hustled-up by indignant elders who fear the extinction of the golden stream of confence.

Apart from the problem posed by these discredited characters mentioned, there is a broader problem. Outlaws, a national weekly, devoted its entire editorial page recently to a most detailed and interesting account of what the people of the United States have come to their own natural resources. It was a shocking story. What is it that American tourists come to Canada for? They come in further search of forests, and things they have consumed or destroyed in their own country. Similarly, their unspoiled nature, their clean waters, will be the lure for them. Regardless of the innocence, good faith, or ignorance, in which they act, the United States have consumed or destroyed 75 per cent of its natural resources the fact is they are consumed. Dollars consumed them there. And those same dollars have turned their wistful eyes. Our wilderness we are offering up, easily, almost feverishly, like peddlers. Such is our way of life. Any American dollar that we apparently do not welcome with open arms by those dollars are worth. Are they worth as much as we are giving for them?
